Northwest Michigan Works! graduates receive diploma and GEDs

EAST JORDAN — Three students from the Northwest Michigan Works! learning lab in East Jordan were part of the Traverse Bay Area Intermediate School District's Adult Education Class of 2015. Alicia Steinhoff, Boyne City, received her high school diploma, while Hunter Gauthier, Charlevoix, and Heather Snowden, Central Lake both earned GEDs. The diploma and GEDs were presented at an Adult Education graduation ceremony June 11, in Traverse City.

Steinhoff has been studying at the East Jordan Learning Lab off and on for 15 years and is the first person in her family to earn a high school diploma. Gauthier enrolled at the Lab last summer and used a distance learning option along with additional study on site. Snowden has been working at the learning lab since last September and received an honors distinction on her social studies

Along with a diploma and GEDs, all three of the East Jordan Learning Lab students were also inducted into the National Adult Education Honor Society. They were joined in the Honor Society by learning lab students Brandalynn McPherson and Bill Thompson, each from East Jordan. Thompson's daughter was inducted this year into the East Jordan High School chapter of the National Honor Society.

Northwest Michigan Works! learning labs provide individualized instruction to adults who wish to complete their high school education through a GED or high school diploma, prepare for college, or improve their reading, writing, math and keyboarding skills. Labs are located in Benzonia, Cadillac, Kalkaska, East Jordan, Manistee, Petoskey and Traverse City.

Veterans Administration reaches out to help homeless veterans in Traverse City

TRAVERSE CITY — The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs announced a Veterans Stand Down gathering from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Friday, July 17, at VFW Post 2780, 3400 Veterans Drive, in Traverse City. This event is to help homeless veterans or veterans living in less than safe or operable houses.

There will be several community agencies, including the Veteran's Administration, to assist with a variety of needs for the veterans and they will also have the opportunity to learn about VA care and benefits. There will be camping gear and cold weather items available, haircuts and massages, raffle prizes and lunch provided by the Northwest Community Action Agency.

Public Affairs Officer Carrie Seward announces that the Aleda E. Lutz Veteran's Association Medical Center in Saginaw operates an 81-bed skilled nursing and rehabilitation community living center, with an additional eight-bed acute medicine and telemetry wing. It provides care to more than 33,700 veterans in a 35 county geographic area, from mid-Michigan to the Mackinac Bridge.

Veterans also receive care at one of nine VA community-based outpatient clinics located throughout Michigan. More information about this VA can be found at saginaw.va.gov.

Charlevoix Area Hospital receives 2015 Ludwig Community Benefit Award

LANSING — Charlevoix Area Hospital is one of the winners of the Michigan Health and Hospital Association Ludwig Community Benefit Award. The award is named in memory of Patricia E. Ludwig, a former MHA president who championed investing in the community's overall health, and is presented to member organizations integrally involved in collaborative programs to improve the health and well-being of area residents. Each winner will receive $3,000 from the MHA Health Foundation to assist in its health improvement efforts.

Charlevoix Area Hospital and the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation are working to move Michigan from its ranking as last in the nation for the ratio of school nurses to students. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends a ratio of one school nurse to every 750 students; Michigan's ratio is one nurse to 6,607 students.

In 2011, the hospital and foundation recognized the need and gave Kathy Jacobsen, director of community health education, the task of coming up with a plan. Partnering with the willing school administrators, Kathy recommended that four full-time registered nurses be placed into nine area schools. Thus the Charlevoix Area Hospital School Nurse Program was born — at no cost to the schools.

Working closely with area superintendents, principals, the Health Department of NW Michigan, area dentists and many others, the Charlevoix Area Hospital School Nurse Program provides previously unavailable access to care to 4,000 students annually. One unexpected result is the decrease in chronic absenteeism — defined as those absent at least 10 percent of the school year — by 6 percent in the first three years.

Sue Coen, RN, provides coverage for Ellsworth, Central Lake and Bellaire schools. Chris Signs-Warstler, RN, has responsibility for Boyne Falls, Boyne Concord, Northwest Academy and St. Mary's Schools. Patti Howes, RN, covers the East Jordan schools and Kristie Robarge, RN, has responsibility for Charlevoix schools. These nurses have become far more involved with the schools than what a typical school nurse job description requires. From writing grants for healthy school lunch programs and building hoop houses to planning color fun runs, these nurses have become well-loved, successful advocates for healthy change among their students. All of these extra projects are helping to create a setting where our local children can both learn and flourish.

"This program has been so rewarding," states Kathy Jacobsen, who continues to supervise the program. "The nurses deserve all the credit.

Their hard work in the school setting with some of the most medically fragile students has proved that innovative and dedicated nurses make a lasting difference every day."

This is not the first award the very successful program has won. In 2013-14, it was named a "Program of Promise" by the Hospital Charitable Services Awards, a national program sponsored by Jackson Healthcare, recognizing hospitals whose commitment to their community has led to innovative efforts to improve community health and increase access to health-care education and services.

For more information, call Cathy Fischl at (231) 547-4024. Other programs honored by the Michigan Health and Hospital Association were Aspirus Grand View, of Ironwood; Community Health Center of Branch County, of Coldwater; and Spectrum Health Zeeland Community Hospital.

Randy Kaplan will perform at the Charlevoix Farmers Market on Thursday, July 9.

Randy Kaplan to perform during Farmers Market on July 9

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library welcomes Randy Kaplan to East Park at 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, July 9. Shop at the Farmer's Market and enjoy some tunes from the performer who inspired NPR, The Nashville Blues Society and People magazine to name him one of the nation's top family entertainers because of his blend of American roots music and comedic storytelling.

"Randy Kaplan is one of those happy-they-exist people you can't quite tell is playing kids' music. And yet he is," according to New York magazine.

Kaplan has performed in Charlevoix several times over the years. Youth Services Supervisor Audrey Shapiro tells us that "Randy is very witty and is exciting for children and adults. His energy is so much fun. He just makes you want to stand up and dance."

Kaplan studied philosophy, writing, and literature at The University of Michigan in Ann Arbor as well as at UCLA. He then trained in acting, improvisation, and writing. Randy has toured throughout the U.S., released a thirteen CDs, had his poetry published by periodicals and journals such as Ugly Duckling Presse and The Missing Slate, received several ASCAP awards, and wrote and starred in a musical that was workshopped in Colorado and later presented in full at the Boulder International Fringe Festival.

Kaplan started writing songs for kids and their families when he worked at the preschool Beansprouts in Park Slope, Brooklyn. After his first family CD, "Five Cent Piece," was released, Parenting magazine called Randy "one of the most exciting newcomers to kids' music since Dan Zanes." His hometown magazine, The Brooklyn Paper, called him, "a national treasure who brings a sly wink to the art of kid's music."

registered nurse and Pat is a retired Ford car dealer. They have three children, Patrick (Amy) McKenwn, Kerry (Pete) Zahnner and Rory McKeown; and 12 grandchildren.

OBITUARIES

Clayton Arthur Smith, Nov. 7, 1915-June 28, 2015.

At 98, Clayton could still tell you where the biggest trout are caught and where the best beaver he ever trapped was caught. Clayton went home to be with the Lord at 99 years of age.

Born in the Barnard section of Charlevoix to Clyde and Vera Vance Smith, he came into the world in a country house and he will be buried at Barnard Cemetery not more than a 1/4 mile from where he was born.

Clayton was a self-made businessman, learning early that he could make a lot more selling fruit than picking it. He continued this tradition and supplied the Upper Peninsula with fruit that would not be available to folks unless he brought it up across the Straits. He would tell stories about how he would have a load of fruit, and he could go to the front of the line to get on the ferry (pre-Big Mac Bridge) and get his load across to be sold. Clayton was in the Civilian Conservation Corps and then joined the Merchant Marines to help support the war effort. He came home to Charlevoix to meet Kathryn Besemer and married her at Barnard Methodist Church. They were married 61 years before Kay died in December 2011.

They had four children, Debby (Terry) Wright of Grand Blanc, Mich., Randy and Elizabeth Smith of Kentwood, Mich., Linda (David) Scovel of Higginum, Conn., and Gail (Richard) King of Port Penn, Del.; nine grandchildren, Daniel and Rachel Wright, Josiah, Cody and Samuel Scovel, and Kathryn, Olivia, Patience and Emma Smith; and one great-grandchild, Lily Rae Forberg. Clayton is also survived by his sister, Marjorie Warner of Charlevoix.

Clayton became an author at 75 years old, writing down his stories because he realized his grandchildren might not get to hear them all. He had to write two books of his stories to get them all in.

He liked writing down his story so much that he thought he should write down other Charlevoix patriarchs' stories. Nephew Mick Smith and Clay would go find the old-timers and get them talking, and record the stories on tape, and another book was born. His books are in the Charlevoix Library. When he was not on his Ford tractor, plowing up the garden, he would be carving an animal from a piece of oak or walnut board.

Kay used to say, "He just can't leave a piece of wood alone!"

Clayton's life will be honored at the Barnard Methodist Church where he first heard the stories of his Lord and Savior, whom he loved. His favorite hymn was "I come to the garden alone" and that is where he did most of his talking to the Lord.

This poem was written by daughter Gail a few years ago and sums up Clayton.

That's My Dad
A trapper by trade;
A deal always made.
An apple to sell;
A story to tell.
A Christmas tree to shake;
Just as mom started to bake.
Pumpkins to count;
And the dollars do amount.
Wood to saw, carve and whittle;
And you know it's never little.
From dawn to dusk you can hear Clayt say,
"Just not enough hours in the day."

Funeral for Clayton will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday, July 7, at the Barnard United Methodist Church in Charlevoix where visitation will begin at 11 a.m. Burial will follow at the Barnard Cemetery. The Revs. Greg Culver and Craig Pahl will officiate.

Please sign Clayton's guestbook at www.winchesterfuneralhome.com.

Col. Thomas Michael Hamlin, 82

Col. Thomas Michael Hamlin, 82, of Lake Bluff, Ill., formerly of Charlevoix, passed away Jan. 13, 2015.

A graveside service will be at 11 a.m., Monday, July 6, at St. Mary Cemetery in Charlevoix. The Rev. Matthew Wigton will officiate. Military honors will be presented by the Charlevoix Area Veterans.

The Winchester Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

Michael Edward Thorp, 65, of East Jordan passed away on Friday, June 19, 2015, at Grandvue Medical Care Facility in East Jordan.

A memorial service in the first week of August will be announced at a later date. The family was served by the Penzien Funeral Homes, Inc. in East Jordan.

Aaron Lew Brock, 66

Aaron Lew Brock, 66, a lifelong Charlevoix resident, went to be with his Lord and Savior on June 28, 2015, after fighting a brief but brave battle with cancer.

He was a gentle giant and loving family man. He is survived by his wife of 18 years, Kim (Ransom) Brock; daughters, Kayla Brock and Trista (Edward) Schwager; stepdaughters, Monica VandenBosch, Christina VandenBosch and Maranda VandenBosch; brothers, Pete (Cindy) Brock, Ralph (Mary) Brock; grandchildren, Zaylyn, Kaylee, Brandy, Madalene, Aysia, Lauren, Tyler, Angelina, Sydne, Aaron, Andrew, Asa; two great-grandchildren; and many, many other family and friends who were very dear to his heart.

He was born to Aaron and Lulla Brock on Feb. 2, 1949, who preceded him in death, along with a sister, Dagmar (Brock) Muma; niece, Cheryl (Muma) Ostergren; and grandson, Isaac Hoffmann.

In Aaron's early years he helped on his family's dairy farm, served in the U.S. Navy and went to college to become a diesel mechanic. He made his career as a semi driver. Following his dream of becoming an owner-operator, he started Brock's Express in 2010. He loved spending time with his family, friends, children and grandchildren. He enjoyed traveling, sports, NASCAR, camping, golfing and singing.

He believed in God and was baptized into Jesus Christ in 2000. He was active in both Excelsior and Kalkaska Church of Christ.

Friends and family may call from 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, July 1, at Winchester Funeral Home.

The funeral will be at 1 p.m. Thursday, July 2, at Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix with Jeff Badger of Kalkaska Church of Christ officiating.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Wilderness Christian Camp or to help fund missionary work in Haiti. Send in care of Kalkaska Church of Christ, 1725 W. Kalkaska Road, Kalkaska, MI 49646.

Kathryn Marie Loeb, 96

Kathryn Marie Loeb, 96, of Longboat Key, Fla., died Monday, Feb. 16, 2015.

She was a longtime summer resident of Charlevoix. Kathryn had two daughters, Jeanne and Jane (deceased). She married Thomas Loeb in 1976 and he adopted her two daughters.

She is survived by daughter, Jeanne (Michael) Rudman; three stepsons, John, Tom and Tim Loeb; grandchildren, Kathryn Graham, Gary (Kristina) Gray, Lisa Wagner (Tom) Daegling, Wendy (Drew) Selman; 13 great-grandchildren, Jackson and Sun Graham, Jessica and Eric Wagner, Dan (Ashley), Rachel and Jennifer Daegling, Shaye Smith, Brady, Alexandra and Zackary Thomas Gray, Jamie and Lindsay Selman; beloved niece, Patsy Huth; and longtime friend and caregiver, Frederick Chinwuba.

She was devoted to her family and friends. She had many passions including art, music, fashion, theater and dance. She was an expert with crossword puzzles and identifying and arranging flowers.

She will be greatly missed.

Memorial Service at 2 p.m. Friday, July 10, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix followed by private burial. The Rev. Neil Wilson of the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix will officiate.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Charlevoix Area Hospital, 14700 Lake Shore Drive, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Barbara Louise Varnum-Schwartzfisher, 55, of Beaver Island, passed away Saturday, June 27, 2015, at her home on Beaver Island.

She was born Oct. 24, 1959, in Manistique, the daughter of Charles and P. Sharon (McNally) Varnum and attended Manistique area schools. She was a graduate of Manistique High School with the Class of 1977. She continued her education at Lake Superior State University where she received her bachelor's degree in history and political science. She also worked on her master's degree at East Stroudsburg University in Pennsylvania.

Under the watchful eye of her late father, state Rep. Charles H. Varnum, Barb grew up learning how to work with people and solve complex problems, and as a result of her father's early mentoring, Barb was recognized as a people person and a problem solver throughout her work life.

Her first job was on behalf of the State of Michigan Job Training Partnership Act of 1982 where she taught clients how to find and secure employment. She later accepted a position with Congressman Robert Davis, where she successfully ran the congressman's last two political campaigns. In that position, she distinguished herself as a caseworker and political consultant.

Following the congressman's retirement, Barb became the director of the Emmet County Senior Center and was an integral part of the team that built the new senior center in Petoskey.

Barbara then accepted a position as the executive director for the Beaver Island Transportation Authority and held that position for many years until she recently accepted the position of director of the Thunder Bay Transportation Authority in Alpena.

While living on Beaver Island, Barb served as president of the Beaver Island School Board and worked hard to pass a millage for a new school. She oversaw the construction of the new Beaver Island School and was proud of the fact that Beaver Island was the only school system in the state of Michigan to pass a millage that year.

Wherever Barb worked, she added value and established herself as a patient leader/problem solver who could remove roadblocks in her path to getting the job done.

Barb loved to spend time as a mentor to family and friends. She thoroughly enjoyed spending time with her husband, David, especially in warmer cli-

Barbara is survived by her husband of 23 years, David Schwartzfisher of Beaver Island; daughters, Olivia Schwartzfisher of Holland, Mich., and Sharon Schwartzfisher of Beaver Island; son, David Schwartzfisher of Petoskey; mother, Sherry Varnum of Manistique; brother, Mitchell Charles Varnum of Escanaba, Mich.; uncle, Fred McNally of Escanaba; along with her cousins, Sally McNally, Don McNally and Winnie Butrum.

She was preceded in death by her father, Charles H. Varnum; her maternal grandparents, Don and Louise McNally; and her paternal grandparents, Henry and Mae Varnum.

The memorial service will be at 11:30 a.m., Tuesday, July 7, at Beaver Island Community School. A luncheon will follow the service at Holy Cross Hall.

Burial will be in the Fairview Cemetery at Manistique.

Memorial donations may be directed to the 21st Century Learning Foundation at Beaver Island Community School.

Barbara, you were much loved and will be sorely missed. Your dad, Charles, would be proud.

Online condolences may be expressed at www.mbfuneral.com.

Richard John Wynkoop, 78, of Charlevoix passed away Friday, June 26, 2015, at his home.

He was born March 29, 1937, in Shelvin, Minn., to Chellas and Helen (Bauman) Wynkoop. In 1950, Dick moved to Port Huron and in 1954 was welterweight champion of the Blue Water Golden Gloves. On April 7, 1955, he married Sally D. Minor in Port Huron.

Dick was the general foreman for Prestolite in Port Huron for 27 years. In 1985, he and Sally moved to Charlevoix where he and his brother owned and operated Wynkoop's Auto Body.

He loved to hunt and fish. On his last day he went fishing and caught seven fish.

Sally preceded Dick in death on Jan. 28, 2015.

He is survived by his children, Ricky L. Wynkoop, Vicki Lynn (Ronnie) McWatters, all of Charlevoix, Jeffrey Scott (Cheryl) Wynkoop of Kewadin and Andrew John Wynkoop of Charlevoix; 15 grandchildren; 18 great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandchild; brother, Victor (Karen) Wynkoop of West Branch; and sister, Rosalie Graham of Port Huron.

Dick was also preceded in death by his son, Wayne; grandson, Jeremy Moses; brother, Cecil; son-in-law, Terry Mnses; and his parents.

A memorial service will be at 11 a.m., Monday, July 6, at the First Baptist Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. David Behling will officiate. Interment will take place in the Norwood Cemetery.

Please sign Richard's guestbook at www.winchesterfuneralhome.com.

Charlevoix summers offer much for everyone

The summer is off to a busy start!

Our community welcomed locals and visitors alike last weekend, hosting several events including the Charlevoix Marathon, weddings, family reunions and our 17th Annual Summer Art Show. If you happened to miss one of these great events, there is still a lot to enjoy in Charlevoix this summer. For the most up-to-date event listing please visit charlevoix.org and choose the events calendar tab or feel free to stop by our office and pick up a copy of our community calendar.

CHAMBER UPDATE

Alison Hubbard

In just two weeks we will be back in East Park for our 47th Annual Art & Craft Show ■ gathering 150 artists and craftsmen from around the country. This popular event will take place on Saturday, July 11, and Sunday, July 12. The show has something for everyone, offering an exciting mix of fine arts and hobby crafts. Acrylic and oil paintings, sculpture, hand blown glass beadwork, pottery, baskets, furniture, clothing, hand woven rugs and quilted works are just a few of the things you will find. It is a spectacular representation of craftsmanship and artwork with many fun and, unique products to choose from.

Great news on the Advocacy Front. The governor passed the budget last week and as a Northern Michigan Chamber Alliance member, we are pleased to claim so many "wins" in our advocacy. The budget included restoring the funding for small and rural hospitals, an increase in Pure Michigan funding and stopping an increase in liquor license fees for bars and restaurants.

Our roads and their condition continue to be an important issue that the Alliance is watching carefully. A new road plan has just moved from the House to the Senate and the Alliance is anxious to see how the Senate receives this new plan.

The Chamber continues to be involved in the Main Street partnership. My staff and I are representatives on several of the Main Street Committees and we are looking forward to how this program will attract new residents, spark new business investment, provide economic growth and create new jobs. Please join us and get involved. You can learn more about each committee by visiting towncharlevoix.org or by contacting Annie Doyle, DDA/Main Street director, (231) 547-3257.

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce is a non-profit organization with over 440 business and individual members, and growing strong. Our mission is to support commerce and provide leadership to enhance the quality of life.

Partnership grant serves emergency medical services

EAST JORDAN — Through a $4,867 grant from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, the Jordan Valley Emergency Medical Services Authority has another tool to help patients in need in Charlevoix and Antrim Counties.

The grant, supported by generous contributions throughout the community, was also made possible through a 10 percent match by the East Jordan Ambulance Association and enabled the purchase of six EZ-10 units, drill drivers which allow trained providers to give fluid and medication through a patient's bone exactly as they would an IV in the event that they cannot obtain access normally.

"We are so appreciative of the kindness of organizations like these which help our community and allow these people to do their jobs," said EMS Authority Board President Thomas Mann.

The EZ-10 units will be deployed soon in all four ambulances, as well as the two paramedic rapid response units — Echo cars.

"This equipment will benefit residents of all ages, especially pediatric patients," said EMS Director and Paramedic Jay Peck. "The result of this is quicker and safer vascular access, and as a result, better overall patient care."

The EZ-10 provides unique benefits such as fluid resuscitation at up to five liters per hour, three second access to the heart with medication and fluids, lower pain on insertion and infusion, less medication required for pain management and no reported compartment syndrome due to IO access placement.

OBITUARY

James (Jimmy) Leo Stoneham-Reiter, 30

James (Jimmy) Leo Stoneham-Reiter, 30, died unexpectedly Friday, June 5, 2015, in Hollywood, Calif.

Jimmy was born in Dallas, Texas, on Aug. 1, 1984, to Marlo (Heise) Reiter and James (Duke) Leo Stoneham Jr.

Jimmy grew up in Charlevoix and attended Charlevoix Public Schools. He loved music and dancing, hanging out with friends, the beach and the public library. He was a computer geek, and he was permanently attached to his cellphone.

Jimmy was loving, kind, and a free-roaming spirit. He traveled extensively, making friends and memories along the way. Jimmy would always return home to his loving family for awhile then his traveling spirit would call him on another adventure.

Jimmy was a generation of Legos, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and the transition of rock music to grunge. Life wasn't always easy for Jimmy, yet he met life's challenges with style and grace, and always did what he could for others.

The legacy he leaves behind for his nephews and nieces and all those that loved him is: To love and accept others unconditionally for who they are and what they believe, stand in judgment of no one, for we can all be accepted into the loving arms of Jesus.

Beloved son, grandson, brother, uncle and friend, he will be missed forever.

Jimmy is survived by his loving mother, Marlo Stoneham; beloved grandmother, Madlyn Heise; brother, Robert (Tiffany) Reiter, Jadin, Ronin, Lachline, Odin; and sister, Valerie (Gerald) Marquardt Jr., Kimberly, Forest.

Jimmy was preceded in death by his grandfather, Robert C. Heise, and beloved father, James (Duke) Leo Stoneham Jr.

The funeral will take place at 3 p.m. Monday, July 6, at Brookside Cemetery with a reception to follow in the large gazebo at Ferry Beach in Charlevoix.

Cremation has taken place and he will be buried next to his father.

Memorial contributions can be made to the family in care of Marlo Stoneham, Robert Reiter and Valerie Marquardt.

Baroque on Beaver backed by two new sponsors

BEAVER ISLAND — The Baroque on Beaver Festival of Classical Music has announced two new sponsors for this year's program. Midwest wholesale food distributor and grocery retailer SpartanNash and Napa Valley's Willam Hill Estate Winery have added their support as sponsors of the 2015 Baroque on Beaver Music Festival.

"For 10 days Beaver Island will be humming with lovers of classical music and jazz and this would not be possible without the support of our sponsors and community and public sector funds," said Anne Glendon, Chair of the Beaver Island Cultural Arts Association.

SpartanNash has aligned their sponsorship to the classical programming of the Festival, which features a range of performances from Michigan musicians. SpartanNash is the underwriter of the Festival's Saturday, Aug. 1 program of "Music: A Matter of Life and Death," which features the Festival Chorus and Orchestra.

"SpartanNash is strongly committed to the people and communities we reach and believe that engaging with arts will help build a sustainable society," said Terry Blanding, community relations coordinator at SpartanNash. "Facilitating access to the arts is a key dimension of SpartanNash's community engagement strategy and we are delighted to form this partnership with the Baroque on Beaver Festival. The Festival is a major highlight of the Northern Michigan's arts calendar and we look forward to seeing 'Pure Michigan' talent showcased during the program."

Music is the passion of another new Baroque on Beaver sponsor, Willam Hill Estate Winery. Willam Hill is a sponsor of The VH1 Save the Music Foundation, an organization that supports and raises awareness for music education in America. Interest in music education has been the personal passion for Willam Hill's winemaker, Raffi Holdenreid.

Willam Hill Estate Winery is the beverage sponsor at the festival's benefit programs, scheduled for July 24-25, that feature the jazz trio of Pete Siers (drums), Paul Ketter (bass) and Terry Lower (piano).

Tickets for the two benefit jazz performances are now on sale with further booking information available through the Beaver Island Community Center at (231) 448-2022.

The Baroque on Beaver Festival is the signature event of the Beaver Island Cultural Arts Association. The 2015 Festival dates are July 24-Aug. 2. The contributions of corporations, foundations, and hundreds of individual donors help keep the music playing.

For more information about Baroque on Beaver, visit baroqueonbeaver.org, call (888) 511-5189 or email info@BaroqueOnBeaver.org.

Tap Room addresses patrons drinking beer in park

Owners make changes to procedures to prevent further alcohol incidences

Lonnie Allen (231) 547-6658 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Warm weather and beautiful views of Round Lake in downtown Charlevoix makes outdoor dining a great idea, but what happens when patrons take their alcoholic beverage outside designated dining areas?

Since the annual beer festival in early June, local residents have noticed more people in Bridge Park drinking beer that appears to have come from the Bridge Street Tap Room, which is located next to the park.

"I always wondered how they keep track of people coming and going from there," said Jo Anne Beemon, of Charlevoix. "Drinking in a city park is a concern of mine."

Beemon is worried that her grandchildren and her, who like to enjoy the park on weekends, will have to deal with inebriated people.

"I don't want my grandchildren to be exposed to people drinking in the park," Beemon said. "I also don't like it because I have been in recovery for 36 years, and when people are in the park with alcohol it imposes on my safe place."

Beemon would like to not see drinking at all near the park.

"I don't want to be confronted with it," Beemon said. "I can remove myself from places where that type of stuff goes on, but why should I remove myself from a public park?"

A city resident took this photo of a customer drinking a beer on June 27, in Bridge Park that was purchased at the Bridge Street Tap Room.

Jason Moon, Director of Communications for Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs said it's the business' responsibility to keep patrons from taking alcohol off premises. This type of violation can result in fines, suspensions and ultimately the business losing the licenses to sell and serve alcohol.

"If a complaint is made or we are made aware of a violation like this happening we would contact local authorities and begin an investigation," Moon said.

Charlevoix Chief of Police Gerard Doan also confirmed the ultimate responsibility, to prevent this from happening, is on the business that sells the alcohol. But Doan also said the city will be more proactive in watching the park.

"This is the first we've been made aware of it,"

Doan said. "The city does not permit alcohol to be consumed outside of designated dining areas."

Co-owners Rich Bergmann and Aaron Hagen are aware of the problem and said they are taking steps to prevent further incidents.

"We have training in place on how to address guest and what to watch out for," Hagen said. "We have 14 cameras in place and that is also one of the ways we can keep an eye out."

Photos taken by Courier staff, and by a city resident, were able to help Tap Room management see where changes would help them be more effective in controlling customers trying to leave the bar with alcohol.

"What happened was not right," Bergmann said. "It was not right for us, not right for our community and not right by the individuals who conducted that behavior."

Hagen and Bergmann confirm the past weekend was one of their busiest of the year, so far, but that still did not excuse the fault of staff not being alert to what happened.

"We're taking full responsibility," Bergmann said. "We take this very seriously. Our staff has been made aware of what happened. We've got to be responsive and proactive in our procedures."

The Tap Room has increased signage to make guests more aware about not removing alcohol from the premises. The business also made changes to where the greeter stand is located and will increase staffing during busy festival weekends.

"In our security video we could see that each person left with the alcohol when the host was seating customers," Hagen said. "Now our host is in a fixed position in front of the restaurant. This is a logistical change we made and we feel it will make us more effective against these incidents."

place the sign at the top of the stairwell, Bergmann said.

"It was a safety concern at the county level," Bergmann said.

Spencer also will work with Bergmann to remove the other sandwich board sign from the middle stairwell to a different location.

"We are working with the city each day to be compliant with city code," Bergmann said. "My team cares about Charlevoix."

The Bridge Street Tap Room and the Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company are not the only businesses that have violated the sign ordinance, Spencer said. "There have been three other businesses downtown that have had two or three portable signs out when only one is allowed," Spencer said. "We either gave them letters or spoke to them in person about the matter."

There also have been multiple businesses that put their sandwich board signs out in the middle of the sidewalk or in some cases down on Bridge Street when their location is off Bridge Street, he added. "Outside of the downtown there have been around seven other violations that my office has taken corrective action on outside of the downtown," Spencer said.

No citations were issued in any of these code violations, Spencer said.

pottery made by Debbie Raupp, of Don't D'Raupp the Pottery, of Manistee. "We love coming to Charlevoix and this art show is a reason to make a trip here. I love looking at all the different kinds of displays the vendors have put up."

Raupp said she was enjoying success in her 10th trip to the art show.

"I like Charlevoix," she said. "Everyone's in a good mood. They're on vacation and it's a beautiful area for a show."

Jewelry, pottery, photography, paintings and much more was on display for people to browse or buy.

Lots of people sat on benches on the sidewalks watching people go by, while others were enjoying the different amenities in East Park.

"We just finished walking around the art show," said Jennifer Rowe, of Charlevoix, as her kids cooled off in the splash pad. "We're just enjoying the downtown. It's a beautiful day to be out with family."

Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce event planner Shelly Ferguson was all smiles as she observed the steady throng of people wandering through the booths.

"We have 75 different artists who are thrilled to be here and love how friendly everybody is," Ferguson said.

Ferguson noted that the great weather was bringing out a lot of people.

"We couldn't have asked for a better weekend and we are seeing a good crowd, which we hope will be good for our downtown businesses," Ferguson said.

Kirby Dipert said he was having a very good day with all the people coming and going from his store on Saturday.

"It's a good day for us," Dipert said. "We won't know how well we did until after the weekend wraps up."

Inside the Cherry Republic staff were busy keeping the shelves stocked and helping the many customers who were entering the downtown store.

"It's been an awesome day so far," said manager Lori Hart. "We've sold many baked goods. These downtown events are a real boost."

with Inland Seas Education Association staff members to measure and observe water clarity.

Maynard explained to the participants on the trip about how they test water clarity depth by using a Secchi disk. The deeper the disk goes before it cannot be seen by human is a sign of less plankton.

"Clear water is good for tourism, but bad for the ecosystem," Maynard said. "The zebra and quagga mussel contribute clearer lake water."

Quagga mussels are contributing to the dramatic decline of the shrimp-like amphipod known as Diporeia, a key food source for a number of native Great Lakes fish at various points in the food web; and they are contributing to the re-emergence of blooms — the toxic alga known as Microcystis — around the lakes.

Fish populations also were researched by talking about invasive fish species that change native species populations.

"I was horrified by the pie chart of the Gobie invasion in the lakes and how little of our native fish species are in the lake," said Nancy Van Roekel, Lake Charlevoix Association ambassador. "You just don't hear people talking about it."

Participants also learned about greenbelts, which are defined as existing or planted areas of trees, shrubs and other natural vegetation along most of the width of the lot and extending inland from the lakeshore.

"They are long-term ways to capture and filter water runoff before it gets into the lake with nutrients that can cause excessive algae and plant growth," said Jennifer Gelb, restora-

Annual Invitational Arts Exhibition opened at the Jordan River Art Center

EAST JORDAN — The opening of the 25th Annual Invitational Arts Exhibition at the Jordan River Art Center took place on Sunday, June 21. The gallery was filled with 50 area artists with works in all media that created experiences for all those in attendance.

Featured artist of the exhibit is Karen Walker of East Jordan, a nationally known photographer.

Several portraits created by Walker have been accepted in the 2014 International Photographic Exhibition. On exhibit are several of her black and white photographs, as well as a hand tinted photograph of flowers.

Another display of interest is the jacket with pencil skirt and a scarf, all made by the hands of Julie Hurd. Hurd received the second place award for this ensemble, "Twill Two Step," which features twills woven in various patterns and colors. The scarf is of crimp cloth, woven in a Shibori technique. Hurd also received the Viewers' Choice award for a jacket make in this technique.

These items are among the displays of original art work. Art patrons will be able to visit this exhibit through July 17, open Tuesday through Sunday from 1-4 p.m.

Other times can be arranged by contacting the curator, Howard Ellis at (231) 536-2152 or call the center at (231) 536-3385.

Search for the Superfan is underway

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 · jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

Every community has at least one. The fan who seems to be at every high school sporting event, cheering on their team, regardless of sport. The diehard who hasn't missed a game in years regardless of whether or not they have a family member or relative on the team. The loud, proud, positive force in every team's cheering section who helps make their fanbase stand out in its own unique way. The sportswriters of the Petoskey News-Review, Gaylord Herald Times and Charlevoix Courier want to honor the special fans that make the Northern Michigan preps scene so special, and we're looking for your help to do so. Starting today, we're asking all readers in Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties to visit petoskeynews.com/superfan and nominate the fan in your community who best represents the passion, loyalty, creativity and positive impact on the school and teams they follow that truly defines a "superfan". Nominations will run until July 15, and we'll use your recommendations to put together a short list of our favorite candidates for the honor of Northern Michigan's biggest superfan, and then turn the vote over to you, the readers, on August 7 to decide who the one winner will be. The victor will get a profile story in all three papers on August 21 and the honor of being known as the area's true superfan. But in order to win, they first have to be nominated, and that's where you come in. Nominations can be submitted online at the above-mentioned link, petoskeynews.com/superfan. We're looking for a name, a way to get in contact with the nominee, and a short essay of 200 words or less making the case for why that person is the area's biggest superfan. Your nominations matter, and we're looking forward to reading through them and learning more about the best fans the area has to offer. If you have any additional questions about the contest or are having problems submitting nominations, contact us at sports@petoskeynews.com and let us know.

CHARLEVOIX — There are few things harder than joining the select fraternity of Major League Baseball players. Only 1,200 spots are available at a given time for a pool of millions of players chasing the dream of playing in the big leagues. For those hoping to beat the odds and make their dreams come true, then, there's no better resource than players who've actually completed the journey. That's what Sunday's third annual MLB Players Alumni Clinic at Shanahan Field in Charlevoix offered, as six former Major Leaguers and four current members of the Traverse City Beach Bums ran a free camp for more than 120 Northern Michigan kids between the ages of 6 and 17, passing on fundamental skills in every aspect of the game, and, possibly inspiring a future MLB star's own dream. The clinic is one of hundreds across the country put on by MLB alumni across the country, and gives former players a chance to pass on what they know, said event host Dennis Rasmussen, who CHARLEVOIX — Marathon running can be both rewarding and grueling at the same time. So when it comes to taking the focus off of the distance, there's no better place than the scenic beauty of Charlevoix. On Saturday, the ninth annual Charlevoix Marathon took place, where 1,800 runners took part in the eight different races the event features, outside of the 26.2 mile main event marathon. The race also featured a 5K run/walk, 10K run/walk, 13.1 mile half marathon, half marathon walk, marathon walk, a fireman's 5K run and a half marathon and marathon for disabled runners. Earning the overall win in the marathon was Niko Jeftich of Valparaiso, Ind., who finished the race in 2 hours, 33 minutes and 18.7 seconds. The highest placing female came from Alana Garcia of Spring Lake, finishing in 3:10:39.3. Finishing second and third in the marathon, Carson Truesdell of Grand Blanc finished in 2:34:46.2, while Nicholas Budzyn placed third in 2:34:53.5. In the half marathon,

Nicholas Stank of Ann Arbor pulled in the overall win, finishing in 1:09:20.9, while Samantha McClellan of The Woodlands, Texas, earned the female title, in 1:19:13.9. Morsi Rayyan of Ann Arbor placed second over in 1:10:51.8 in the half, while Roh Hyde of Grand Rapids took third in 1:16:09.4. Nate Rauh-Biui would take in the top finish in the 10K, earning a time of 38:09.1, while Kayla Keane of East Jordan placed second overall and first among female runners in the 10K, in a time of 39:49.9. Also in the 10K race, Norbert Scharenbroch of Charlevoix took third in, 41:20.7 and Brandon Beltz of Wolverine earned a fourth place finish in 41:34.1. In the 5K run, Austin Simcoe earned the overall win in 18:25.3, while Victoria Ostrander would take second place and earn the top finishing female, in 20:14.3. Also in the 5K race, Cole Wright of Charlevoix took third in 20:58.7, Dominic Snatina of Boyne City earned fourth in 21:04.4 and Will Malignity of Boyne City placed fifth in 21:01. While a number of local runners placed among the top of each category, racers came from 39 states, including Alaska and Hawaii.

COACH OF THE YEAR: SEAN BYRAM, GAYLORD

According to Gaylord coach Sean Byram, there's no such thing as a rebuilding year when you play for the Blue Devils. That's the point Byram's varsity girls soccer team proved this season as it overcame its youth — a roster jam-packed with sophomores and first-year juniors — to finish 10-6-1 and appear in the Division 2 district final. Despite Gaylord falling to Midland Dow 7-0 in the final, it earned pre-district and semifinal wins over Cadillac and Petoskey, two squads that defeated the Blue Devils in the regular season. Gaylord ended its campaign improved as well as hungry to avenge its shutout loss in the final. With standouts Brandi Wagner, Carlie Martella, and Shelby Baxter returning next school year, Big North foes should keep its eye on the up-and-coming Blue Devils.

Playmaking ability is Leah Davis' best asset

CHARLEVOIX — There was no safe place for the ball to be on the field against the Charlevoix girls soccer team this season, as long as the ball was at the feet of senior Leah Davis.

The senior midfielder led the Rayders to the No. 1 ranking in Division 4 and an undefeated conference season with her poise and skill, but her biggest weapons were her legs.

With either foot, Davis could get the ball from one end of the field to the other with lethal strikes that could score long-distance goals or set up teammates for open runs at the net.

"Leah's a physical, strong player who possesses the ball well, and she's got a lot of skills," Charlevoix coach Kyle Scholten said. "What sets her apart is that both of her legs are cannons."

"There aren't a lot of high school girls that can play the kind of balls Leah does with one foot, let alone both, and that versatility is her biggest asset."

Davis' volleys struck terror into the hearts of opponents and warped the way defenses played Charlevoix throughout the year, as the senior tied for the team lead with 17 goals and finished second with 12 assists on the way to her second straight first-team all-state honor.

And when they didn't give her respect, Davis made them pay, settling up a goal in the first minute of a half with a brilliant long ball off the kick-off multiple times during the season.

Davis' skill is the result of a long time playing the sport and hours of practice, she said.

"I started when I was about five and my dad was coaching my first team, so I've been playing for as long as I can remember," Davis said. "I've always loved playing the sport with my teammates and trying to improve."

For her part, Davis credits her teammates, including fellow all-staters Ellie Way and Kylee Scholten and freshman striker Rachel Nesburg, for allowing her to be patient and take chances on long balls.

Leah Davis' touch and control on long balls played with either foot made her a dangerous offensive weapon for Charlevoix the past two seasons.

"It's so much easier to take chances and have confidence in what you're doing when you trust the players around you," Davis said. "I knew that if I could get my crosses on target, I could trust my teammates to be there and to make something happen with it."

"These are girls I've played a long time with, and who know what we're trying to do offensively, and that makes it very easy to do my job."

Davis had been in the game for a long time, but she spent most of her time before her junior year playing as a defender.

It wasn't until graduation losses opened up a spot at center midfield that she first started leading the attack for the Rayders.

"At first, it was a big adjustment, and I don't know that I was confident that it would work," Davis said. "But I figured out pretty quickly that I liked scoring goals and making things happen offensively, and I decided pretty quickly I didn't want to go back."

Scholten said the decision to move Davis up to the midfield wasn't a hard one.

"She's got a great knack for knowing when opportunities are about to materialize before they happen," Scholten said. "She's very patient with the ball and good at waiting for the play to develop."

"When you pair that patience with her good sense, that's a really good combination for a midfielder."

Davis leaves Charlevoix with 45 goals, two district titles, and one of the best regular seasons in school history in her senior year.

After a season leading the Charlevoix girls soccer team from the midfield position and earning her second straight all-state honor, Leah Davis is the Northern Michigan Review girls soccer player of the year.

And while the Rayders fell short of their goals in the playoffs, Davis wouldn't trade the group she was with for anything.

"It was tough to lose in districts, but overall we had a really successful season," Davis said. "We just had great chemistry on this team, and I have so many memories of my time with this team and these girls that I'm going to treasure for the rest of my life."

spent 12 years in the major leagues with six teams, including the New York Yankees and the San Diego Padres.

"We do a lot of camps throughout the year, and they're all free clinics devoted to teaching the sport of baseball, teaching fundamentals and also life skills and the importance of education," Rasmussen said. "It's fun to give back, because we were able to live out a dream with our time in the majors, and we hope to keep the dream alive with these young kids."

Along with Rasmussen, former Yankee and 1996 world champion Scott Kamieniecki, former Detroit Tiger Roger Mason, former Milwaukee Brewers catcher Bruce Look, former Athletic and Yankee Greg Cadaret and Larry Collura all helped run the event.

They were joined by current Beach Bums players Sam Bumpers, Graham Ramos, Greg Harisis and Kramer Champlin, who worked with the MLB alumni to run the clinic's seven stations, which included lessons in hitting, bunting, fielding in both the infield and the outfield, baserunning, throwing and pitching.

After a two-hour session that included time at every station, attendees got to enjoy lunch and an autograph session involving both current and former players.

"I couldn't be more pleased with everything," Rasmussen said. "We had 120 kids here on this beautiful day, they all had a lot of fun and it all benefits the Charlevoix Little League."

What money was raised from the event goes directly to help fund the Little League, Rasmussen said, and the ability to hold an event like this in Charlevoix and give money back to the community means something to the Charlevoix resident and owner of the Dairy Grille.

"Having a business here, we really rely on the support of the community to be successful," Rasmussen said.

"It's fun for me to find a way to give back to the community for all they do for us."

"Being able to bring these guys up here, former teammates and people I played against, and show them the beauty of this area is just a bonus on top of that."

New Charlevoix league gives local players summer competition

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343; jgensterblum@pskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Step into the gym during the new summer basketball league sponsored by the Charlevoix Recreation Department, and you'll witness an intersection of eras in terms of local basketball.

Current high-school players face off against recent graduates and college stars home for summer break, as well as adults from the many winter rec leagues the area has to offer.

Bringing players of different age groups together and giving them an affordable opportunity to play during the summer was one of the main goals of the league when it was founded, league member Bob Jess said.

"Basketball's kind of a universal sport, and it really brings people of all different ages together," Jess said. "I've been involved with running several leagues in different sports, and this is by far the easiest.

"Everyone just shows up and plays, and there's not a lot that needs to be said or done to set it up and make it run smoothly."

The league currently has nine teams, including five high school squads, in its first year of existence, with several more area teams interested in joining next summer.

Right now Charlevoix has three teams in the league and Harbor Springs and Ellsworth have one, along with a Boyne City team with several recent graduates and three adult teams.

"The main goal is just to provide an affordable basketball experience for local kids, to give them something to do in the summer and a chance to work on their game," Jess said. "We've done what we can to keep costs down for them so they have a chance to play."

And the experience is a quality one for high school kids, as the league meets twice weekly with four 40-minute games split into 20-minute halves a night.

On June 23, the opening game of the night featured a team full of several Charlevoix varsity and JV players taking on a team that included Boyne City grad and Lawrence Tech player Ryan Carson, Mancelona star and Ave Maria commit Brandon Dingman and recent Boyne City graduates and stars Cole Butler and Maceo Vroman.

The chance for local high school players to take on some of the best players the area has produced is one of the league's biggest draws, Jess said.

"We all know what it's like to be young and trying to improve as a player, and we've got a lot of guys involved in this league who want to help those guys in any way we can," Jess said. "It also gives these guys a chance to play and stay fresh over the summer as well."

About halfway through its first season, the league is already a success, with smoothly run games and strong participation, and with several more teams interested in joining next year, the future is bright, Jess said.

"We're hoping that it's going to keep growing and getting better with each passing year, and we've already got a few new teams lined up for next year," Jess said. "Another thing we're hoping to do is add a girls division in the future as well."

The next round of games for the league is on July 7 at Charlevoix High School, and the league also has dates on July 9, 14 and 16 to round out the season.

Those interested in more information on the league can contact the Charlevoix Recreation Department by phone at (231) 547-3253 or by email at tomk@cityof-charlevoix.org.

Celebrate freedom. It's your right.

Our country's founders believed passionately in individual freedom — in the rights of citizens to be protected from a government that was too controlling.

Yet, centuries later, one in three Americans say they have too much freedom and half of American high schoolers said they think newspapers should not be able to publish stories without government approval.*

Those are disturbing figures.

The First Amendment helps provide for a "marketplace of ideas," so individuals may choose which ideas and concepts to question, embrace or reject.

First Amendment to the Constitution

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Freedom of ... religion speech

The First Amendment prevents the government from establishing an official religion. Citizens have freedom to attend a church, synagogue, temple or mosque of their choice — or not to attend at all. The First Amendment allows us to practice our religion the way we want to.

The First Amendment keeps the government from making laws that might stop us from saying what we think. People have the right to criticize the government and to share their opinions with others.

We can get information from many different sources. The government cannot control what is printed in newspapers and books, broadcast on TV and radio or offered online. Citizens can request time on television to respond to views with which they disagree; they may write letters to newspaper editors. They can pass out leaflets that give their opinions. They can voice their opinions on personal Web pages.

Citizens can come together in public and private gatherings. They can join groups for political, religious, social or recreational purposes. By organizing to accomplish a common goal, citizens can spread their ideas more effectively.

right to petition

"To petition the government for a redress of grievances" means that citizens can ask for changes in the government. They can do this by collecting signatures and sending them to their elected representatives; they can write, call or e-mail their elected representatives; they can support groups that lobby the government.

The First Amendment. Keep it strong.

An Inland Seas researcher helps pull out of Lake Charlevoix an Otter trawl. The trawl is one of the most commonly used techniques for fish harvesting. In otter trawling a large net, is dragged along the bottom or up in the water column behind a vessel.

Al Gooch, of Charlevoix, lowers a Secchi disk into Lake Charlevoix. The depth at which the disk is no longer visible is taken as a measure of the transparency of the water. This measure is known as the Secchi depth. The deeper the Secchi depth the clearer the water, and clearer water is not always good for lake ecology, researchers said.

Residents support skydiving business Mayor looks to protect city from liability claims

LOUISE ALLEN

(231) 547-6558 • allen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — If there was any doubt among residents for Charlevoix's love for skydiving at the municipal airport it was certainly dispelled during the July 6 city council meeting.

Monday's Charlevoix City Council meeting had limited room left to sit or stand because of the large crowd who turned out to hear what council member Luther Kurtz said about Skydive Harbor Springs, which is owned by council member Luther Kurtz. It appeared that most of the public showed up to support Kurtz and his skydiving business in Charlevoix.

Bob Ludwig, of Charlevoix, said he has been coming to Charlevoix for many, many years and did not understand the problem with jumping at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport, but questioned city council members' insurance knowledge.

"I don't know all the ins and outs about this, but if you're going to talk about insurance make sure you have a representative from the insurance company here to explain exactly what they cover," Ludwig said to the council, referring to the discussion about Kurtz's liability insurance.

Ludwig also went on to say that the many airports surrounding and including the Cincinnati airport allow parachuting and the local governments do not have the same issues as Charlevoix.

"Somehow in a much larger city, we make it work," Ludwig said. "I also think it is important that the city council be very pro business. Everything we can do to support local business is important to the growth of the community. I pay my taxes that are obviously a hell of a lot higher than the local residents, but you just cannot depend on that, you need to support local businesses that are here, so they can bring more people to the city."

Before audience members began calling out some council members about questioning skydiving in Charlevoix, Kurtz spoke about his skydiving business. During that presentation he mentioned that questions arose about safety and liability from council member Shirley Gibson, through email correspondence. Gibson said she is not against skydiving in Charlevoix, but is concerned about the skydiving drop zone being at the airport.

"I'm concerned about them landing at the airport with jets flying in," Gibson said. "I think it is too much traffic for skydiving."

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Elks Lodge spent a day on the water with a group of veterans from Patriot Place in Gaylord.

Patriot Place offers transitional housing for homeless veterans and out of respect for the veterans last names were not used in this article.

Nick was among the 12 veterans who spent about six hours fishing for lake trout and salmon aboard two charter boats in Lake Michigan on June 30, courtesy of the Elks chapter 2856, which also held a dinner for the participants afterward.

Nick said it was his first time fishing on a charter boat in the big lake.

Lake to Lake Trail finally open

MALACHI BARRETT

(231) 439-9353 • mbarrett@peloskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — After 15 years of planning and fundraising, the Charlevoix Lake to Lake Multi-Use Trail is finally open to the public.

"The big miracle is we had the city, township, county and (local) industry together, and that's pretty awesome," said JoAnne Beemon, secretary of Water and Air Team Charlevoix and member of the trail committee. "All of those different interests came together around one table and it's just so exciting. The trail is outside of the city and township, and yet the city took a major role in getting grants. I hope it paves path in the future of everyone working together for common goals."

At the turn of the century, a rail spur was constructed to bring equipment and building materials from Southern Michigan to Medusa Cement on the shore of Lake Michigan. In 2001, a proposal was brought before Charlevoix to timber and sell a 10-acre parcel on M-66, which Beemon saw as an opportunity for a future trailhead.

She soon began organizing community members to urge the City of Charlevoix to consider the value of the parcel for future recreation and trail development. Dean Davenport, director of the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association, was one of her first recruits and became the publicist for the cause.

"We have a place on the lake and I was watching the boats in waist-deep water when I see this gal coming toward me yelling my name," Davenport recalled. "She pulled up her dress and waded out in the water and showed

Airport manager strives to improve financial situation at city airport

Liz Myer speaks about the airport operational and financial improvements that have occurred under her leadership. She also expressed her disappointment for city council not supporting the Airport Advisory Committee unan

LOUISE ALLEN (231) 547-6558 • allen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Brief and to the point is what Liz Myer presented to members of city council during their regular meeting on July 6.

Myer gave a brief description about how she runs the airport before sharing how she has saved the airport money by ending practices that in her mind were undermining the financial situation of the airport.

"I have did what I have done at other airports I have managed in the past," Myer said. "I walk into the airport with the attitude that it is mine and I run it like it is a business."

Myer submitted a list of numerous major changes she implemented to improve not only the airport operations, but the financial position of the airport. Some of those addressed parking passes, tracking and paying for fuel, installation of a time clock for employees, updating hanger leases and much more which has saved more than $50,000 in lost revenue according Myer.

"There was no system to track cash for parking, no system to inventory the fuel and since I've been there we have reconciled that," Myer said. "I can't tell you how many people have come up to me saying, 'it's not free anymore?' All I can say is look at the numbers at the airport at the end of the fiscal year. I'm doing my job."

Myer helped secure the federal funding of $1 million for fiscal year 2015, by submitting the required airport access required by the Federal Aviation Administration after the previous airport manager Scott Woody failed to do so, she said to council.

"I would like to remind city council I have only been employed by the city for approximately seven months and the numbers show what I have done," Myer said.

Councilmember Bill Supernaw said Myer is doing the job she was hired to do and the proof is in the paperwork.

"If you look at the report from the current airport manager you can't help but believe that things have improved dramatically in the airport's operation," Supernaw said.

Councilmember Shirley Gibson also heard from Myer during the meeting about going against the

CHARLEVOIX
HISTORICAL SOCIETY
Bridging our past with our future

This photo, circa 1905, illustrates the old adage that the more things change, the more they remain the same. Once again, as it has experienced the last few years, Charlevoix has been patiently, or not so patiently, enduring its streets being ripped up to replace an aged infrastructure, especially along the north State Street corridor. More is to come. The town's water system began to be extended to downtown homes in the first decade of the last century, after the Bridge Street buildings, the majority of them commercial, had received their piped water. Above, a trench on Park Avenue near Bridge Street has been dug to receive the first mains on that street, shown on the right waiting to be lowered in.

Charlevoix Township approves 2015 budget

LYNNE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com
CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix Township trustees voted unanimously Monday, July 6, to approve the 2015 operating budget, which includes more than $90,000 for a land purchase to build a new fire station.

are expected to come in at about $720,000. That's actually a slight decrease compared to projected revenues for 2014, which are expected to come in higher than projected at $763,919. Expenditures for 2015 are predicted to be in the vicinity of $1.77 million.

"That includes the property purchase," said Chuck Center, township supervisor. Center said it's time for a new fire station because of required upgrades and the other building is getting old. "The one that they are in is a pole barn that was built over 40 years ago," Center said. "There also are some security issues because they share it with the water department. Plus it just need to be updated after all this time." The budget passed does not include a tax hike and most expenses stay about the same, said Theda Williams, township treasurer. "We are very conscientious about how we spend the money in the township and that benefits our residents," Williams said.

So you want to be a cartoonist?

Editor's note: Steven Scott (Scotty) is a community contributor to the Charlevoix Courier. Scotty's column will focus on the different happenings near his home in Wilson Township. The idea behind a community contributor is to allow individuals who are from the various townships in Charlevoix County to tell the readers what is going on in their local communities. If you are from a township in Charlevoix County and would like to contribute to your local paper of the happenings in your area contact us at news@charlevoixcourier.com or call (231) 439-9309.

As a cartoonist I am asked frequently about how to be a cartoonist, if you are serious and wish to be a cartoonist the path is not an easy walk. It is more of a crawl, but if you stay with it the journey can be very rewarding.

First, drawing must be something you truly want to do. If you're not good at it now, the more you draw the better you will get. Take a look at the early Garfield — he is a much different cat today than he was in the beginning of Jim Davis' career. Drawing must be a passion that runs through your blood, something you don't think you could live without. If you wake up in the morning and all you can think of is picking up a pencil and doodling something that makes you feel good, you just might have a shot at being a cartoonist. But don't quit your job until your artistic value is higher than your paycheck.

Are you funny or do you have a gift of writing? Not all cartoons are about being funny. You can be a political satire cartoonist and sometimes they are not funny, but get a point across about an issue that the public is aware of, or they find something moronic in the political pursuit of stupid. We all know there is a lot of stupid in politics and satire brings awareness to this fact. Satire can also be funny in a puny way.

You could go do a series comic strip — you have characters and they live out some adventure each week. If you just want to be a one cell/panel cartoonist like Gary Larsen and just make fun of the human race through the eyes of nature that works, as well. If you want to be a super hero cartoonist then it is best to go to art school unless you have the talent to draw like Marvel or DC comics, then you would need to sit down with Stan Lee and pay homage to my favorite Marvel creator, or to the other guys at DC. You may be able to obtain an internship with one of these entities of super hero creators, but you would have to look into that yourself. I am a political satire cartoonist also a Gary Larsen type of cartoonist with characters. I work on two types of comic strips promoting both. You have to choose the cartooning path you want to take.

SCOTTY

By Steven Scott

Next, brush off the library card, and use it to find books about how to be a cartoonist. Books can show you the outlines, the process and give you good information about drawing characters and word blocking.

Before you go running to a paper make sure your strip is fine-tuned and you have at least 34 cartoons ready to publish. This gives the editor/publisher plenty of your material to get a good feel of your comic strip; you have enough ahead of time if they give you the — high five, welcoming you to the paper — approval.

You want to stay on top of the comic strip and always be ready for submission time. Editors frown on missing deadlines and it is a good way to be dropped after all your hard work getting your comic strip in the paper. Listen to the editor if he doesn't like what you have to offer, he may give you a suggestion to something that he does like and wants to see to fit their paper. Example: I went to a paper with my Up North Comics — Toons from the Great Lakes — It wasn't what they were looking for. They paper was looking for political satire. I had done a few in Alaska, thanked him for his input and went home, read the papers, picked something drew it, sent it to them and it turned out to be what they wanted. I was given a shot, so don't go to the deep end of the pool if you get a rejection it is going to be common in the "trying to get in to the papers game of thrones" you're going to get your share of "Off with his/her head" before you get your chance or just get lucky and you're in. As a wise editor told me, I am paraphrasing, stay positive even in social media, self-syndicate and keep plugging away at it.

Don't give up if it is something you are passionate about. Get enough of your material together and self-publish your own book of comics, go make T-shirts of the best ones, make a calendar and go peddle your cartoons and get them out there to everyone at markets, trade shows and fairs. Eventually if people like you enough, what you are creating they will ask the editor of their own local paper "why isn't your comic strip in their paper" and it is always good when you meet them to give them a sheet of editors and contact information so as to jump start the process of getting the editor to give in to popular demand. Just because the editor might not like it, does not mean their readers won't.

Your fans should be the ones to keep you going, always thank them for being a part of your adventure and biggest advocates for the success of your comic strip. Now I introduce my new comic strip: Up North Comics Toons from the Great Lakes by Scotty.

Good luck to those who want to be a cartoonist and doodle your way into people's hearts.

It's complicated

We are often encouraged to simplify our view of the world by making it into a series of choices, and placing the choo-er in one or another category.

We are either liberal or conservative; we are pro-life or pro-choice; we are religious or agnostic; we are a creationist or an evolutionist.

The list of such choices is nearly endless, and seems to be encouraged by much of the media.

I would urge that in every such case, we search for some middle ground. We all have liberal ideas and conservative ideas. Most people can identify some circumstance where abortion is totally appropriate choice. Religious tolerance, even tolerance of no religion, is the bedrock of our democratic society. And evolution is demonstrably operating all around us in the natural world.

There is something almost noble about having a strict set of ideas and ideals and sticking to them, no matter the circumstances. Our legislators have in many cases signed a solemn pledge not to raise taxes under any circumstances. That is certainly noble, but seriously misguided.

By comparison we are likely to consider someone who declines to make an irreversible choice, as sort of wishy-washy and without principles. One of the most damaging claims against a politician is that he/she is a flip-flopper. I personally revere the politician who, in the face of changing circumstances, is able to assume and defend a changed position. Even judges on the Supreme Courts have been known to evolve in their thinking and relax a once confidently-made decision. Being unable to change your mind is a weakness, not a strength. As long as we cannot confidently and accurately predict the future, not choosing once and for all about some position will be a valuable and ethical position.

When I vote in a democratic election, I am forced to choose; one or the other, either-or. But in thinking between elections and in our everyday life, not choosing, and searching for some middle ground in situations of choice, is a most sensible approach.

And it can avoid most of the shouting and recrimination that seem to dominate our daily conversations about complex difficult issues.

Go ahead, be wishy-washy, flip-flop on issues. It is the most sensible approach.

Charlevoix Middle School is now used for better purpose

Dear Editor:

I say it was a great idea to close down the middle school and send the sixth graders down to the elementary school and move the seventh graders and up to the high school. I never wanted to go the middle school when I was little. I wanted to skip all of my middle school years and go straight to the high school. Now it will happen! When I heard that they were talking about closing the middle school, I got excited. The only bad thing I could think about was that I had to stay in the elementary school for one more year. I didn't want to have to do that but I have no choice. I said to myself, "At least I don't have to go to the middle school anymore."

I got even more excited when I heard that they were going to use the middle school for kids that have special needs and that have autism. They want those kids to get a head start before they start preschool. I want that to happen too because my cousin has autism, and I want him to get a head start. I think it was a good idea to shut down the middle school for better things.

Sincerely,
Maxwell Ostrum

Council member against moving city forward

Editor:

It comes as no surprise to me that councilman Jeff Porter is once again using derogatory name calling ("Hobo Convention") in an attempt to prevent Charlevoix from moving into the 21st century.

Recall: "They have these gypsy artists come from all over the United States," Porter said. "There is absolutely no need to have these people here." (Charlevoix Courier, May 8, 2014)

The fact that he wasn't even aware of his own racist language speaks volumes.

"Disc golf generates absolutely no revenue," said councilman Jeff Porter. "How do you justify a sport that provides zero revenue?" (Charlevoix Courier, Aug. 7, 2014)

Really? I couldn't respond better than former mayor Carlson: "Our beaches don't make revenue, but we maintain them."

"...some council members were hesitant to accept the gift because of its artistic features, particularly the images on the wheels. 'We should let our Main Street people look at this concept,' Porter said." — Charlevoix Courier, April 13, 2015)

What's not to like about this bike rack? "The wheels have an ornamental design with the word Charlevoix inscribed on the image of a drawbridge and there is an image of a lighthouse on the other wheel."

It is my belief that there are two types of people: those that find reasons to move us forward and those that find excuses to hold us back. I believe councilman Porter falls into the latter group. I encourage the residents of the first ward to consider electing an alternative councilman to represent them this fall.

Council member comment bias

Editor:

If Jeff Porter's comment "hobo convention" in front of the Charlevoix City Council, as presented in the Courier, and intended only to inflame, is not "prima facie" evidence of his bias against entrepreneurial experimentation and a creative approach to Charlevoix's future, then it is certainly a demonstration of his disregard for polite discourse at a public forum.

It has long surprised me that Dr. Porter's outrageous behavior has not resulted in the failure of his practice. Thank God that the American way presents us with an opportunity to support those opposed to this man's entirely outdated and outrageous "I've got mine, but I don't care for your advancement" attitude in next fall's election.

Patio seating great addition

Editor:

The Bridge Street Tap Room and Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company are wonderful additions to downtown. The patio seating is long overdue. Now, The Villager Pub offers outdoor seating as well as the beautifully renovated East Park Tavern. It all gives Charlevoix a much needed boost of energy and offers the community opportunities to dine 'al fresco' and enjoy what Charlevoix is known for: the water.

I fear those opposed to these additions are fossilized. Their refusal to embrace a lively downtown scene where everyone both young and old is welcome is puzzling. Perhaps a sedate retirement community might be better suited to said individuals. Since City Councilman Jeff

Porter is most vocally, and inappropriately, opposed to creating a lively downtown scene, he should step down from city leadership and create the retirement community of his dreams ... far from Charlevoix.

COMMUNITY Highlights

Friday night features music in park

EAST JORDAN — The East Jordan Friday Night Music In the Park Concert Series will feature the band TNT, today, Friday, July 10, in the Memorial Park bandshell.

This local favorite band will hit the stage at 7 p.m. and will perform a venue of "country tunes and oldies, but goodies" to concert goers throughout the evening. Arrive early in East Jordan and enjoy dinner at one of the restaurants before heading to the park with your chair or blanket for a memorable summer evening by the water.

The concert series will continue throughout the summer through Friday, Aug. 7. These family-friendly concerts are made possible by donations from individuals, organizations and businesses. They are co-sponsored by the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce, East Jordan Downtown Development Authority and the Jordan River Arts Council. Donations may be sent to the City of East Jordan "Music In the Park Concert Series," P.O. Box 499, East Jordan, MI, 49727.

The concert today is part of the South Arm Classic weekend in East Jordan. The Lions Club will be holding a Classic Boat Show and Car Show from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. in downtown East Jordan from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Also that day, the East Jordan Freedom Festival will be sponsoring a Micro Brew Tent with entertainment from 2 to 8 p.m. For more information, visit ejchamber.org or phone (231) 536-7351.

On Saturday, July 11, the Lions Club will be holding a Classic Boat and Car Show in downtown East Jordan from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

All-class reunion planned for Venetian Festival

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix High School all-class reunion will be held from 12:30 to 3 p.m. on Saturday, July 25, at Stafford's Weathervane, in the lower level.

All Charlevoix High School Alumni are invited to greet classmates, peruse yearbooks, laugh at pictures of themselves as teenagers and share some food and drink. Snacks, lemonade and ice tea are provided and there is a cash bar available.

The Charlevoix Public library has placed all of the yearbooks in a digital file that can be downloaded and copied from their site.

Hard copies of most yearbooks will be obtained from the Historical Society for the afternoon.

Each year the number of alumni at this event has doubled and there have been graduates from classes in the 1940's to current graduates. Yearbooks and tables are arranged by decade so that one can easily find — but not necessarily recognize — those who were in their class.

While the reunion is free, those who wish to join may pay the $5.00 annual dues.

The money gathered at this event goes back to the school for special projects. This event is sponsored by the Venetian Committee and the Alumni Association. Join us for this annual trip down memory lane.

The Alumni band will once again be entertaining the crowd at the Venetian parade.

If you would like to join this group, or march as a class in the parade, call Gail Baldridge or email Sherrel Bergmann at rayderberg@aol.com.

Circle of Arts summer events schedule

CHARLEVOIX — Exhibits, entertainment and informational sessions are all part of upcoming events this summer at the Circle of Arts, in downtown. The summer's programming is sure to find interest with a multitude of people living or visiting Charlevoix this year, event organizers said.

Exhibits

— 30 Hats in 30 Days from July 1 - 31 — Garden Level Gallery.

A fun show for all ages. The show features 30 traditional hats from the Linda Weston collection representing 6 continents, information about the hats and the countries from which they come will be displayed. Come see hats from Bali, Mali, New Guinea, Hungary, Vietnam, Ecuador, and many more continents.

Adult classes

— Upcoming adult classes include a four-week arts sampler class, print-making with Glen McCune, Intro to Macro Photography with Kim Mettler, Intro to Drum Kit with Alex King, Tai Chi with Meg McCloy, Tango with Paul Belding, Oil Painting en Plein Air with Lori Feldpausch, Watercolor classes with Betty Bea Washburn and Susan Lingg and Palette Knife Painting with Jim Koslosky. For more information, visit charlevoixcircle.org.

Children's Classes

— Charlevoix Circle of Arts Summer Creativity Camps and Classes are offered in July and August for children ages 5-18.

Offering camps and classes in theater, fine arts, fashion design, model, sailboat building, fairy tea garden and music. Financial assistance available ensuring all children can have a summer camp experience. For more information, visit charlevoixcircle.org.

Armchair Theatre

Theater program events are free and open to the public. Donations are taken at the door. Theatre schedule is:

— Elvis & "Graceland" at 6:30 p.m. on July 12. Elvis Presley is recognized as an icon in the development of American musical performances on stage and in films. Armchair Theatre salutes the "King" with an interesting combination of play and performance. Enjoy the one act comedy "Graceland" featuring Desiree Kaiser and Morgan Jake Slater, a professional Elvis tribute artist who has the sound, flair and look of a young Elvis will be one of the many events planned at Charlevoix Circle of Arts this summer.

Barnes playing two devoted fans of Elvis each wanting to be the first to enter Graceland, Elvis' home just turned into a museum. This competition is resolved with insightful good will. Hugh Hansen directs this warm comedy. Immediately following is a performance by Jake Slater, a professional Elvis tribute artist "Keeping the Memory Alive." Slater has the sound, flair and look of the young Elvis and his popularity is growing. Bring the entire family for this tribute to the King.

— At 7:30 p.m. on Monday, July 20, a Midsummer Night's Swing Fundraiser will take place at Castle Farms. Come party with us in the Garden Room at the Castle. Enjoy music, dancing and the comedy, I'm Herbert, directed by Ruth Willis and starring Dale Hull and Yasmin Richmond. Music and dancing to follow. Light appetizers and cash bar. For tickets call (231) 547-3554.

— Tell Me a Song with Robin Lee Berry will be at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, July 26. Singer/songwriter, Robin Lee Berry and storyteller Norman Wheeler come together for an evening of songs and bards. Robin's songs, as reviewed in All Music Guide by Michael Erlewine: "She writes great songs that took me for a look inside myself," and singer/songwriter Greg Brown says of Berry's voice, "clear spring water gushing out from a deep place in the earth. It goes right to your heart." Mr. Wheeler, a true bard, breathes life with his original and traditional tales of upper and lower Michigan.

— An Evening with Dorothy Parker will be at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 9. A $5 donation is suggested.

— Ali Reyerson, jazz flutist, will perform at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 23, at East Park Pavilion. International known contemporary jazz flutist, Reyerson will perform with her ensemble of piano, bass and drums.

This is an exceptional opportunity to hear virtuoso level flute jazz with backup trio. In case of rain, the event will be held at the Circle of Arts. A reception at the Circle will follow this performance.

Jazz series starting at the library

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library will present the ninth season of JATL: Jazz @ the Library. JATL is a program of live concerts chronicling jazz music through the ages, with an "out of the box" approach.

Concerts begin 7 p.m. each Wednesday beginning on July 8 and going through Aug. 19 — no concert on July 23 — in Grandma Geri's Children's Garden. Concerts will continue each Wednesday evening through August and are free and open to the public. A special soloist joins the JATL Trio of Steve Stargardt, Andy Evans, and Chris Ames each week to bring the music alive. The kick-off event on July 8 highlights the jazz standards with a local favorite vocalist, Claudia Schmidt and then July 15 will feature vocalist Mirlam Pico. On July 29, multiple guests will present the "Birth of the Blues and Motown" and on Aug. 5 Chris Bickley will perform on saxophone. The annual piano feature with Steve Stargardt will be on Aug. 12 and the saxophone and flute duo of Bill and Laurie Sears ends the series on Aug. 19.

Weather permitting, performances will take place in the garden, please bring your own chair. For inclement weather, concerts will be in the library's community meeting room.

For more information, call (231) 237-7340, or visit charlevoixlibrary.org.

The ninth season of JATL: Jazz @ the Library will begin in July at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix United Methodist Church.

Charlevoix County Community Foundation awards $5,000 grant to Hospice of Northwest Michigan

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix County Community Foundation recently awarded Hospice of Northwest Michigan a $5,000 grant, based upon the recognized need for access to marketing tools and staff skills development.

Amy Wieland, Executive Director, said part of the funding will be used to support the agency's marketing initiatives that help the community better understand the who, what, where, why and when of Hospice care and to reinforce that everyone has a choice in their Hospice care provider. The other portion will provide opportunities for staff skills development, which not only allow Hospice to improve staff skills, but ultimately the care provided to community families.

"We are extremely grateful to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation for supporting our community services through this grant and recognizing our services as a valued choice," Wieland said. "They have enabled us to more effectively reach out to those who need and depend on Hospice of Northwest Michigan and to ensure that we are able to provide the best possible care."

According to Wieland, the continued outstanding support from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation will positively impact community friends and neighbors well into the future. Participants should know that they have a choice in hospice care. Know what choices are available for you and your family before an emergency situation arises. Presentations to local organizations or access to more information can be arranged by contacting Wieland at (231) 547-7659.

Wieland said Hospice of Northwest Michigan is the only non-profit, community-based, locally-managed hospice in northern lower Michigan, meaning it is not owned, operated, regulated or supported by corporate interests.

"That gives us the flexibility to make decisions that serve our own communities' unique and ever-changing needs," she explained. "Of course, it also means we're much more dependent on local support to survive."

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation is a local charitable organization dedicated to enhancing the quality of life for all citizens of Charlevoix County by building a permanent endowment, addressing needs through grant-making, and providing leadership resources to serve the community. Learn more about CCCF online at c3f.org.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan is a 501(c)(3) non-profit, community based hospice, serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. Call (800) 551-4140 toll-free for more information on hospice services, or to learn more about how you can help.

Library to host 'Coming of the Resorts' program

CHARLEVOIX — David L. Miles, co-director of the Harsha House Museum and longtime Charlevoix historian, will share an overview of historic summer resorts at 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 14, at the Charlevoix Public Library. The Belvedere Club and the Chicago Club summer resorts have been such integral and important components of Charlevoix's urban landscape for so long that we hardly give them a second thought. The two of them have just always been here. The Belvedere Club put down roots in 1878 and the Chicago Club followed in 1880. Founded by church groups from lower Michigan, northern Indiana and Chicago, the club's influence and reputation soon extended to absorb members from across the country. Cottages and clubhouses went up immediately, and the resorts grew into the organizations they remain today — major benefactors to this community. This fully illustrated program will use many vintage, private-collection photos. For more information about library programs, events, marketing and public relation campaigns, visit charlevoixlibrary.org. For more information about the Charlevoix Historical Society and Harsha House Museum, visit chxhistory.org.

Pictured here is the Chicago Club summer resort, which was established in Charlevoix in 1880. David L. Miles will lead a discussion on the history of summer resorts in the community.

First Things First: Building the Foundation

Charlevoix Main Street is not just a flash in the pan. We will be successful because we are building a sustainable and effective organization; and just like a house, you have to build a solid foundation first. This "behind the scenes" work can be somewhat frustrating to many of us who want to see immediate results and improvements. Yes, solutions are needed — but we have to walk before we can run. Currently, Charlevoix Main Street is at the very basic level of taking inventory of our community assets, building community relationships and developing action plans based on concrete data. For example, the Economic Restructuring (ER) Team is busy collecting data on the properties and businesses properties and long-occupied properties, commercial and residential areas and everything in between. As they go, volunteers are building relationships, meeting the people involved, and developing an understanding of what Charlevoix has to offer and what we are missing.

downtown — this includes info on square footage, price per square foot, lease or sale terms, property owner information; this includes vacant

The collection of this information is crucial for us to understand the dynamics involved in our downtown vacancies and, ultimately, to develop a targeted plan to fill these spaces; this information is equally important to use in support of our existing businesses and in the development of a plan that has been created by us — the people of Charlevoix. This is just one example of many. I invite you to attend one of the following Main Street Team meetings and to be a part of developing these action plans toward economic revitalization and historic preservation. The following is a brief summary of each of the teams and their next meeting date.

PROMOTION TEAM Enhances the image of downtown and encourages consumers, residents and investors to live, work, have fun, and invest in downtown by raising the level of awareness through district-wide advertising, events, marketing and public relation campaigns. Meets last Thursday of each month at 8 a.m. at City Hall in the first floor conference room. Next meeting is July 29.

DESIGN TEAM
Capitalizes on downtown's historic buildings and pedestrian-oriented streets to create an inviting downtown atmosphere through attractive buildings, streetscape improvements, and signage. Quality design is encouraged through education and technical assistance about good maintenance practices, rehabilitation of historic buildings, appropriate new construction, and context sensitive design and planning. Meets first Tuesday of each month at 4 p.m. at City Hall in the first floor conference room. Next meeting is Aug. 4.

ECONOMIC RESTRUCTURING (ER) TEAM

Strengthens downtown's existing economic assets while expanding and diversifying its economic base by encouraging the conversion of underutilized commercial space into economically productive property. ER helps sharpen the competitiveness of existing businesses through education and recruits compatible new businesses and economic uses to ensure that downtown is economically successful and more responsive to today's consumers.

Meets first Wednesday of each month at 8 a.m. at City Hall in the first floor conference room. Next meeting is Aug. 5.

ORGANIZATION

Promotes the program to stakeholders and the community; manages staff and volunteers, raises funds for activities and administration, and manages the program's finances to carry out the mission of the organization for continued revitalization of downtown.

Meets second Wednesday of each month at 8 a.m. at City Hall in the first floor conference room. Next meeting is Aug. 12.

Voices Without Borders presents Vietnamese Children's Choir

Youthful exuberance, ancient traditions, singing and dancing are all a part of a special cultural exchange program that occurred in Petoskey and Traverse City during the past week. Several young singers and dancers from the Vietnam Academy of Music — Sol Art Children's Choir, of Hanoi — came to perform with members of the Little Traverse Youth Ensemble. The farewell concert was at the Crooked Tree Arts Center in Traverse City, on Monday, June 29.

The six-day cultural exchange program was titled "Getting to Know You" a presentation by Voices Without Borders.

A part of Voices Without Borders Children of the World in Harmony international exchange programs this is the second time students from the Sol Art have been to Petoskey to participate in the Voices Without Borders programs. The first visit was in 2010 for the Children of the World in Harmony Festival.

The Little Traverse Youth Ensemble, under the direction of Aleta Watton, hosts the exchange. During the six day project, the participants stayed with host families in Petoskey, Cheboygan and Boyne City. Other concerts include the Music in Mackinaw summer concert series in Conkling Heritage Park, Mackinaw City, at the Fort on Mackinac Island and in Harbor Springs.

"This exchange is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for her students to stay with American families and to share their culture," said Nguyen Thi Hong My "Sandy" leader of the group from Hanoi.

She wants people to know that Vietnam is a beautiful and peaceful country that welcomes thousands of American visitors each year to visit and learn more about the Vietnamese people. Nguyen Thi Hong My is happy that the children from her center have this opportunity to learn more about the wonderful people in Petoskey.

Home stays for the Vietnamese participants were arranged by Sara Russell Kukuk, Voices Without Borders board member and the parents of the Little Traverse Youth Choirs. Brenda Bell of Petoskey and her family have hosted several exchange visitors during previous exchanges and are hosting two girls from the Sol Art Choir this year.

"This experience is a great opportunity to share life with young people from another country," Kukuk said. "We have learned so much as a family, and hopefully, we imparted a wonderful experience for our guests."

Kukuk's daughter Amy, who has been in the Little Traverse Youth Choir since it was founded in 2010 said, "Hosting children from other countries has opened my eyes to the similarities between myself and children from other countries and has given me the chance to develop friendships with them. It has not only changed my life, but also my perspective about the world. Having them here is like a week-long slumber party."

Voices Without Borders, Inc., is a locally based nonprofit organization that works to promote appreciation for and understanding of children and youth choral singing and dance and to promote peace, international friendship and understanding among and between the participating young people through choral music, dance and the other performing arts activities around the world and locally.

Eighth Annual Day of Action promotes financial literacy

PETOSKEY — With a wonderful group of four dozen volunteers ages ranging between 10 to more than 80, Char-Em United Way (CEUW) was able to promote literacy and a love of reading among area children for the Eighth Annual United Way Day of Action on June 19. Ten area preschools, libraries, and daycare centers hosted the volunteers who read stories, recited some poems and distributed more than 225 literacy kits. The kits were sponsored this year by the Northern Michigan Antique-Flywheelers Club and had a financial literacy theme.

"It was amazing to watch the faces of the children as they listened to the stories being read with such animation and excitement. The readers asked questions and the children had many answers for them," said Mary-Anne Stieber, director of Boyne City's Early Learners program. "I really think that having adults of all ages read to children sends the message that reading is non-generational; it is a lifelong skill enjoyed and appreciated by all of us."

Parents were pleased with the event and the experiences provided to their children as well. Christie Ward-Strahan of Charlevoix took her son, Lucas, to the Charlevoix Public Library where volunteers from the local Kiwanis group read.

"He was paired with Ted Dumbauld who read a number of books to him. I think they read at least three front to back cover," said Ward-Strahan. "Ted was a lovely man and took the time to talk with Lucas and ask him questions about his family, explore the characters in the book and what he was seeing around him at the library. They had a great time and Lucas talked about Ted all weekend. It was a very positive experience for all."

Education, health and income are the areas targeted for support by United Way in order to build stronger communities, and Day of Action is one of the many yearly projects that focus on education. In addition to Day of Action, Char-Em United Way holds the Stuff the Bus event in August to collect school supplies for area schools to help all the children succeed; provides free books to children from birth to five years through Dolly Parton's Imagination Library program; and recruits, trains and places volunteers in the schools to work with children through the Literacy Corps program.

"When I was looking for a community partner to sponsor the Day of Action literacy kits and help to promote education as part of a summer activity, the Flywheelers Club made for a great fit," said Char-Em United Way AmeriCorps VISTA, Pat Brewer. "Education about life in the recent past and life in rural America are part of the foundational goals of the Northern Michigan Antique-Flywheelers Club. They are a group consisting solely of volunteers who educate multiple generations during their July show, and educate hundreds of area fourth graders at their fall Student Harvest Days."

The ten sites that partnered with Char-Em United Way to encourage education among the area's youngest citizens through the Day of Action literacy event were located in five towns in the two county CEUW service area.

To find out more about supporting Char-Em United Way literacy programs, volunteering at future events, or donating

Hestia Women's Giving Circle awards $36,000 to women and girls

HARBOR SPRINGS — More than 50 members, guests and grant recipients attended the recent Hestia Women's Giving Circle annual meeting at Harbor Point Golf Club. A total of $36,000 was awarded to local organizations that support Hestia's mission of promoting the economic self-sufficiency and well-being of women and girls. Since Hestia's founding nine years ago, grants totaling more than $300,000 have been awarded to local projects specifically geared to women and girls, including $124,000 to Planned Parenthood of West and Northern Michigan and $88,000 to the Women's Resource Center. This year's recipients also included the First Tee of Northern Michigan, North Country Kids, Petoskey

Public Schools debate program and YMCA of Northern Michigan.

Highlight of the evening came when recipients shared stories of how grant money helps women and girls in Emmet and Charlevoix counties. A member of the Petoskey Debate Team thanked Hestia members for their support and explained how her involvement in the award-winning debate program helped her gain skills that led to a University of Michigan scholarship. A representative from the YMCA shared examples of how grant money for scholarships supports more than just attendance in the agency's programs — it actively builds self-esteem and confidence among young attendees. The Hestia Women's Giving Circle is seeking new members. The annual membership fee, payable quarterly, is $1,000, which can be shared to make it more affordable. Mid-year is a great time of year to join, since membership fee can be pro-rated. Funds are pooled and all members are invited to serve on the grant committee, which is chaired by Mary Jean Meyerson. Women interested in learning more about Hestia are encouraged to contact Denise Simon, chair, at (231) 526-9302, or info@hestiacircle.org. The organization can be found on Facebook and on the website of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, which administers funds, at c3f.org/grants-scholarships/hestia-womens-giving-circle.html.

In an email to interim City Manager Mike Spencer, dated for June 22, Gibson asked for clarity about the insurance and the license agreement after she reviewed the signed documents between Skydive Harbor Springs and the city.

"All I'm trying to do is look out for the city taxpayers' best interest," Gibson said. "Our minimum standards for the airport are tied to an ordinance, which is law."

Gibson questioned the validity of the insurance and the license agreement, since Kurtz did not check the box stating he had liability insurance.

"The box is a non-issue, because I had already given them a copy of my insurance before I filled out the license agreement," Kurtz said. "Shirley and I discussed this already. I explained this to her. All anybody had to do was check with the city to see the insurance is on file."

Gibson said that she is afraid that if the paperwork is not filled out correctly the city could be found at fault if something went wrong during a jump.

"I'm requesting that the entire agreement be revised with all things filled out properly and the insurance documents attached to save the city any legal hassle if someone was to be injured," Gibson said.

Kurtz also said he feels this issue seemed personal, from the complaints he has read in emails. Kurtz was referring to a last-minute email, dated for July 6, and submitted by Island Airways, which listed nine concerns about using the airport as a drop zone.

"I reached out to Island Airways a few times this summer and I was surprised by the email," Kurtz said. "I did talk to the general manager and she did not know that this letter was written, so I don't know how this came about. It does feel like a personal attack."

Mayor Gabe Campbell did not agree with his statement and said this seems like a legitimate concern from Island Airways.

"I kind of object to (you saying) that," Campbell said. "This is a serious problem at the airport. If the pilots don't know where the parachute jumpers are, I worry about the guy in the parachute, but I also worry about our pilots and planes."

Kurtz said the Federal Aviation Administration has best practice guidelines that recommend drop zones be located at airports. He also provided documents from the United States Parachute Association, along with a letter from Randy Allison, USPA vice president to the city staff. These documents conclude the airport in Charlevoix can safely accommodate skydiving.

A large attendance from members of the public at the Charlevoix City Council meeting on July 6 came to hear about the issue of skydiving at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport. Most spoke in favor of skydiving.

"I go by the FAA and the USPA guidelines when I make a decision on skydiving," Kurtz said. "That is what I am doing in this case."

Campbell said the city is trying to be cautious because of what happened 18 years ago at the Venetian Festival.

"I may not have an example of the city being sued from a skydiving accident, but I do have an example of a city being sued due to fireworks, and it all comes down to proper insurance," Campbell said. "I want to make sure the city is safe from any liability."

Don Seelye, resident and pilot, said he was not against skydiving, but wanted the drop zone off airport grounds because of the noise level on the radio and all the airplane traffic make it dangerous to pilots and jumpers.

"(Skydiving) is a very distracting thing on busy days," Seelye said. "In my opinion, it's unsafe to be jumping at the airport on high air-traffic days."

Kurtz said it doesn't make business sense to have the drop zone off airport grounds.

"I think it is actually safer to have them land at the airport, and it is more efficient to take people up and land in the same spot," Kurtz said.

Terry Osterhout, of Charlevoix and manager at the Cinema III, said the city council should be more concerned about the unfinished construction than skydiving at the airport.

"You should be outraged that this street construction has taken more weeks than it was scheduled," Osterhout said. "The Village Pub, the flower shop around the corner and other businesses around construction are dealing with parking and we are talking about skydiving. It is beneath the city council to focus on this issue after skydiving has operated this long."

The non-agenda discussion went for nearly an hour before Spencer finally made a recommendation to set a special meeting after city attorney Scott Howard and the council could read through all the new information.

"Obviously, this is an important issue," Spencer said. "There are members from the public concerned about it. Luther wants to maintain his skydive operation at the airport and council has some concerns about liability. Those are all valid things. A lot of this information is new. We should take some time to have the city attorney review this information and set a special meeting at a later date."

"It was fantastic — caught my first ever trout," he said. "They treated us like royalty for what we did. You don't get a lot of that anymore."

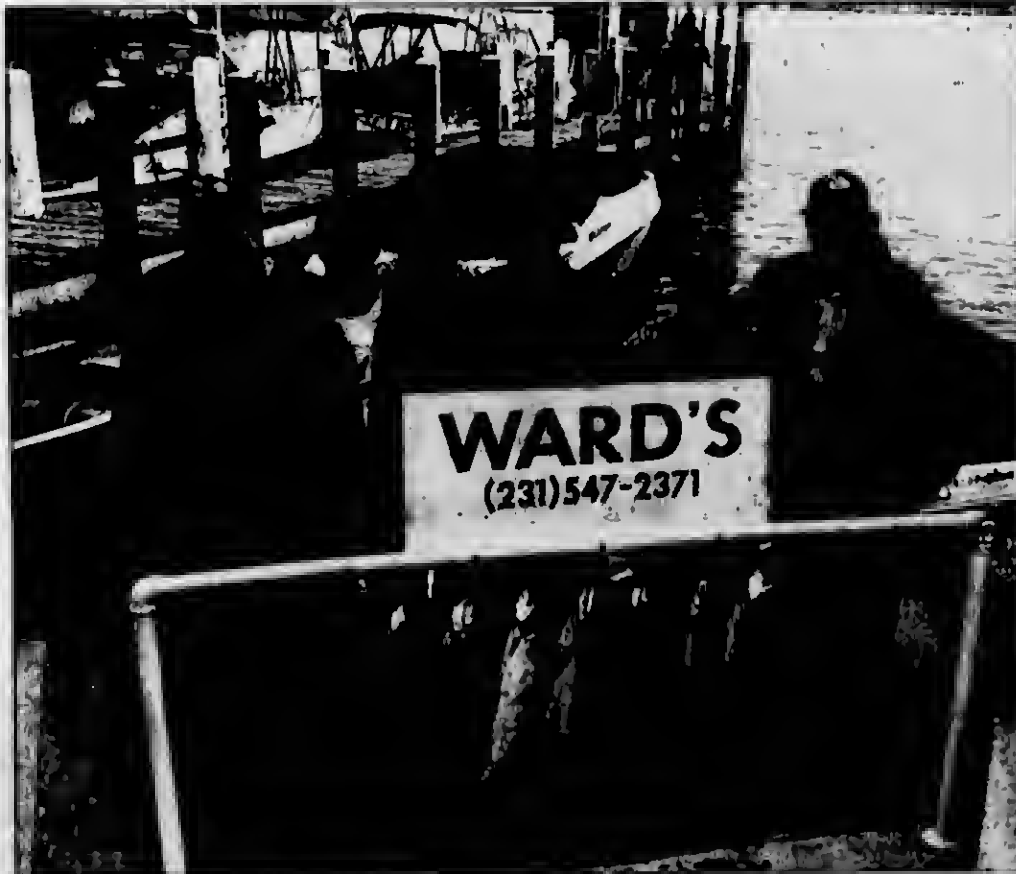

Ray, another veteran, appreciated the day of fishing for the same reason.

"The best thing about it was just the idea people wanted to take us fishing," Ray said. "It was nice to be around other veterans and someone who cared and got me out of my daily routine."

That was the idea when the Elks applied for the Freedom Grant from the Elks National Veterans Service Commission. Along with private donations and the participation of Ward Brothers Boats, Inc., charter captains and volunteers, the day was a hit with the former servicemen.

"We hear about it all the time, but this was a real way to say thanks to our veterans," said Elks Exalted Ruler Ken Rogers. "It felt good to be able to do it for them, because you could see it by the expressions on their faces."

It was the first time the Charlevoix Elks Lodge took veterans fishing, but it won't be the last. Rogers said the Elks want to make this an annual event.

"The veterans really enjoyed the trip," he said.

"I know we would like to do this again."

So would the veterans.

"It was a good experience and I hope to do it again," Nick said. "Everybody was so nice and they took good care of us on the boat. I'm so grateful for what they did."

me this plot of land and said 'the city is trying to sell this, we need to stop them.' I asked what I could do and we started talking about it right away."

A Charlevoix Lake to Lake Multi-Use Trail Committee was assembled with members of the Charlevoix East Jordan Snowmobile Trails Council, Charlevoix County Land Conservancy, St. Marys Cement, representatives of local governments and others. St. Marys donated land on the Medusa spur to the city for development.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners formally supported the trail initiative in 2003, though it would take another 12 years of overcoming setbacks to make the plans a reality.

"It was four or five years of meetings and then getting one step forward and one back," Davenport said. "The thing that hurt us was that as soon as we were close with Medusa, the company was sold, and when we started working with those people and became close with them, it was sold again to St. Marys. If someone wants to know why we took so long, basically every time we got close with the cement company they would sell."

Community support pushed city leaders to begin securing funding for the project. To date, the project has covered a majority of the $583,000 project cost from grants. Grants include the Federal Transportation Enhancement grant for $314,000; $14,500 from The Charlevoix County Community Foundation; $20,000 from The Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians; and $20,000 from The Oleson Foundation. The city and township also submitted a joint application for a $20,000 grant recently.

Charlevoix City Planner Mike Spencer said the Lake to Lake Trail Committee plans to have a kickoff event sometime in July to celebrate the opening of the trail.

"There were a lot of people that wanted it to happen a long time ago, but there was a lack of political support for it," Spencer said. "It's a hard thing to get these trails down, there's funding issues and people have different opinions on it. To finally see it come to fruition, I know everyone who has been involved is just extremely thrilled to see this happen and be finally built."

The trail runs west from Ferry Beach, crossing M-66 and along U.S. 31 to connect with Fishermans Island State Park and the Little Traverse Wheelway through downtown Charlevoix. The trail is around five miles long. Parts of the previous trail were used by the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club and high school cross-country teams, who were also involved in the project.

"We're happy we've gotten a lot of grant money for the project, and we hope this is a base for future connections for Charlevoix and the Little Traverse Wheelway with Traverse City as well," Spencer said. "This is part of a regional effort to become a more bike- and trail-friendly area."

The trail is also an effort to develop more opportunity for outdoor activities in Charlevoix.

Beemon said plans to continue the trail to connect with southern wheelways is up in the air, but they have been in contact with organizations to begin planning soon.

The trail connections make Fishermans Island State Park more accessible to cyclists who used to have to travel along the busy U.S. 31 highway to enter the park from Charlevoix.

"U.S. 31 was too dangerous, now a 12- or 14-year-old can take a ride out and enjoy the day with their family, so we're looking forward to that," Beemon said.

Construction on the trail is finished, though dirt along the limestone path is being hydroseeded to regrow grass in areas where the grass was torn up.

City approves funding for Venetian Festival

LOMME ALLEN (231) 547-6558 • allen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — In less than two weeks the Charlevoix Venetian Festival will begin its 85 season of family fun, taking place July 18 through the 25 and promises a range of activities to entice both kids and adults, tourists and locals.

On July 6, city council approved to pay $15,000 to help defray some of the festival cost, including road closure signage for Bridge Street on Saturday, pending approval application to MDOT. City council also will allow for the annual Tiki tent in downtown and the two-day fireworks display on Round Lake, which are staples of the long-time festival, said Dan Barron, Venetian Festival president.

Barron said the festival always pays homage to the original Venetian Festival, which was simply a parade of candle-lit boats, the 2015 Venetian Festival will have a nighttime boat parade, one of the festival's most popular attractions.

"We've carried on the boat parade tradition from the time Charlevoix was a small boating community," Barron said. "The spirit of the festival is displayed through the decorative lights and music of those who participate in the boat parade."

The board of Venetian Festival has estimated that more than 100,000 people enjoy the festival activities, a blend of locals and out-of-town folks in equal measure.

"It's become a homecoming celebration for residents of Charlevoix and we see the most reunions during Venetian," Barron said. "The mix of tourist and those returning to their roots promotes the festive atmosphere of the festival."

Since the week of fun runs on donations from the local Burgee Club, such an impressive turnout is something for Charlevoix to be immensely proud of. More than 300,000 guests into the production of the week, as well as hundreds of volunteer hours before, during and after the crowds disperse, Barron said.

"The support of the city and entire community is a support her previous airport manager versus supporting her current airport manager, not only ignoring the advisory committee recommendation of David Gauci, but also ignoring her current airport manager's objections," Myer said. "By partaking in back door politics and last minute sliding a noninee, who is a close friend and neighbor into the committee position is a conflict of interest and in my opinion unethical politics. I am curious to know why there is even a airport committee when the recommendations of the committee are being ignored and back door politics are being used by a council members for individual personal agenda."

"I feel ethical politics should be the norm and not the exception, Myer added. "I am long standing respected airport manager in the aviation community and you are fortunate to have me employed as your airport manager. These are the facts and please keep in mind the truth has no agenda or motive."

Gibson said Myer did not even present what she had done at the airport, but instead used the podium and council's time to put down the city council.

"She never gave a presentation," Gibson said. She was disrespectful and insulting to council."

Gibson said she did not respond to Myer on Monday night because she does not engage in that type of response during city meetings.

"I did not comment to her because I don't react to a mob mentality," Gibson said.

Myer said that she would not be calling any more airport advisory committee meeting while Woody remained on the board. Gibson thinks that action by Myer is rebellious and not good leadership from a city employee.

"It's insubordinate that she will not call a committee meeting," Gibson said. "I have never had that from a city staff member in a public meeting."

recommendation of the airport advisory committee

"I expected the city council to support their airport manager, but after the last city council meeting I was left in doubt and felt it necessary to address the issue," Myer said. "At the last airport advisory committee meeting the members of the committee suggested that Dave Gauci be a good candidate as noted in the minutes. Then at the last city council meeting Councilmember Gibson suggested Scott Woody fill the spot and we all know the outcome of that vote."

Myer said she has personal issues with Woody and Gibson knew about those issues. Myer also stated she believes the move by Gibson was political and not in the best interest for the city and airport.

"Despite the knowledge of my personal issues with this candidate, councilmember Gibson chose to

Luke Jordan to give presentation of North Country Trail hike Saturday

PETOSKEY—The Jordan Valley 45 degree Chapter and the Harbor Springs Chapter of the North Country Trail Association are pleased to host Luke Jordan — whose "trail name" is "Strider" — who will make a presentation about his 4,600-mile trek in 2013 from North Dakota to New York along the North Country National Scenic Trail.

Come hear a story about a hiker's journey over the nation's longest scenic trail, what he calls the "crown jewel" of the national scenic trail system. It's a story of struggle to overcome obstacles and to continue on in the pursuit of achieving goals and personal growth. Follow along as he traverses this trail of great diversity from the vast plains of North Dakota to the high peaks of the Adirondacks. You won't want to miss it.

The North Country National Scenic Trail—a unit of the National Park Service—is the longest National Scenic Trail established by the U.S. Congress, spanning 4,600 miles and seven states from New York to North Dakota. Michigan has the most North Country National Scenic Trail trail miles, more than 1,150. In Petoskey, the North Country National Scenic Trail traverses the Skyline Trail, the North Central Michigan College Natural Area, the Bear River Valley Recreation Area, the Little Traverse Wheelway, and the Northwestern Michigan Trail.

This event will be held in the Library Conference Room at North Central Michigan College, at 6 p.m. on Saturday, July 11. The public is invited to come and learn about the North Country Trail and about Strider's epic trek. Read more about "Strider" at stridernct.com.

In addition, the public is invited to participate with Strider in a group hike to the Cherry Valley Overlook along the North Country National Scenic Trail southeast of Petoskey. Those who would like to join chapter members for the hike should meet at the intersection of Welsh Road and Harmon Road at 2 p.m. This hike is less than 5 miles round trip.

Local Veteran's Administration update on expenditures

CHARLEVOIX — New data shows that 2,268 veterans in Charlevoix County at the end of the 2014 fiscal year were receiving VA benefits — with VA expenditures of more than $10.6 million. Of this total Charlevoix County veterans and their families received approximately $6.5 million in service connected disability compensation, DIC death compensation, veteran's pension and death pension benefits; $327,000 for educational and vocational rehabilitation benefits; $3,529,000 for medical care expenditures; $547,000 for unique patients' and $224,000 for insurance and indemnities from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

More than half of all VA expenditures, in the state, are paid directly to veterans and their families. The balance of the money is used to support the VA medical services and health care programs provided at Michigan's four VA Medical Centers, and 18 Community Based Outpatient Clinics located throughout the state.

Anyone with questions or who would like more information concerning veterans and dependent's benefits, contact the Veterans Affairs Office, 301 State St., Charlevoix or by calling (231) 547-7220. Their office is located on the first floor and it is the only office, which has, an American Flag at the front door. The office will be now be open Monday through Thursday with a half day on Friday.

The County Veterans Affairs Service officer will have office hours, at the Medical Center on Beaver Island, on the second Tuesday of each month. The hours will be from 1-4:30 p.m.

The County Veterans Affairs Service officer will have office hours in the County Annex Building in Boyne Falls on the first and third Wednesdays of each month.

The hours will be from noon-4 p.m.

Famed Venetian Festival three-on-three tournament returns under new leadership

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 • jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — It's an annual tradition dating back more than a decade and a big part to the kickoff of Charlevoix's Venetian Festival.

And now, the 3-on-3 basketball tournament that attracts teams from around the state to Ferry Beach is returning to the community on Sunday, July 19, with new faces at the helm.

Current Charlevoix High School girls basketball coach Liz Shaw and Charlevoix Director of Recreation Tom Kirilovic are taking over the event from former organizers Norman "Boogie" Carlson and Lisa Carlson after their successful 10-year tenure running the tournament.

With this year's tournament coming up in a couple of weeks, Shaw said she's looking forward to maintaining the tradition and quality of the event.

"It's kind of the kickoff to the Venetian Festival, in Charlevoix, and it's just a very fun tradition," Shaw said. "Every year we get a lot of people coming in to play, and I'm very excited to get the chance to be a part of organizing it."

The tournament has 12 divisions, six each for men and women, including two middle school divisions (fifth and sixth grade and seventh and eighth grade), two high school divisions (ninth and 10th grade and 11th and 12th grade), an adult recreational division and an open division.

Shaw said that she hopes to continue building and growing the event, especially in the lower age brackets.

"We really want to increase youth participation, especially among local kids and among girls," Shaw said. "We want to give locals a chance to get on the court and play during the summer, and especially for local girls, who don't always have opportunities for competitive play near home over the summer."

"Hopefully we can get as many people involved as possible and make it as good a tournament as it can be."

Shaw added that the location of the tournament, next to Charlevoix's Ferry Beach and right on Lake Michigan, is another big draw.

"We're right next to the beach, so the families of the players can spend the day by the lake while the games are going on, and players can use the beach in between games as well,"

Shaw said. "It's a beautiful location and there's a lot to do right nearby."

"On top of the lake we're going to have tents to give shade and plenty of water on hand to keep people cool and hydrated in the heat."

The cost to play is $80 for a four-man team, and participants can register at the City of Charlevoix's recreation department website, charlevoix.recdesk.com, under the programs tab, or contact Shaw at ishaw@rayder.net to receive an entry form.

All registration should be completed by Friday, July 17, in order to enter into the tournament.

"Basketball is a love of mine, and to be able to see kids and adults having fun out there on a beautiful summer day playing the sport makes me happy," Shaw said. "I'm really excited to have a whole day of games to really celebrate basketball in downtown Charlevoix."

Along with the 3-on-3 basketball tournament, Charlevoix also is hosting a 3-on-3 soccer tournament on Monday, July 20, as a part of the Venetian Festival.

The entry fee for the tournament is $50 for a four player team, and participants can register for that tournament on the Charlevoix Department of Recreation website as well.

Way takes first at Ryan Shay Midsummer Night Run

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CENTRAL LAKE — There's still more than a month remaining until Charlevoix graduate Amber Way joins the Michigan State women's cross country team for her freshman season.

But if Way's performance in the Ryan Shay Midsummer Night Run in Central Lake on the Fourth of July is any indication, she's close to midseason form already.

Way took first among the women in the annual 5K race held in honor of former Central Lake graduate Ryan Shay, who won 11 state titles in track and cross country before becoming a 10-time All-American at Notre Dame and a five-time U.S. National Champion before passing away on Nov. 3, 2007, of heart failure while running in the U.S. Olympic Marathon trials.

The Charlevoix native won the race by over a minute, in a blistering time of 18:35.5. That's within 45 seconds of the 17:51.5 she ran to finish runner-up in the state in Division 3 for cross country at Michigan International Speedway in November.

Recent Charlevoix graduate Amber Way, shown here on the cross country course, won the Ryan Shay Midsummer Night 5K race on July 4 in Central Lake as part of her preparation to run for the Michigan State cross country team in the fall.

The time is a continuing sign of Way's return to form as a runner after injuries nearly derailed her senior track and field season this spring.

Way missed the first half of the track season and struggled initially on her return, but the former state champion and Division 3 record-holder in the 3,200 run managed to persevere through the adversity and return to the Division 3 track and field state final in her signature event, taking second behind Kayla Keane of East Jordan and earning all-state honors in her last race as a Rayder.

In August, Way will become a member of a MSU team that is the defending national champions and is bringing in a very strong freshman class, including fellow former state champions Annie Fuller of Manistee, Kenzie Weiler of Cedar Rapids and Karrigan Smith of St. Johns, all under the direction of coach Walt Drenth, who grew up in Charlevoix.

Way wasn't the only winner at the race from Charlevoix, as Doug Bergmann finished in 19:44.5 to take first among males between the ages of 45 and 49.

Other runners from Charlevoix included Rachel Nesburg (24:34.8), Tim Stuhr (25:43.8), Brittany Stuhr (27:55.5), Emily Zmiky (29:48.3), Natalie Wynkoop (35:45.1), Jasmine Brooks (36:22.4), Jon Purdy (36:23.2), Jaidyn Brooks (40:19.4), Melissa Purdy (40:20.1)

Coach of the Year

Pat Schultz, St. Mary

While St. Mary second-year coach Pat Schultz has coached his varsity softball team to back-to-back Ski Valley Conference titles, he'd also be the first person to tell you he didn't do it alone. Along with assistant John Sullivan, Schultz led a young Snowbirds squad that started six underclassmen — including a handful of freshmen — to a Division 4 district final appearance against Hillman. Hillman edged St. Mary and eventually fell in the state semifinal to Kalamazoo Christian, but it's the Snowbirds who return every player from last season except two seniors. If Schultz's squad can overcome the graduation of star pitcher Savannah Sullivan as well lead-off batter Katie Rutkowski, St. Mary could be in line to win its third straight conference title and make a deeper run in the state tournament.

Father-daughter bond helps St. Mary's Sullivan hit her way to

Player of the Year

(989) 732-1111 • bfolsom@gaylordheraldtimes.com

St. Mary senior Savannah Sullivan bats against Alanson this past spring season.

GAYLORD — Entering her final season as a varsity softball player, St. Mary senior Savannah Sullivan, with the help of her father, John Sullivan, tweaked her approach to batting.

Instead of using her power as a hitter to swing for the fences each time, like she had done the past few seasons, she adjusted her focus to merely make contact and put the ball in play during each at-bat.

However, the strangest thing happened when Sullivan stopped swinging for the fences: she couldn't stop hitting the ball over them.

Sullivan's adjustment had paid dividends for her and her fellow Snowbirds, as she finished with 11 home runs, a .605 batting average and one unforgettable final season playing for her father. Because of Sullivan's ability to hit dingers, as the kids say now, Northern Prep Review selected her as its All-Area Softball Player of the Year.

"I was very happy with how I played this season, but I started off swinging for the fences," Savannah said. "I had to refocus myself and get my mental game right. Once I did that, my hitting fell in place."

John, St. Mary's assistant and pitching coach, had pestered Savannah to retool her mindset toward hitting for years. He always knew what would work best for his daughter because he had coached her in one league or another since she was 7.

"It's something my dad has always told me I needed to fix," Savannah said. "He's always like, 'you're trying too hard to hit the ball. You need to calm down and focus on contact, and it'll all go.' He would say I needed to focus on what needed to be done and not what I wanted to get done."

At the end of the season, what the Sullivans had helped St. Mary get done was win a second straight Ski Valley Conference title and make an appearance in the Division 4 district final.

Although Hillman, which fell to Kalamazoo Christian in the state semifinal, defeated the Snowbirds in the district final, Savannah ended the season with staggering statistics.

In 76 at-bats, the senior scored 50 runs and recorded 46 hits, 40 RBIs and 14 doubles. Her .605 batting average was one of the top averages a St. Mary player has ever had in school history.

Defensively, she was just as deadly. She was 18-5 as a pitcher, striking out 131 batters and walking 27. She pitched 114 2/3 innings and carried a 3.77 ERA.

With her high school career finished, Savannah will now focus on her collegiate career as she is signed to play for Jackson Community College next school year.

However, she said she's unsure how well she'll fare without John in the dugout alongside her in college. But she recognizes that playing at the next level is all a part of her growing up and maturing as a player.

"It's not hard playing for my dad because I've played for him since I was 7," Savannah said. "I'm used to him coaching me now, and I'm used to having him around."

"After a bad inning, I'd have him in the dugout to talk to and it was helpful having him there. It always amazed me how he could do that and make me better between innings, but I think it was because we connected so well and have worked together so long. It's going to be hard not playing for him in the future."

NOTICE OF
Mortgage Foreclosure Sale
THIS FIRM IS A DEBT COLLECTOR ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT. ANY INFORMATION WE OBTAIN WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE. PLEASE CONTACT OUR OFFICE AT THE NUMBER BELOW IF YOU ARE IN ACTIVE MILITARY DUTY.

ATTN PURCHASERS: This sale may be rescinded by the foreclosing mortgagee. In that event, your damages, if any, shall be limited solely to the return of the bid amount tendered at sale, plus interest.

MORTGAGE SALE - Default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage made by Heather Weischenberg and Keith A. Vincent, wife and husband, as joint tenants, original mortgagor(s), to Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., Mortgagee, dated August 5, 2008, and recorded on August 25, 2008 in Liber 0859 on Page 0485, and assigned by said Mortgagee to CitiMortgage, Inc. as assignee as documented by an assignment in Charlevoix county records, Michigan, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of One Hundred Twenty-Six Thousand Two Hundred Six and 65/100 Dollars ($126,206.65).

Under the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises, or some part of them, at public vendue, at the place of holding the circuit court within Charlevoix County, at 11:00 AM, on July 24, 2015.

Said premises are situated in City of East Jordan, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and are described as: Parcel C: Commencing at a 1/2 inch rod at the Southeast corner of Lot 6, Block 3 of Bowen's Addition to the Village of South Lake (now City of East Jordan); thence along the West line of Elm Street, South 0 degrees 23 minutes 37 seconds East 124.69 feet to a 1/2 inch rod; thence North 89 degrees 54 minutes 30 seconds West 90.03 feet to a 1/2 inch rod being the point of beginning of this description; thence South 0 degrees 55 minutes 04 seconds West 119.22 feet to a 1/2 inch rod on the Northeastly line of State Street; thence along said street line North 47 degrees 43 minutes 20 seconds West 4.33 feet to a 1/2 inch rod; thence continuing along said street line North 78 degrees 19 minutes 11 seconds West 94.84 feet to a 1/2 inch rod; thence North 0 degrees 55 minutes 04 seconds East 97.26 feet to a 1/2 inch rod; thence South 89 degrees 54 minutes 30 seconds East 96.43 feet to the point of beginning, being a part of the Northwest 1/4 of the Southwest 1/4 of Section 24, Township 32 North, Range 7 West.

The redemption period shall be 6 months from the date of such sale, unless determined abandoned in accordance with MCLA 600.3241a, in which case the redemption period shall be 30 days from the date of such sale.

If the property is sold at foreclosure sale under Chapter 32 of the Revised Judicature Act of 1961, pursuant to MCL 600.3278 the borrower will be held responsible to the person who buys the property at the mortgage foreclosure sale or to the mortgage holder for damaging the property during the redemption period.

Charlevoix Girl Scout Troop No. 10253 continued to make community service a priority during their scout year. During their fourth consecutive year, the girls donated food for Thanksgiving dinners to the Charlevoix food pantry and did Christmas caroling at Boulder Park. In addition, this year, the girls donated eight birthday bags to the local food pantry. The bags contained everything one would need for a party: cake mix, frosting, candles, napkins, plates, invitations, balloons and a birthday present and ribbon for the birthday boy or girl. Girls in Kindergarten through 12th grade can join Girl Scouting at any time during the year and is a great way for girls to build courage, confidence, life skills and make lifelong friendships. Cindy Maclean, of Walloon Lake, finds the perfect cooking accessory at Southwest Pepper Grinders. WaaDea Hudson, of Texas, first time vendor at the 47th annual Charlevoix Art and Craft Show, said the quality pepper grinders are made of stainless steel, which will not warp and the rounded hoes are designed to hold peppers for baking or grilling.

CHARLEVOIX — The crowds were large and the sky clear on July 11 at the annual art and craft show in East Park, an event that had organizers staying busy on Saturday.

Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce event planner Shelly Ferguson reported the vendors saw a nice turn out at the event. "The weather played a big factor in the attendance," she said.

Chamber officials had 145 vendors for the show and heard good reviews from local merchants and restaurants in downtown. Ferguson said the location is another reason people come to the show. "Many of our vendors have never been to Charlevoix," Ferguson said. "It was their first time here and they loved

East Park was filled with shoppers and visitors to the area to browse the more than 140 vendors on July 11 and 12, for the 47th annual Charlevoix Art and Craft Show sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce. Vendors featured a wide selection of unique handmade crafts and inspired creations. Shoppers found everything from handmade jewelry, metalwork, pottery, sculpture, paintings, quilts, clothing, furniture and more.

100 local jobs head south in plant closing

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — After more than 30 years in Charlevoix a manufacturing company will shut its doors and transfer 100 jobs south.

DE-STA-CO, a subsidiary of Dover Corp, which makes a range of automation and productivity equipment, plans to close its facility over the next 18 to 24 months.

Plants in Auburn Hills and Wheeling, Ill., also will see the production jobs move to a new factory located in Mount Juliet, Tenn., a suburb of Nashville.

Losing jobs in Charlevoix will be a blow local economy, said Charlevoix Township Supervisor Chuck Center.

"It's not good news at all," Center said. "You take 100 jobs out of a community this size and it hurts."

In a statement, DE-STA-CO said it was moving to Tennessee because of a number of factors, including proximity to customers, and better shipping efficiencies.

"This new facility supports our focus on developing and manufacturing market-leading high-performance work holding and automation solutions," said said Mats Ceder, president of DE-STA-CO in a news release. "A consolidated manufacturing operation helps us achieve a number of customer service, innovation and efficiency goals, and positions the company for further growth."

Most State Street paving expected to be completed before Venetian Festival

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Since mid-April Charlevoix businesses, residents and visitors have been dealing with major construction in the downtown area, but that may finally be coming to an end as road paving began this week on the State Street.

Paul Casciani, owner and manager of Village Graphics Inc., 111 Antrim St., said his business felt impact from the construction because many of his clients are commercial or orders handled through emails.

"I don't see that much walk-in traffic," Casciani said. "I would say about 7 to 8 percent of my business was affected, but that is expected when you through construction barrels and other obstacles up."

The 100 block of West Hurlbut Street is being paved without new curbs after they were torn out to replace the water main. City officials cite high costs and urgency to get the street open before Venetian Festival as some of their reasons for not replacing curb work.

Losing curb appeal

Hurlbut resident questions city about failing to replace street curb

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — For Kirk Ikens, watching construction crews tear up the 100 block of West Hurlbut Street to repair a busted water main was good news to the homeowner, until four months later when he learned city officials would not replace the curbs removed to make the underground fixes.

"Our block had street curbs before they tore it up," Ikens said. "I would like the curb back."

Native American veteran recognition ceremony

Bob Tidmore. "Our post is very proud to receive the help from this grant to honor these soldiers," Tidmore said.

The Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa & Chippewa Indians awarded the grant last fall to the AMVETS post to purchase bricks for Native American veterans from the Beaver Archipelago.

"We are very proud to recognize these veterans for their service," Tidmore said.

At 3 p.m., those who attended the ceremony and the public are invited to come see a free movie at the Beaver Island Community Center.

We plan on showing the movie "Road to Andersonville," Tidmore said.

The documentary is about the service of the 139 Native Americans who served in Company K, First Michigan Sharpshooters during the Civil War.

"To be part of that group of soldiers you had to be an accurate shooter," Tidmore said. "These guys were real good. Some of the members of that unit were captured and interred in the infamous Confederate Andersonville prison."

Those wishing to attend the dedication can travel to the island via the Beaver Island ferry, which on that day will have runs to the island from Charlevoix beginning at 8:30 a.m. There are return trips to the mainland after the dedication leaving the island at 2:20 p.m. and 5:20 p.m. It takes about 2 hours to get to the island on the ferry.

Air transportation is also available to the island from the Charlevoix airport. Trips by air to the island are approximately 20 minutes.

Beaver Island radio station on the airwaves

(231) 439-9353 - mbarrett@peloskeynews.com

BEAVER ISLAND — WVBI, Beaver Island's nonprofit radio station, is broadcasting on air after community volunteers donated funds and manpower to install necessary equipment.

The station, which is on-air had previously only been available in an online format, currently has about a five-mile broadcast range, but plans are in place to upgrade transmitting equipment to cover most of the island. Programming is available on FM channel 100.1.

"It's one of those things if you live on an island (a local radio station) would be nice to have but we've never have the opportunity," said operator Kevin Boyle. "When people found out we could, the community leapt behind it."

Programming is still being developed, but covers a wide range musical tastes. The main music block "Cottage Mix" features pop, oldies, country and jazz, catering to multi-generational homes on the island and summer vacationers.

Syndicated programs like Full Moon Hacksaw, the International Americana Music Show and Celtic Connections take over on the weekends. The station also will play recordings of music events on the island during the summer.

In addition to music, air time is dedicated to island news and politics.

"We thought it would be great to have a radio station to give people on the island a voice and as a forum to discuss of issues on the island that no other media will cover," Boyle said.

Equipment for the low power FM station was either donated or paid for through volunteer fundraising after obtaining a license from the FCC in January 2014. Broadcasting was done through internet streaming while funds were raised and is still available at wvbi.net.

"Overall we raised $10,000 for equipment," Boyle said. "People donated a lot of the computers and equipment. Many Islanders volunteered to put the station on the air, the value of everything is more like $75,000."

The station currently broadcasts from a 30-foot-tall transmitter that covers the northern half of the island, but Boyle said there are plans to relocate to a location in the middle of the island that will allow for a transmitter more than twice as tall.

The station also is working toward hosting radio skills workshops that would teach recording, editing and producing audio, and FCC rules. The classes are tentatively scheduled for the first week of August and more will be developed for children in a partnership with Beaver Island Community School.

DNR reviews public input for Fisherman's Island State Park management plan

MALACHI BARRETT
(231) 439-9353 - mbarrett@peloskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — After months of collecting public opinion, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources is reviewing input on the first General Management Plan for Fisherman's Island State Park since 1974.

Residents and visitors to the Charlevoix County park were invited to share their opinions and ideas through an online survey, which closed June 24, and participate in further discussion of a draft concept at a June 22 stakeholder meeting.

"We had some good input and a variety of different opinions," said Debbie Jensen, DNR park management plan administrator. "We have to get that information together to the planning team and make our recommendations for the final plan."

More than 30 community leaders and concerned citizens attended the stakeholder meeting, including representatives of Charlevoix Township, the Charlevoix Chamber, city of Charlevoix, Top of the Michigan Trails Council, Antrim County, Charlevoix Historical Society, Norwood Township, Water and Air Team Charlevoix, Friends of Fisherman's Island State Park, Traverse Area Recreational Trails, Coyote Club, Norwood Township, Norwood Historical Society, Lake to Lake Charlevoix Multi-Use Trail and Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council.

The General Management Plan for Fisherman's Island State Park defines a 10- to 20-year planning and management strategy that will assist the DNR Parks and Recreation Division in preserving the site's natural and cultural resources and provide access to recreational and educational opportunities.

The park will be divided into management zones based on its various resources including its historical, educational and scientific value, to name a few. Planners asked stakeholders to identify their concerns on maps and presented an informational session followed by discussion.

JoAnn Beemon, chairwoman of a group known as Friends of Fisherman's Island State Park, said she was pleased with the considerations the DNR made in conserving the rustic setting of the park, one of its key features for campers and nature enthusiasts.

"Basically I thought that this whole management plan is a really good thing because it's a resource-based evaluation of what the current park offers and how it best can be developed and protected to serve the people of Michigan," Beemon said. "They are looking to protect those things we think are special. I'm very pleased they are looking at the natural assets of the park and are willing to respect them."

Jensen said there are two additional internal meetings scheduled before the recommendation will be made, though the DNR plans to have a draft available in September. After the draft is released, another open meeting will be held to review the plan.

"I would say the current plan is not recommending any major changes, concerning what we have," Jensen said. "We do want to study access at the southern end of the park, and that was discussed."

Jensen said issues with park roads were brought to planners before the public opinion survey was opened. Entrance roads into the north end of the park and routes in the southern part of the 2,678-acre park are in need of repair, she said.

"There is a need for an engineering study of the road into the park from Bells Bay Road," Jensen said. "There are some problems with erosion and drainage, so that roadway has a big need."

DNR planners also are considering improvements to the park office facilities like the Park Contact Station, which has no water or sanitation facilities. At least one other service building was identified for renovation as well.

Overall, Jensen said the general concept for the management plan is to be more active in the north end of the park where a majority of the camping is. Planners want to keep the south end fairly undeveloped and unspoiled.

The survey attracted around 400 participants. In addition to inquiring about park use and visiting habits, the survey asked residents their opinion of a proposed regional trail initiative that would link Charlevoix to Traverse City and extend the Little Traverse Wheelway south. The non-motorized pathway would run through Fisherman's Island State Park.

Clearzoning Inc. is a consultant contracted by the parks and recreation division to facilitate the management planning process. The Lathrup Village-based firm will consolidate public input into a readable format for DNR officials and help develop the Management Zone Plan. Management Zones are developed based upon input from DNR experts, key stakeholders and the community.

Council person's duty is to represent the people and the best interest of the city

Editor:

As a first ward resident, I am confused how one council person's right to his opinion is detrimental and bigoted while the other can make negative statements against his fellow council members. I have not always agreed with Mr. Porter, but I know that he is representing people in his ward that have expressed concerns on issues. That is his right and why he was elected.

As far as being anti-business, I haven't seen any fewer empty store fronts downtown because of positive actions from any other council people. And as for the sky diving, in this litigious society that we live in, I am happy that representatives are making sure that city liability is truly not a concern. It only takes one person to file a suit because a box wasn't checked or a release was not properly committed. And we cannot afford that, especially with the aging infrastructure issues.

I, personally, respect the council members that put their own personal and business concerns aside when dealing with issues that will affect the entire town. That is why they are elected. And I thank them for their due diligence.

Social Security Administration has benefits for qualifying children too public relations specialist for Social Security Administration

VONDA VAN TIL

Social Security serves a person for life — from birth, to death, and even beyond, by helping to care for surviving dependents. When a parent becomes disabled or dies, Social Security benefits help to stabilize the family's financial future in an otherwise turbulent time. And we pay benefits to adults and children.

In July, the world celebrates World Youth Day. Social Security is no stranger to helping children in need. Every year, about 4.4 million children receive monthly benefits because one or both of their parents are disabled, retired or deceased. Those benefits help with their day-to-day needs.

In addition, Social Security provides vital income for disabled children, including people disabled since childhood, through our Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) program and our Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program.

To qualify for children's benefits under the SSDI program, the applicant must be the child of a parent entitled to benefits and meet Social Security's strict definition of disability. He or she must have a physical or mental condition, or a combination of disabling conditions, that seriously limits his or her daily activities and is expected to last for at least 12 months or result in death.

The SSI program provides payments to blind or disabled children who live in households with low income and limited resources if they meet our strict definition of disability. You can find more information on eligibility requirements by visiting our website at socialsecurity.gov.

If you think your child may qualify for children's benefits, you can apply by calling Social Security toll-free at (800) 772-1213 — TTY (800) 325-0778 — or by visiting your local Social Security office. You also can read our publication, Benefits for Children, at socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

LETTERS to the editor

Main Street program requires everyone working together

Editor:

I have enjoyed the food, beverages, ambiance and friendly service at the Tap Room and Charlevoix Brewing on several occasions. While I understand that these are for-profit businesses, I believe that from the get-go an important objective of the owners has been to be good partners with other downtown businesses and to have a positive impact on Charlevoix. I believe they have succeeded marvelously in this regard. Besides sourcing many of their products locally and providing several jobs, they have added a much needed vibrancy to the downtown. Their outdoor seating areas provide welcoming and comfortable places to enjoy a beverage or meal without obstructing sidewalk traffic.

As with any new business, these businesses are undoubtedly experiencing growing pains and are still learning how best to appeal to their customers while at the same time meeting the expectations of the larger community. I have every reason to believe that the owners are committed to getting this right.

If, as reported in the June 26 edition of the Courier, citizens have complaints about what these businesses — or any other businesses, for that matter — are doing, I would suggest that they take their complaints to the business owners and try to work it out before lodging complaints with the city. And if there are code violations, perhaps consideration should be given to modifying the codes or granting waivers where there is no health, public safety or other compelling need for enforcement.

As for the belief that businesses should not have use of city property, I find this shortsighted on both historical and logical grounds. For as long as I can remember we have had several businesses operating on city property. Consider the concession stands at the ball fields and the beaches, the flight services operating at the airport and the cruise vessels using the municipal marina. This cooperation between the city and business has provided mutual benefit and has helped to make Charlevoix the welcoming community that it is. Logically, I believe that our city leaders should not only have the freedom, but the responsibility to use the city's properties in ways that best benefit the city as a whole. If making properties available for commercial use is the best use, then that is what should be done.

If Charlevoix's Main Street program is to succeed it will because we are all working together and because we have internalized the belief that if one succeeds we all succeed. It is a formula that has worked pretty well in the past and has great potential to bring positive change in the future.

Charlevoix needs new dog park

Dear Editor:

Have you ever thought about how Charlevoix needs a dog park? Well I have! Downtown, a fenced in dog park, where dogs can run around without a leash, dogs big or little! This is a great idea because first, if you live in a neighborhood there is no room for your dog to run around in. Secondly, taking your dog to the park is safer. What I mean by that is the dog park will be fenced in. Finally when you take your dog to the dog park, YOU will meet new people.

First, when you live in a neighborhood, your dog could not run around as much as they would in a dog park. Your dog will not get much exercise. Your dog needs a lot of exercise. Without exercise your dog can get unhealthy.

Secondly, your dog would be safer in a dog park. For example, your dog can get loose and your dog can run out into the road. The dog park will be fenced in so your dog will be safe.

Finally, when you take your dog to the dog park, your dog won't be the only one that will make friends, your family might make new friends too. So the dog park is not only helping your dog but it is helping you also with a lot of things.

A dog park in downtown Charlevoix would be helpful and benefit for our community.

Charlevoix needs more lifeguards

Dear Editor:

I think there should be lifeguards on every beach, every day. Lots of people come to Charlevoix to swim at our beaches. It would be safer and more relaxing for families with kids if there was a life-guard at every beach. People could spend money at the snack booths and that could help pay for the lifeguards. Also, swimming is great exercise. Parents would feel better about letting their kids go swimming if they knew that they were safe. My friends and I are always looking for fun, healthy things to do in the summer. It would be a tragedy if something happened to a kid that could have been prevented by a lifeguard. Lifeguarding is a great summer job for high school kids coming home from college. Lifeguards at all beaches in Charlevoix would make summer better for everyone!

Sincerely,
Annakate Smith

COMMUNITY Highlights

Skatepark celebrates one decade of fun

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Community Skatepark will celebrate its 10th summer this weekend. The park was started by one's boy dream of having a skate park, Zeke Daman, and by writing a letter to the editor in 2004. After that, a group of parents formed a non-profit and worked closely with the Charlevoix City staff and the park became a reality in June, 2006.

An advisory board of local teens worked tirelessly with the nonprofit group to help design the park and were hands on in building the park. The cost to build the park was $160,000. The park is a custom designed by Suburban Rails out of Ohio and was paid for by many grants, gifts in-kind, a land donation and has city insurance coverage.

A joint effort to build the park was done by D.S. Stebe Construction and Suburban Rails. Patsy Ramsey, Vicki Daman, Vicki Hankins, Michelle Witthoeft, Scott and Laura Stebe, John McLean, Cynthia Parker and other behind-the-scene parents did numerous fundraisers, provided services, and wrote many grants, that helped to fast-track the project and get it open by June, 2006.

This was literally unheard of to get a park done in that short of time, but thanks to the generosity of Charlevoix and community members it was done. On July 15, 2015, the city owned and operated park held its grand opening.

Helmets are required and there is a small fee to use the park. A Patsy Ramsey Scholarship fund is set up for anyone who would like to participate and needs financial assistance. No user will be turned away due to lack of funds. The park has been a great recreational asset to the City of Charlevoix.

The Skatepark thanks the original crew of boys who each were instrumental in the park: Zeke Daman, Brennan Stebe, Conrad Klooster, John Curtis, Jake McLean, Stephen Parker, Mick Papp, Burke Ramsey, Kendall Francis, Matty and Andrew Mailloux, Taylor Witthoeft, Cam Canupp, Brett Ludwig, and Mitchell Klooster. All of these were locals boys who made a dream a reality.

Auction to help fund Venetian Festival

CHARLEVOIX — This Venetian 2015 original artwork titled "Welcome" has been donated by Kathleen Chaney Fritz. Chaney Fritz, one of Michigan's most talented artists, is particularly noted for capturing so beautifully the essence of Michigan — and as seen here, the essence of Charlevoix, Michigan.

This donated framed art will be auctioned at 7 p.m. Friday, July 24, in East Park, following the Venetian Queen coronation. Proceeds from the auction, along with donations from the community help fund the Charlevoix Venetian Festival.

If unable to attend, contact Anne Golski at (231) 675-2164 to place a silent bid or to arrange for a proxy bidder at the auction.

Summer is better on two wheels

CHARLEVOIX — Warm summer sun, long days and riding your bike; we all have those childhood memories. Now, thanks to Revolution Bike in Charlevoix, Michigan Department of Health and Human Services, Char-Em United Way and Northern Knights Motorcycle Club, forty kids have the chance to make their own summer memories.

On July 1, representatives from Michigan Department of Health and Human Services, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Char-Em United Way and Northern Knights Motorcycle Club were on hand in the American Red Cross parking lot to distribute bikes and helmets.

"Char-Em United Way was thrilled to bring together this great collaboration, the donation of bikes and helmets fits perfectly with United Way's focus area of improving health and wellness. All of these partners are truly living united. They are giving back to our community, volunteering their time and advocating for happier life for others," said Lorraine Manary, executive director of Char-Em United Way.

Several years ago, Chet Morris, owner of Revolution Bike of Charlevoix, spearheaded the Bikes for Kids project.

"I wanted to reach out on a local level in a way that gets bikes to kids who otherwise could not afford them," Morris said. "It feels good and benefits all of us by reusing and recycling a great product."

This year Char-Em United Way worked with and Human Services and Big Brothers/Big Sisters in Emmet and Charlevoix counties to get the bikes to kids who needed them.

"We love this project and love spreading the joy by getting the bikes to kids who otherwise wouldn't have one this summer," said Manary.

The members of the Northern Knights Motorcycle Club were on hand to distribute the new helmets that they donated when the children picked up their bikes.

"Our members were happy to donate the helmets for the kids getting a bike," said Tony Slowinski, president of the Northern Knights Motorcycle Club. "We do a toy run every fall, so this was just another way we could help the kids and give something back."

The "Veteran of the Month" for July 2015, is Ronald Duane Whitbeck.

Born Dec. 2, 1929, in Flint, Whitbeck attended grammar and high school 1934-1945 in Flushing, and graduated in the class of 1947 from Elk Rapids High School. In January 1948, Whitbeck worked as a pinsetter for Red Crown Bowling in Elkhart, Ind., and in July of 1948 he went to work for the E & W Railroad, Elkhart, Ind., as a section hand, putting in ties, laying rail, spiking ties to rail and cutting brush around the tracks. On July 20, 1948, at Indianapolis, Ind., Whitbeck enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps that began a career of 20 years, 8 months and 11 days ending on March 31, 1969, and included tours of duty in Korea and Vietnam. On Sept. 22, 1966, in Memphis, Tenn., Whitbeck married Jeri Lou Mays. Whitbeck received an honorable discharge having attained the rank of Gunnery Sergeant and was awarded the following Decorations and Citations: The Korean Service Medal with one Bronze Battle Star, The United Nations Service Medal, The National Defense Service Medal, The Korean Presidential Unit Citation, The Vietnam Service Medal with 1 Bronze Battle Star, The Vietnam Campaign Medal with 60 Device, The Pistol Sharpshooter Badge, and The Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal Fifth Award.

Returning to civilian life Whitbeck made his home in Boyne City and later in Bay Shore, going to work for The U.S. Postal service in Petoskey, for several years and moved to Gaylord, working at the Gaylord Post Office for seven and a half years. Whitbeck enjoyed sports, bowling, hunting and fishing and on Jan. 1, 1983, Whitbeck fell, suffering a head injury. On Jan. 14, 1983, Ronald Duane Whitbeck answered the final call and is being honored by his children and their families.

To honor a veteran, call the program chairman at (231) 588-6067 or from 3:30-8:30 p.m. on Tuesdays call (231) 582-7811. The ceremony may be witnessed at 6:15 p.m. on the first Thursday of each month at The American Legion Post located on the corner of South Lake St. and Main St. in Boyne City.

CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

LOOKING BACK...

This house once stood across the alley from the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House on State Street. The couple standing by the gate are Lemuel D. and Mary Blanchard Bartholomew. Lemuel was once one of the town's most prominent businessmen. He arrived in October 1872 and went into business partnership with Egbert Carpenter who had opened a hardware/furniture store on Bridge Street approximately where the East Park band shell is today. In 1875, Lemuel and Mary moved into the house that Carpenter had erected next to the store on the Antrim Street corner. In 1882, Lemuel constructed a stately brick building at the corner of Park Avenue and Bridge Street — now the site of Berkshire Hathaway, and he soon became one of Northern Michigan's leading hardware merchants. He built this brick house in 1886. Older Charlevoix residents will remember it as the residence of Charlie and Pauline Hamlin. In 1897, they bought more than 37 acres on the west Lake Michigan shoreline, but did nothing with it. Long after she was widowed, in the early 1920s Mary intended to develop the land into an upscale resort colony called Bartholomew's Boulder Park, and hired Earl Young to plat out 85 lots. But family problems intervened and they had to sell in 1924. Earl took over and went on to develop the Boulder Park we know today. The house is now the State Street parking lot of the Charlevoix State Bank. Mary Bartholomew lived to be more than 100 years old. In June, the Historical Society received two large oil portraits of her and Lemuel in gilded oval frames.

Rowe Inn awarded Wine Spectator's Best of Excellence award for 2015

ELLSWORTH — The Rowe Inn, of Ellsworth, was recently awarded Wine Spectator Magazine's 2015 Best of Excellence award. The magazine hosts the competition each year and awards restaurants whose wine lists offer interesting selections that are appropriate to their cuisine and which appeal to a wide range of wine lovers. Wine Spectator, a New York based publication with a broad readership and a discerning palette for the world's wines, is considered the wine industry's media standard for wine and wine-related restaurant reviews. "This year, 3,618 restaurants from all 50 states and more than 75 other countries and territories earned an award from Wine Spectator for their outstanding wine programs. Of these, 2,563 earned the Award of Excellence, which recognizes a wine list of about 90 or more quality wine selections that thematically matches a restaurant's cuisine. Another 973 earned the Best of Award of Excellence for offering a wine list of typically 350 or more selections with significant vintage depth or superior breadth in one or more major wine regions," according to Wine Spectator's website review.

Despite being located in what The Rowe Inn website refers to as a "a culinary wasteland," their cuisine, wines and French-styled dining experience have lured some discriminating taste buds into the area.

The Rowe Inn is located at 6303 East Jordan Road, Ellsworth. For more information, visit roweinnc.com or call (231) 588-7351.

A $50,000 commitment from the Oleson Foundation will go to help add a third operating room along with renovating the entire Surgical Suite.

Hospital foundation announces $50,000 commitment from the Oleson Foundation

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation announced a $50,000 commitment from the Oleson Foundation toward its FORWARD Campaign.

The campaign will provide funding for Charlevoix Area Hospital's current capital project, which will add a third operating room along with renovating the entire Surgical Suite and Laboratory in an effort to better meet the evolving health care needs of its patients, namely a rapidly growing demand for outpatient surgeries. Work has already been completed on a new Chemotherapy-Infusion Center and an expansion of the hospital's primary care facility in Boyne City — Boyne Area Medical Center.

"The Oleson Foundation is excited to make this commitment to Charlevoix Area Hospital and the communities it serves," said Don Oleson, president of the Oleson Foundation board of trustees. "We are proud of our history of collaboration with local nonprofits to enhance the quality of life for those living in Northern Michigan."

This project is part of a series of improvements to accommodate the growth of important patient programs, increase efficiency in the surgical suite, enhance the patient experience, and add flexibility for future change and technology. Ultimately, it will position the hospital for a sustainable, effective future to continue to best serve area residents and visitors. The cost of the projects is approximately $8.25 million.

"We are very appreciative of the Oleson Foundation's commitment to our efforts," said Hospital CEO, Lyn Jenks. "Projects of this scale are only possible for us with generous investments by community members and organizations. The Oleson Foundation has shown its dedication to our community many times, and we are so pleased to partner with them once again."

The Oleson Foundation was started by Gerald and Frances Oleson in 1962 and was designed to continually perform good works in Northwestern Lower Michigan. The foundation searches for sustainable, collaborative projects and programs that improve the quality of life for area residents, in particular in the areas of education, environment, community development, and health and human services.

"Having access to high quality healthcare is a core part of our mission, and Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation's FORWARD Campaign furthers that goal," said Kathy Hushcke, foundation executive director. Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization working to raise and manage funds to benefit Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Chicago Club Fund helps fund Camp McSauba summer day camp

CHARLEVOIX — Camp McSauba, a summer day camp operated by the city of Charlevoix, is off to a great start again this summer. Young campers enjoying traditional camp activities are benefiting from the support of Chicago Club members, who have provided scholarships to make it possible for youth to attend camp.

Utilizing a fund they established at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, the members of the Chicago Club have supported projects to benefit Charlevoix's young people, with some $122,600 in supplemental resources in the past fifteen years.

"The Chicago Club Fund quietly and consistently helps Charlevoix youth who have nowhere else to turn," said Maureen Radke, program officer at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation assist struggling families with medical and dental needs, provide school health and wellness programs, student counseling and more. The Camp McSauba scholarships are an extension of the Chicago Club's desire to improve the quality of life for Charlevoix youth, and this year's grant will allow more than twenty campers to enjoy a week at camp that their families may not otherwise have been able to afford.

"The financial support from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the donors of the Chicago Club provide children with the opportunity to gain wonderful memories to last a lifetime by participating in a week at summer camp. The City of Charlevoix would like to extend a very heartfelt, appreciative thank you to the Chicago Club on behalf of the children who received scholarships," said Tom Kirinovic, recreation department director.

Camp McSauba is located at the Mount McSauba recreation area on the North Point nature preserve. Daily activities include small and large group games, arts and crafts, BB gunnery, archery and field sports. Each day also would not be complete without a trip to the Lake Michigan beach. Camp sessions run five days per-week, with an awards ceremony for campers, parents, grandparents and friends each Friday morning.

The Chicago Club Fund also supports civic enrichment activities that are enjoyed by virtually the entire community. These activities include the Venetian Festival, the petunia planting program, improvements in East Park, and support to a variety of nonprofit agencies.

"The benefits of the Chicago Club Fund can be seen and felt everywhere in the Charlevoix area, by residents and visitors alike," Radke said.

The Chicago Club was established in 1880, and today, many of the original families continue to maintain cottages in the association. Although most members are summer residents of Charlevoix, the club has a long history of generously supporting local causes.

"The Chicago Club's impact in Charlevoix extends well beyond the boundaries of the Club," said Chip Hansen, president of the Community Foundation. "We have long appreciated their commitment to supporting projects and services that benefit youth and the broader community."

The Chicago Club's Fund is among the 271 funds held by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, each one designated to support a specific cause or address general needs in education, the environment, arts and culture, health, and recreation.

For more information about grant application deadlines or other programs of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, call the foundation office at (231) 536-2440, visit the foundation's website at c3f.org or email Chip Hansen, president at chansen@c3f.org.

Rides on tri-motor airplane to be offered in August

CHARLEVOIX — A one-of-a-kind flight experience will be available for people in Charlevoix and surrounding areas, as the Experimental Aircraft Association's 1929 Ford Tri-Motor tour will make a stop at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 10-12.

The tour allows residents and visitors the opportunity to experience flight aboard the world's first mass-produced airliner.

During EAA's Ford Tri-Motor Tour, passengers will travel back to the early days of what was considered luxurious commercial air travel. The Ford Motor Company built the Ford Tri-Motor, or the "Tin Goose" as it is often called, in 1929, and it has a colorful history, with roles ranging from service as a Cuban airliner to fighting forest fires and transporting smoke jumpers.

After a thunderstorm flipped and nearly destroyed the airplane in 1973, EAA founder Paul Poberezny purchased the aircraft. It then underwent a 12-year restoration to return to flying status with many of the same features it had in the late 1920s.

The airplane also has a Hollywood pedigree, as it made cameo appearances in two major motion pictures — 1965's "The Family Jewels" starring Jerry Lewis and 2009's "Public Enemies" starring Johnny Depp.

EAA's Tri-Motor can carry up to ten passengers at a time, with every seat a window seat.

Passengers are encouraged to bring a camera to record and share this experience.

Rides are from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

BOYNE CITY

Free Clinic home to new food pantry

BOYNE CITY — The Boyne Area Free Clinic is the home for the new Good Neighbors Food Pantry. The pantry is refurbishing an area on the west side of the clinic's building at 624 State St., in Boyne City, and will open its doors in the near future.

Both organizations share the goal of helping people in need.

"We have available space in our building," said Free Clinic board president Deonna Crouterfield. "And the pantry needs a home, so it makes perfect sense. We support anything that helps the community."

Boyne Area Free Clinic is an independent nonprofit community organization committed to providing basic medical care to those who do not otherwise have access to such services. Its mission is to provide health care, with respect and dignity, to underserved Charlevoix County residents, with the help of qualified medical volunteers and staff.

The Good Neighbors Food Pantry of Boyne City recently formed to help improve access to healthy foods for families in need. Before opening its doors, the pantry will be busy preparing its new space at the Free Clinic. According to Susan Conklin, the work involves things like painting and installing or building shelving. Community involvement is sought for these improvements, as well as volunteers to help with the pantry operations.

For more information about Good Neighbors Food Pantry or to volunteer, email goodneighborsboyne@gmail.com, or visit the Volunteer Connections page at charemunitedway.com. Donations may be sent to Good Neighbors Food Pantry, P.O. Box 35, Boyne City, MI 49712.

The Free Clinic, which formed in 2007, is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. every Friday. Local physician Richard Mansfield, DO, serves as medical director. The Clinic is staffed by volunteers and provides services for acute non-emergent conditions and primary care services to those individuals that fall into the no-income or low income, no insurance or under insured category.

The Free Clinic has recently refurbished other areas of their building in order to offer dental and vision screenings. Jennifer Larson, DDS, will be performing basic dental screenings, as well as recommending further treatment as necessary through referrals. Other dental professionals are welcome to join the effort in providing screenings. The Clinic is still seeking a professional to provide vision screenings.

In addition to vision and dental professionals, the clinic is seeking other medical professionals to provide services. They also have openings on the board of directors, and can always use volunteers in a variety of capacities. Donations are also welcome. A benefit for the Free Clinic will be held the Eagles Lodge, later this year, details to come.

For more information, contact the Free Clinic at (231) 582-4605.

BookTalkers discuss Andy Weir's "The Martian"

CHARLEVOIX — BookTalkers, the Charlevoix Public Library's book discussion group, is reading "The Martian" by Andy Weir, and will host a discussion at 6 p.m., on July 20, in the Armstrong Conference Room.

When a dust storm on Mars forces the crew of the United States' third Ares mission to evacuate the planet, astronaut Mark Watney is knocked unconscious in the chaos and presumed dead. When he wakes up he's alone, with little to no hope of rescue. He is, however, the mission engineer, the fix-it guy, and with intelligence and grit he goes to work to stay alive. Software engineer Andy Weir has penned a completely believable story of ingenuity and strength in the face of seemingly insurmountable odds.

BookTalkers is a group of readers who love to read different books that may challenge or delight. They gather monthly for lively discussions. Looking ahead, BookTalkers will discuss "Not My Father's Son" by actor and writer Alan Cumming on Monday, Aug. 17.

The BookTalkers group meet at 6 p.m. on the third Monday of each month. New members are always welcome. For discussion questions, visit the book discussion page charlevoixlibrary.org/books-movies-music-book-discussions.

Comfort Keepers announces Golden Wishes program

TRAVERSE CITY — To commemorate its 10-year anniversary, Comfort Keepers of Northern Lower Michigan has created the Golden Wishes program, giving local seniors the opportunity to have a wish come true this year.

The purpose of Golden Wishes is to honor local, deserving seniors who have given of themselves by offering a chance at receiving the wish of a lifetime, something on their bucket list, something they may have thought it was too late to pursue. Comfort Keepers is committed to making a difference in the lives of area seniors and is thankful for the trust instilled by local families to care for their loved ones since 2005.

"This year marks our 10th anniversary," said Leslie Knopp, Comfort Keepers owner. "Golden Wishes is our chance to celebrate and brighten seniors' lives with an opportunity they might never have been able to pursue on their own. It's our way of giving back to the community that has supported us these past 10 years."

A nominating friend or family member can request a number of different types of wishes. These might include: reconnecting loved ones, attending events or concerts, participating in a former hobby or passion that is now challenging — ride in classic car, horseback riding, the purchase of a computer to connect virtually with family, installation of a wheelchair ramp, renewing wedding vows or maybe even help planting a garden.

Nominations will be accepted July 1 – Aug. 17 and can be submitted online at goldenwishesupnorth.com or by filling out a form available at Comfort Keepers' offices. Family and friends are encouraged to submit nominations for admirable seniors.

To be eligible, the nominee must be a minimum age of 65, a resident of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Crawford, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Manistee, Otsego or Wexford counties, unable to fulfill the wish on their own and capable of experiencing the wish.

Finalists will be selected by a panel of judges formed by Comfort Keepers, based on adherence to age and residence requirements, integrity of the nominee, senior's community involvement, impact that granting of the wish would have on the nominee and the ability and practicality of administering the wish. Winners will then be selected by review of written entries and/or phone interviews.

Winners will be announced in September, and a celebration will take place in October for Comfort Keepers 10-year Anniversary and all Golden Wishes recipients. In 10 years, Comfort Keepers of Northern Lower Michigan has helped 2,598 families, served 21 counties, provided 1,278,000 hours of service to seniors, and awarded 28 college scholarships to caregivers.

For more information about Golden Wishes, call (231) 929-9044 or like "Comfort Keepers Northern Lower Michigan" on Facebook.

WoofStock to take place at Mackinaw Trails Winery

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Area Humane Society will host its second annual WoofStock music and pet festival from noon-7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 1. It will be a full-day event to celebrate a wide variety of music to support the North West Michigan Region and its fauna, organizers said in a news release.

The fundraiser will be at the facility and grounds of Mackinaw Trails Winery on U.S. 131 south of Petoskey. There will be 12 to 15 bands performing during the day and early evening on three stages, an open mike stage and other activities, followed up by a headline act later in the evening. This setting and lineup will give enthusiasts several venues and a great variety of entertainment options. There will also be animal agility demonstrations, sheep herding, a pet contest and more.

Food, crafts and pet related vendors will be in attendance to sell and show off their products and services. Mackinaw Trails Winery will provide beer and wine sales during the event. Admission is $10.

Charlevoix-Emmet ISD seeks local AmeriCorps members

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District asks for interested individuals to become 2015-16 AmeriCorps members. Members will have the opportunity to make a difference through literacy efforts, community service projects, volunteering with nonprofits, conducting outreach presentations, improving leadership skills and more.

As part of the ISD's AmeriCorps program, members are assigned to a local elementary school to serve as a reading tutor. Applicants must have a positive, patient and encouraging manner while working one-on-one with at-risk students.

These full-time positions are a 10 month commitment and require completion of 1,700 hours of service throughout the 2015-16 school year. Benefits include a living stipend of $12,530, an education award of $5,645, and single-subscriber health insurance for those who qualify. Members must be at least 17 years, have a high school diploma or GED and be free of any criminal convictions.

The Char-Em ISD AmeriCorps program serves 11 school districts within ISD service area of Charlevoix, Emmet, and northern Antrim counties.

To apply or find more information, visit charemid.org and look for the AmeriCorps logo on the right hand side of the homepage, or call (231) 547-9947.

"The infrastructure improvements were needed, and Elmer's did their best to keep things moving."

Charlevoix Department of Public Works manager Pat Elliott said major construction should end before Venetian Festival begins, with some time needed for final restoration.

"We expect concrete work and the paving to be completed by July 17," Elliott said.

The city contracted with Team Elmer's Construction for the $1.2 million construction project, to replace pavement, sidewalks, utilities and drainage systems along the three-block section of State Street between Hurlbut and Clinton streets. The work to complete the infrastructure improvements on State Street was originally scheduled to be completed at the end of June, but because of weather, conflicts with other utilities and the scope of this project Elmer's faced delays.

"A number of factors pushed the construction behind," Elliott said.

Typically this pipe installation would take place at 4 to 5 feet deep, however, this particular project called for water main and sanitary sewer nearly 20 feet deep. The added depth was a potential safety concern to work crews, Elliott said.

"Excavation work at the depth takes more time," Elliott said. "Elmer's crews took added precautions and did the job in a safe manner."

There is a provision in the construction contract which allows for a $1,300 per day penalty for delays.

"The city hasn't committed to anything dealing with that provision," Elliott said.

A large asphalt machine is used as crews start paving the intersection of Mason and State streets on July 14. The streets are expected to be finished by the start of Venetian Festival.

Manager Pat Elliott recommended city council approve combining the project to include the water main at the intersection of State and West Hurlbut streets because the cold winter temperatures froze a significant portion of that main. The pipe was replaced with a thicker water main that was buried deeper and will be less susceptible to freezing during the winter months.

Ikens, who lives at 108 W. Hurlbut St., is not angry about the construction or the fact West Hurlbut has been torn up for four months. He just doesn't see the city's logic to not replace the curb, especially when the decision was made to hold off paving the road until crews began the same work on the State Street project.

"I was happy when they decided to combine the water main fix with the State Street project," Ikens said. "I know it needed to be done. I just want to know why the city does not replace what was already there. It doesn't make sense."

Ikens also was informed by city officials they cannot wait to install new curbs because the 100 block of West Hurlbut needs asphalt placed so the Michigan Department of Transportation can approve the request to close U.S. 31 for Venetian Festival.

"MDOT has stated that if Hurlbut and State streets are not paved, they will not permit the city to close down Bridge Street," said interim city manager Mike Spencer.

Spencer said Hurlbut is the ideal street for the detour because it is wider to accommodate larger trucks and the city can close parking spaces at the intersection of State and Hurlbut streets so large trucks are able to make wide turns. It also makes more sense because of its proximity to commercial businesses.

"One side of Hurlbut is commercial and there will be less of a traffic impact to residen-

"I just want to know why the city does not replace what was already there."

— Kirk Ikens, resident

tial homes than if we were to use another street for the detour," Spencer said.

Besides not replacing the curbs, city officials also decided only to patch the 100 block of Hurlbut with blacktop, even though a majority of the street surface is gone. It's upsetting to know the home that his family has paid taxes on for 55 years is losing its "curb appeal," Ikens said.

"It was my grandmother's home before I got it about 20 years ago," Ikens said. I've been eating dust for the last four months believing my block was being improved when in actuality it's diminishing."

Ikens brought the matter to the city council during their last regular meeting on July 6. Ikens said to council members that he spoke with the project manager for Elmer's and he was told the cost would be in the vicinity of $10,000. A majority of council members did appear to want to fix the street properly.

"He is right," said council member Jeff Porter. "We have the money and this is what we should be spending it on. Our city residents."

Spencer said to council this could set an expensive precedent when the city needs to make emergency repairs to infrastructure.

"This could create greater issues for the city each time we need to dig something up or make a small fix somewhere," Spencer said.

Spencer agrees the aesthetics would be better with a curb, but his concern is the cost to the city each time an emergency repair is made. The city has spent more than $500,000 this past winter on unexpected water main issues already and to add additional costs each time a quick repair is made is not reasonable financially.

"Hurlbut was an emergency water main repair project not a planned and budgeted (one)," Spencer said. "Our goal is to curb and gutter all the city streets, but not this way."

Council took no action until actual costs to replace curbs and gutters were presented to them.

City cost

Elliott looked at the numbers to replace the curb and gutter on both the north and south side of the 100 block of West Hurlbut along looking at costs to only do the south side of the road. The two options Elliott estimated for city council to consider are based on unit pricing from previous projects Charlevoix has completed and do not reflect an actual engineering bid.

The first option is estimated to be around $59,500. The costs include: remove and replace approximately 800 linear feet of curb and gutter, install and grade 6-foot of gravel for the north side of the road, replace pavement, concrete driveway approaches, mobilization and restoration costs. Elliott noted in his estimate that this does not include: engineering, construction inspection, surveying, electrical conduit behind the curb and contingency.

The second option is estimated to be around $42,000. This option will only replace the curb and gutter on the south side of the 100 block of West Hurlbut, Elliott said in his electronic correspondence to Spencer and city council. The costs include: remove and replace 400 linear feet of curb and gutter along with replacing pavement, concrete driveway approaches, mobilization and restoration costs, but on a smaller scale.

"The actual cost to remove and replace the existing curb is much more than the estimate of $10,000 that was discussed at the council meeting," Elliott said. "The water main replacement was an emergency repair that was not planned for nor was it budgeted for, therefore there was no engineering completed to determine where the new curb height should be so that the road properly drains and holds up for the long term."

In addition to that, we are being consistent with all of the other streets that we have had to complete emergency water main repairs on in regards to replacing what curb had to be removed with asphalt," Elliott added. "It also is important to note that there were only portions of the existing curb on West Hurlbut removed, the entire concrete curb has not been removed."

City officials have spoke to Ikens about the costs and explained they do not replace curbs unless they are replacing storm sewer and drainage under the street, which the city has planned to do at another time.

"Hurlbut previously never had storm sewer or drainage under the street," Ikens said. "My request the city was please restore the street to its previous look before it was dug up to fix the water main. I do not see how the city saves money by coming back to dig the street up again to install curb, gutter and drainage."

The Hurlbut project was an emergency water main repair project not a planned, budgeted or engineered project for a complete renovation, Elliott said. There also are permits that are required if you are replacing sanitary sewer. Those permits require engineered drawings which the city does not have due to the project being an emergency replacement of the water main.

"The city may not be saving money by completing all of the other underground at a later date, but the city also is not spending money that was not budgeted for nor planned for," Elliott said.

SHOW

it. I heard great comments about Charlevoix's beauty, location and how friendly the people are. Some even told me they will return to vacation here."

Ruth Holtrop, of Grand Rapids, agreed. Holtrop said the craft show was a perfect location.

"This is beautiful," Holtrop said. "This whole area is just perfect to come for an outdoor show like this. I love seeing the beautiful homes and to look out at a picturesque marina is a wonderful way to spend the afternoon."

Susan Rose, of Ohio, said she drove through town on Friday on her way to visit friends. Rose said her friend, Judy Gustavson, of Interlochen, was easy to persuade to come to town on Saturday.

"I saw this all being set up and Friday and made it a point to tell (Judy) about it," Rose said, adding with a laugh, "As you can see it did not take much convincing because we're here."

Rose and Gustavson were busy browsing the merchandise of Furry Animals and Pillows, by Joybel Conrad, of Clinton. This was Conrad's fifth time as a vendor in Charlevoix. She stitches and hand makes each stuffed animal and pillow she sells.

"It takes time, but people like a product that is unique and made well," Conrad said.

She said she loves the show because of the people who attend.

"This is a good show because the people who come are happy and nice," Conrad said. "They enjoy looking at your items and take in interest in my work and where I'm from. I like that interaction. It's nice."

JOBS

Ceder also said the company is a responsible employer and is committed to treating impacted employees with respect during the transition period.

Darren Greene, global marketing and business intelligence, said the company has every intention to give employees the opportunity to apply for work at the new facility and provide work placement support in their communities.

"DE-STA-CO values the contributions of all employees and is working closely with each to ensure a smooth transition, including placement support and responding to (employees) interest in taking positions at the new Tennessee location," Greene said.

DE-STA-CO will maintain its customer service and engineering presence in Auburn Hills and Wheeling, Ill., as well as its Regional Americas and corporate offices in Auburn Hills and its remote handling equipment business in Red Wing, Minnesota.

EAST JORDAN

Raven Hill hosts Fun and Games benefit festival

EAST JORDAN — This year's theme of "Fun and Games" will take guests back to their childhood. This year's benefit festival will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday, July 18, at Raven Hill Discovery Center, 4737 Fuller Road, in East Jordan and, on this one night, Raven Hill is reserved for adults only. Old-fashioned games will be everywhere. Guests can enjoy a friendly game of shuffleboard, tic-tac-toe or checkers. DJ, Roger Coates, will entertain with music and more and Nathan Bates Catering will provide hors d'oeuvres and guests can enjoy wine, coffee, tea or lemonade, as they explore the grounds and browse the spectacular silent auction.

The new Evolving Technology building will be open with its timeline of Toys and Games, amongst other displays from periods throughout history. This year's major sponsors include, El Inc., East Jordan Plastics and Darrell Jacob. Supporters will gather to promote and help fund the center's year-round goals and ongoing programs, which connect science, history and art, as well as help the center raise matching donations required by many grant awards.

Tickets are $30 per person and are available in advance or at the door on the day of the event. To make a donation or reservation for the event, call (231) 536-3369, email to info@ravenhilldiscovery-center.org.

Raven Hill Discovery Center is a place in northern Lower Michigan where children and adults can link science, history and the arts with hands-on activities and explorations both indoors and outdoors. Connections emerge through classes, exhibits and facilities that provide opportunities for all ages to learn, create, grow and play. Raven Hill Discovery Center sits in the middle of 157 acres and is surrounded by forests, fields, swamps and ponds. It is adjacent to Little Traverse Conservancy's Raven Ridge Nature Preserve. Since 1991, more than 186,000 visitors have enjoyed the programs, exhibits and facilities at the center.

Brothers in basketball: Charlevoix's Teuschers at the helm of girls, boys programs at Florida high school

JAMES BENISTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 - jbenisterblum@petoskeynews.com

ST. JOHNS, Fla. — Growing up in Charlevoix, brothers Jeremiah and Jake Teuscher always knew they would work in education as adults.

And with their strong athletic backgrounds, there was a chance they would become coaches as well.

What they didn't expect was both of them to teach and coach at the same high school — one located in Florida no less.

Both Teuscher brothers teach at Bartram Trails High School, an almost 1,700-student school located in St. Johns, Fla., about 40 minutes south of Jacksonville on the northeastern Florida coast.

The two hold the school's top jobs for both girls and boys basketball. Younger brother Jake is entering his second season as the girls coach, and Jeremiah is preparing for his first season running the boys program after eight years as an assistant.

"It's not something we ever would have planned," Jake said. "But as we went through life, these opportunities popped up for both of us that led us here, and it's been wonderful for both of us."

"We've been very blessed with the chances we've gotten, and it's led us to a great place."

Heading for Florida

The road that led the Teuschers to Bartram Trails began in 2007, with Jeremiah fresh out of college and looking for his first job.

Jeremiah had graduated from Grand Valley State University. He attended the college after four years as a standout athlete at Charlevoix High School. Sports fans best remember him for his role as the inbounds passer on Scott Parrish's game-winning buzzer heater layup against McBain in a boys basketball regional final in 2001.

During his job search, Jeremiah remembered a Florida couple he'd befriended while working summers at the Charlevoix Marina.

"They were from St. Johns, and they always talked about how wonderful the area was and how great the school system was," Jeremiah said. "That really stuck with me and led me to look for openings around the St. Johns area."

Brothers and Charlevoix natives Jeremiah (left) and Jake Teuscher are now in Florida, where they teach at 1,700-student Bartram Trails High School in the city of St. Johns and coach the boys and girls basketball teams, respectively.

Jeremiah applied for an opening at Bartram Trails. He was interviewed and hired by assistant principal and head basketball coach Chris Phelps and athletic director Barry Craig.

He immediately started coaching multiple sports at the school.

"I told them I'd be willing to coach whatever sport they needed me to coach, and for three years I was a JV basketball and baseball coach and also a coach with the football team," Jeremiah said. "But as time went on, I realized the sport I had the most passion for was basketball."

Around the same time, Bartram Trails hired Jake, as a history teacher.

"I had visited Jeremiah a few times, and he'd taken me on a tour of the school on one of those trips," Jake said. "I just fell in love with the school, the community and the lifestyle in Florida, and it seemed like a really good fit."

"When a job opened up in 2010, I applied for it and I was able to get the position, with Jeremiah putting in a good word for me."

Taking The Reins

After the school had hired Jake, he got involved in coaching as well.

He worked with the girls basketball program, and after four seasons on the staff his passion led to his first head coaching position at Bartram Trails.

In his first year, Jake went 21-9 with the Bears, leading Bartram Trails to a district title and a regional final berth in Florida's third-largest division, 6A.

—Jake Teuscher

"Before coming here, I don't think I ever would have thought about coaching girls basketball, but I'm really blessed that it worked out this way," Jake said. "I love my job and I've had a lot of fun coaching this team."

"It's something I'm passionate about and I'm really happy that I got this chance."

Meanwhile, Jeremiah had spent eight years as a boys basketball assistant under Phelps and learned the finer points of the trade.

When Phelps accepted the principal position at the school, he retired from coaching in May. Jeremiah was the natural successor.

The 8th annual invite-only Ryan Shay Mile Run will begin at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 25, following the Jeff Drenth Memorial Footraces and prior to the Venetian Festival parade.

Invite-only mile run in remembrance of Ryan Shay returns July 25

CHARLEVOIX — For the last eight years a one-mile run down Bridge Street honors a local boy who made the community proud.

The 8th annual invite-only Ryan Shay Mile Run will begin at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 25, following the Jeff Drenth Memorial Footraces and prior to the Venetian Festival parade. There are two separate races, male and female, and the competitors in the Shay Mile are 10-20 elite distance runners who will race one mile for a total of $4,000 in prize money — 1st place is $1,000, 2nd place is $500, and 3rd place is $250.

"The racers will run a straight mile down Charlevoix's main street and finish in front of thousands of fans awaiting the start of the Venetian Festival parade," said Matt Peterson who serves as event organizer of both the Jeff Drenth and Ryan Shay memorial races.

"All previous winners, and for that matter, previous competitors are invited back," Peterson said. Once again the spectators in Charlevoix should be treated to a terrific race to the finish line

"There are road miles around the country with bigger prize purses than this one....but I truly think runners are attracted to this race because of who it's for — Ryan Shay."

Matt Peterson

for the Shay mile with strong men's and women's fields made up of national class runners. Three time winner Heather Kampf (Minneapolis-Ryan Shay mile record holder: 4:21.39), returns to defend her women's title. Repeating will not be easy as Canadian Sheila Reid (4:27 mile), and Michigan alum Becca Addison (4:30 mile) will be sure to make it a great race.

On the men's side, last year's runner-up Daniel Stockberger (Indiana alum: 3:58 mile), should be challenged by Jake Edwards (Columbus, Ohio: 3:58 mile), and Tom Scott (Ashland University coach: 3:59 mile).

Runners are invited through the strong connections made with coaches throughout the country, Peterson said.

"We've been fortunate to develop some relationships with some coaches and agents around the country," he said. "Word of mouth and the reputation of the race being a great experience for athletes has been huge as well."

The Ryan Shay Mile started in the summer of 2008 to honor the memory of Ryan Shay. Ryan passed away on Nov. 3 2007 while competing in the 2008 USA Olympic Marathon Trials in New York City. Ryan was from Central Lake, Michigan about thirty minutes south of

47th annual art and craft show

Lonnie Allen/Charlevoix Courier

Michael Niederhord, of Rapid City, waits while she has a sculpture done by Debra L. Adamcik during the 47th annual art and craft show on Saturday, July 11, in East Park.

More than 140 vendors were in East Park on July 11, 12 for the 47th annual art and craft show sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

East Park was filled with shoppers and visitors to the area to browse the more than 140 vendors on July 11 and 12, for the 47th annual art and craft show sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce. Vendors featured a wide selection of unique handmade crafts and inspired creations. Shoppers found everything from handmade jewelry, metalwork, pottery, sculpture, paintings, quilts, clothing, furniture and more.

Susan Rosa, of Ohio, and Judy Gustavson, of Interlochen, browse through Furry Animals & Pillows, by Joyce Conrad, of Clinton. Conrad hand makes each animal and has been a vendor at the 47th annual art and craft show for approximately five years, she said.

Looking into skydiving safety

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The recent debate in Charlevoix about how safe skydiving is at the municipal airport has only led to more questions from Mayor Gabe Campbell.

On July 20, Campbell tabled the skydive agenda item without discussion because there is no reason to discuss the matter without the city's attorney and an insurance representative present to help answer his questions, he said.

"I want to be sure the insurance will protect the city from a skydiving accident at our airport," Campbell said. "I have a right to ask those questions because we're elected and have a responsibility to look after the city."

FAA: Sport self-regulated

Campbell is looking for the facts and has heard so many things about skydiving — good and bad — but he is not making any decision about the sport until he gets answers.

"My concern is we want to keep Charlevoix immune from a liability claim," Campbell said. "I want the insurance people and attorney at our meeting so we and our residents can hear the answers to our questions."

Documents provided to city council by Edmund W. Underwood Jr. CPCU, CIC Assurance Corporation, said the city's insurance policy limits are $5 million and higher limits are available up to $25 million. Also there is no exclusion for parachute operations under the city's policy and Kurtz has the standard limits available in the insurance market. All skydive operator policies exclude the jumpers once they leave the aircraft.

If there were a skydiving accident, and the city was named in the lawsuit, the Airport Liability policy would respond and (ACE group) would defend the city in the event of a claim, according to Underwood.

But the Campbell said he and city council members still want to speak to their attorney.

"I want to review all the information and have our attorney review the information before we put this issue behind us," Campbell said.

CHARLEVOIX — It was a hot day with some cool people at East Park on Saturday as dozens came out for the annual Street Legends Car Show.

The club has been around since 1992, and this was its 23rd car show.

Nearly 150 cars of all makes, models, colors and sizes were registered to show off their style.

Richard Brown, of Horton Bay, was polishing up his 1953 Chevy half-ton pickup truck before the show started.

Brown said Charlevoix has a good show.

"You couldn't ask for better weather for a show now that the clouds have cleared up," Brown said. "It's just a great location to have a car show."

Larry Church, of Swartz Creek, brought to Charlevoix his 1962 Chevy II Nova. It is the third time Church has been to this show.

"This is the best show," Church said. "Look around you. You could not ask for a better place to have a CHARLEVOIX — Live music filled the air above Charlevoix with an inspirational sound as children danced and families gathered for a night of worship in front of the Odmark Performance Pavilion on Sunday.

"Worship on the Water," sponsored by Charlevoix area churches, kicked off Venetian Rhythms on July 19, with For A Season, a Christian rock, folk and soul band out of Florida.

"It's our fourth-year offering this event for families," said Dan Barron, festival board president.

Worship on the Water came in fruition after area churches requested a family-friendly evening in the park during Venetian Week.

Resident to run as council write-in candidate

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The person who filed to run against Charlevoix City Councilmember Shirley Gibson in the November municipal election won't be on the ballot, but he's still running.

Greg Bryan filed to run against Gibson for her Ward 3 seat as a write-in candidate on July 20. Gibson said she doesn't have any problem with Bryan filing to run against her in November.

"I like Greg," Gibson said. "He is a good guy and if the voters choose him over me I'm fine with that. I actually welcome the opportunity to debate our ideas for the city."

Gibson is not deterred from her

School board continues support for technology initiative

BY EMILY PADGETT
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Members of the Charlevoix Public School Board approved the purchase of 550 MacBook Air 11-inch laptops on July 20, regular meeting.

The board voted 4-3 in favor of the technology purchase with trustees Mike Moen, Tom Kirinovic and Doug Bergmann against the measure.

The purchase price of 550 MacBook Air 11-inch laptops through discounted rates for schools is about $398,000, said Jamisen Both, technology supervisor for Charlevoix Public Schools. This cost accounts for less than 10 percent of the funds gained from the bond passed in May.

Both, who presented a recommendation to the school board from the previous spring's research from the technology committee members, which included input from classroom teachers, said in an effort to maintain the one-to-one technology initiative as well as provide consistency in both the elementary and high school buildings he recommends the schools sell to the community the current 454 iPad 2 units and replace those devices with the laptops. Grades 7-12 will utilize the new laptops and grades K-6 will use the currently owned iPad 4 units.

Superintendent Michael Ritter, who has been on the job since July 1, said from his meetings with faculty and staff the process to come to this recommendation was done well. Concerned about the limited time the board had to consider the purchase, Ritter is committed to making sure the future holds a well-informed, consistently updated board. Ritter also is very impressed with the care and thoughtfulness shown by the board in Monday's meeting, as well as the meeting attendance of important stakeholders from the elementary, secondary and administrative levels and the support of the Charlevoix community to its public schools.

"I would first like to thank the community for passing the bond prior to my arrival,"

Ritter said. "It shows incredible respect for Charlevoix schools. It shows incredible respect for Charlevoix schools. I want residents to know we are going to be very fiscally conservative while we improve the tools used to help educate our students."

Both shared the cost comparisons between the previously purchased iPad 2 and MacBook Air 11, as well as resale figures across several years. He said although the MacBook has a larger upfront cost than an iPad, the device retains a much higher resale value.

Moen wondered if the resale and purchase of new technology could be postponed one year, but due to the unpredictable roll out of new software updates that will prevent frequently used apps from working properly, the risk of waiting not only decreases the resale value, but puts students and teachers at risk of dealing with antiquated devices, said Both.

Charlevoix Middle and High School principal, Suzanne Klinger said there is a necessity of developing keyboarding skills and the strengths of laptop functionality over a tablet. The recommended division of technology between the elementary level and the middle and high school level would then pair a suitable device with the skills and cognitive needs of the students.

Both vouched for the durability, superior processing ability, and overall friendliness of a laptop format over a tablet. Ritter said he found, with his own children, the tablet format for the younger students makes sense because of the wide variety of educational apps. Ritter also acknowledged that providing technology to the students is an on-going process that will require refurbishing equipment from time to time.

"Each of us in the school district know our focus is our students," Ritter said. "We want to make sure they are provided the best tools for education. Our teachers and parents are still the most important factor when it comes to educating our young people, but technology is an added tool that will have a positive impact on our students' education."

Charlevoix Garden Club beautification awards

This year, for the first time, 40 merchants participated in the beautification competition. There are many gorgeous window boxes and planters along Bridge St., as well as terrific gardens both north and south of the downtown area. The Garden Club salutes all the merchants who go the extra mile to make this little slice of heaven even more beautiful.

The winners in the window box/planter category: first place winner was Bridge Street Tap Room, Rocking Horse Toy Company and Color Wear and Staffords Weathervane tied for second place, third place was a tie between The Villager and Kilwins and fourth place was issued to Maison & Jardin while fifth place was a tie between Glik's and Clothing Company.

The winners of Garden Charlevoix South category:

first place went to Burger King, second place was Holiday Station. The winners of Garden Charlevoix North category: first place was awarded to Esperance, second place went to MacDougall House and third place was given Weather-vane Terrace Inn & Suites.

City of Charlevoix Municipal Award: The "Chipper" Truck. For the past years, Jim Bishop of the Streets Department, has been beautifying his truck by planting petunias along the top of the cab.

One day he noticed that weeds were growing due to all the debris he picked up along the roads on a daily basis. He thought, if I'm doing what needs to be done to add to the beautification of Charlevoix, then my truck should look its best too. Jim, and his assistant, Brandon McClanathan, are committed city employees.

Charlevoix Public Library hosts pipeline safety talk

CHARLEVOIX — Ed Timm of Harbor Springs will present an educational talk, "Oil Spill in the Great Lakes? How Safe are the Pipelines?" open to the public from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 4, at the Charlevoix Public Library, community room B, at 220 W. Clinton St., in Charlevoix.

Timm, PhD., PE, is a retired senior scientist and consultant to Dow

Chemical's environmental operations business. He recently prepared an engineering opinion for the lawyers at For Love Of Water on corrosion and structural issues with oil pipeline Line 5, which runs across Michigan, under the Straits of Mackinac, to its final destination at a refinery in Sarnia, Ontario. His presentation is especially timely given the July 14 release of the Petroleum Pipeline Task Force report which indicated numerous safety concerns involving the 62-year-old twin pipelines.

"Attorney General Schuette said the work of the Pipeline Task Force has made Line 5 less of a hazard," Timm said. "This might be true at some time in the future when all the tasks outlined in the Task Force report are completed, but in the meantime Line 5 becomes more hazardous with each passing day."

Sponsors of the event include Northern Michigan Environmental Council, FLOW (For Love of Water), Don't Frack Michigan, Oil and Water Don't Mix and Friends of the Boyne River.

Pig roast and horseshoes

Editor's note: Steven Scott (Scotty) is a community contributor to the Charlevoix Courier. Scotty's column will focus on the different happenings near his home in Wilson Township. The idea behind a community contributor is to allow individuals who are from the various townships in Charlevoix County to tell the readers what is going on in their local communities. If you are from a township in Charlevoix County and would like to contribute to your local paper of the happenings in your area contact us at news@charlevoixcourier.com or call (231) 439-9309.

Usually when I think of a pig roast, I have Luau pop in my head, Hawaiian shirts, shorts, ukulele music and beautiful flowers on a string being placed around peoples' necks.

The Pig Roast at the Nachazel Farm just outside of Boyne City isn't that kind of Pig Roast I soon found this out as I arrived to the annual event held for family and friends. It was t-shirt, shorts, big trucks, lots of refreshments, two tents side by side with food from one end to the other. This year it was held at Mike and Laura Nachazel's farm; relatives, Ed and Louis Nachazel provided the delicious pig for roasting.

Looking around, I could

SCOTTY

Steven Scott

see everyone was having a wonderful time, relatives and friends catching up with one another, telling their own story of weathering through the cold winter.

The children played in the bouncy house, rolled giant dice, kicked the soccer ball around, all while exploring the farm.

The food was amazing. Everyone bringing their own dish to the potluck for all to taste, and I tried it all. The roasted pig, which was absolutely mouthwatering, was served with different barbeque sauces. We all got to choose from every sauce that was worthy of dipping or pouring over the succulent pork on our plates.

The roasting of the pig isn't the only part of this shindig. The main event is horseshoe throwing, an annual competition of double elimination, and it is not taken lightly. They are very serious about throwing their shoes. My name ended up on the list as Mike Nachazel made his way from table to table filling up his sheet with teams ready to take the challenge to be this year's champions.

Paired with my father-in-law, one of last year's champions, I had the unsettling feeling of the son-in-law that usually finishes last. My nightmare became a reality as we lost the first round and it was not because of his throwing. I didn't know when horseshoes hit wood—that was on the sides of the pit—could bounce or travel so far and don't forget with shouts of "incoming" to protect people because you don't know where the wayward shoe was going to travel.

We had another chance, I had another chance to redeem myself, again we threw our shoes, to my amazement they went where they were supposed to go. I even had a couple ringers we won the next game, then the next game, the game after that and the game after that game. Finally, it came time to play the last team as the evening turned to night. It was too hard for us to see the pins, and the team we were going to play was already undefeated and to win we would have had to play them twice.

So, we ended as the runner ups of the pig roast and that was all right with us, we had a good time, I met new people and made new friends as far as I was concerned we were all winners at the pig roast.

LETTER to the editor

Charlevoix City Airport not the best site for sky diving

Dear Mayor Gabe Campbell and the Charlevoix City Council:

I am not a resident of the city of Charlevoix, but I am a customer of the Charlevoix City Airport. I am very concerned that the Charlevoix City Council has been discussing that skydivers could be allowed to use the Charlevoix Airport property for a landing location. The potential for accidents and the additional stress and confusion on pilots should preclude this from happening.

The city has the responsibility to create the safest environment possible for the aircraft, pilots and passengers. I cannot imagine that the Charlevoix City Council would be willing to create a serious safety and liability situation endangering lives and the financial health of the city.

The aircraft of the private skydiving business should be allowed to take off and land like any other aircraft.

People jumping out of those aircraft have no business being in airport airspace. There are open fields in the area that are not in the airport air space and would not endanger air traffic.

I can't believe this was even a topic of discussion.

Fulfilling my job description

There are many types of jobs to do in this world and each of us is good at something or at least qualified to do the work required by our employer.

I'm a newspaper editor/reporter, basically a scribe. I write about the community news, it is printed and becomes part of the historical record of the community.

As a reporter, it is my job to report on the facts with independence and objectivity and make sure the news is relevant, informative, proportionate, engaging and have transparency to disseminate it to the public to read. I like to listen to the people, hear what's going on and search for legitimacy to what I am being told. It is never my intention to create news.

Often there are times where I have to ask the questions no one else has. Sometimes I'm considered a great guy and other times I am considered to be trouble for doing my job. But that's what I do. My job.

The other day I was reading online about another reporter doing his job. This reporter was writing about a resident in Kansas, who was told by the city to leave them alone for contacting his local government too much. Apparently the issue is rooted in something fairly harmless: Municipal code violation complaints.

For nearly seven years the resident reported unkempt grass to junked vehicles and noise violations within the city, he meticulously documented his complaints—including photos—when contacting the city code enforcement division. Apparently it was more than city was willing to stomach, and he was instructed not to contact city officials again. Now that is a story to write about.

That journalist is doing his job by reporting the facts of the situation. Was the guy wrong for contacting the city, that often? Or was the city wrong for telling this man to stop calling them? That was left to the reader to decide.

Lately, I've looked into complaints, wrote about an issue and figured I covered what had to be done. City officials acted accordingly and the business took steps to prevent further incidents. But now another photo was brought to my attention that may or may not show a law being broke, it's tough to tell, but this person is adamant that wrongdoing is going on. I also get phone calls, sometimes daily, of possible city code violations, but when I ask, "Did you file a complaint with the city or make a report to the police?" The answer is no.

My question is "Why not?" As far as I know, city officials in Charlevoix have not told their residents to stop calling them. I also know my job title has not changed.

Above the entrance to my office there is a sign that says Charlevoix Courier, your community newspaper since 1883. It does not say city code enforcement, nor does it say local law enforcement.

I'm not the police, ordinance expert, government official or a place where personal agendas are played out.

Don't get me wrong, I will listen to people's concerns and help if I can. But I have no authority to enforce laws and city codes. Report your problems and complaints to the proper officials.

The City of Charlevoix has someone who enforces city ordinances and the police handle illegal activity. Please, let them do their jobs. If the proper official does not handle it, then bring it to your elected official. Let the city council do their job, by representing the people in each of their wards. Each one of them have an obligation to the people of this city and hopefully they fulfill their responsibilities.

My responsibility is the facts and to report the best version of the truth available to me at the time of the article's publication. If the complaint is not investigated or you're told to go away, then by all means let me know. I will go ask the questions why they are not doing their job. That's part of my job, to hold public officials accountable and report the news to the community. It's not to legitimize a grudge or help accomplish someone's selfish ambition. That is not me.

I'm just a simple scribe who writes the story, as I see it. That is my job.

Finally, we thank the guests who attended the Charlevoix luncheon and their commitment to our agency and the communities we serve. Your support enables us to help thousands of local women, children and families every year.

Sincerely,
Gail Kloss,
executive director

Jeff Porter has honorable public service record

Editor:

Jeff Porter has served the city of Charlevoix for more than thirty years. During this time, I have admired his devoted service to Charlevoix. He has been a member of the Downtown Development Authority, chairman of the fundraising campaign for our new hospital, and now a city council member. His concerns for maintaining the high quality of life that we enjoy in Charlevoix is a record in itself.

I was shocked and disappointed in the recent letters by David Staublin, Mary Stoddard and Tom Kirby in the Courier that attack his record. I have never seen anything like it and I hope we can return to the business at hand that faces our community and get away from these unwarranted insults. Thank you, Jeff, for your many years of stewardship.

Classic movies inspiration for East Jordan Garden Club's annual flower show

EAST JORDAN — This year's theme for the East Jordan Garden Club's flower show is "Classic Movies" from noon-4 p.m. on Saturday, July 25, located at the Jordan River Arts Council building, 301 North Main Street, in East Jordan.

Club members will display a variety of arrangements using the theme for inspiration. People's Choice ribbons will be awarded for best of show, best miniature under 4-inches, best single stem bloom, best herb, best fruit or vegetable arrangement and best dried arrangement using natural materials.

The public is encouraged to attend and cast their votes for the arrangements they like best. Admission is free and refreshments will be served.

For more information, call Kim Prebble, at (231) 536-3282.

Community notes — Doyle Dykes

CHARLEVOIX — Center Point Assembly, 05291 N. M-66, Charlevoix will be featuring Grand Ole Opry's Doyle Dykes at their 10:30 a.m. service on Sunday, July 26. Dykes, famed guitarist, played at Chet Atkins memorial service. Dykes will be playing at Charlevoix's Venetian Festival on Saturday night, July 25, in the park prior to Sunday at Center Point.

Dyke's gospel guitar message comes through with sharing of his testimony. He will bless and challenge at the same time as he shares his musical gift.

For more information, call (231) 547-6430.

Lake Community Church

WALLOON LAKE — Matt Hammitt from Sanctus Real will be leading Walloon Lake Community Church in worship on Sunday, July 26. Service times are at 9 a.m. and at 10:45 a.m. The Andy Stefanic Band will be opening up for Matt Hammitt in a free concert held at the greenspace next to Barrel Back on the water starting at 6 p.m., on Sunday, July 26.

Crooked Tree Arts Center partners with library for lecture series

CHARLEVOIX — Crooked Tree Arts Center and the Charlevoix Public Library will be presenting a series of three lectures during the months of July and August. First will be journalist, television producer, and filmmaker, David Crouse at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, July 30.

With a nearly 40-year career as a journalist and television producer, Crouse will share anecdotes and stories from his career including interviews with five former U.S. Presidents. He will play behind-the-scenes film clips, never seen on television, from interviews with Presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and George H. W. Bush, who gave Crouse his final White House television interview as president.

Crouse also will play clips from his mini-series, "The Reagan Presidency," currently airing nationwide on public broadcasting. He will also unveil his latest television project, "Michigan: Triumph of Nature and Enterprise." Crooked Tree Arts Center is working closely with Crouse on this multi-platform media project.

The Charlevoix Lecture Series will take place on Thursdays at the Charlevoix Public Library. All lectures will begin at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $5 per person. The lecture series is supported in part by the Charlevoix Public Library and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The guest speaker lineup is as follows:

— Thursday, Aug. 6 —

John Rutherford, Practice, Persistence, Professionalism: Musicians as Entrepreneurs

— Thursday, Aug. 13 — Robert Swanson, Architect/Photography: Inside/Outside Museums

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located at 461 E. Mitchell St., Petoskey, and at 322 Sixth St., Traverse City.

St. Marys Cement, Charlevoix Public Library to present Wings of Wonder

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library, with support from St. Marys Cement, is pleased to announce that Wings of Wonder will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday, July 29, at the library.

Rebecca Lessard, and her live birds of prey, will be on hand to showcase the work done to rescue injured raptors in Michigan. Participants will not only see the live raptor ambassadors from Wings of Wonder, they will also learn fascinating facts about the raptors native to Michigan and what makes these birds so awe-inspiring.

Wings of Wonder is a nonprofit raptor sanctuary located in Empire. Active since 1990, their primary mission is education, fostering appreciation, understanding, honor and respect for raptors as well as the important role these birds play in healthy ecosystems. Wings of Wonder also is a rehabilitation and release center for injured or orphaned raptors. Bring a camera as many of the live birds are quite photogenic.

Local author releases new book

CHARLEVOIX — "Bonita Finds a Forever Home" by Suzanne M. Malpass Rogers is the fifth book in a series of true animal rescues with happy endings. "I'm not interested in make-the-kids-cry stories," said Rogers.

Each book features wonderful watercolor illustrations by Charlevoix's Trish Morgan, who studied watercolor painting in Europe, as well as in the U.S.

For each story, the author interviews the pet's family before writing begins. In this case, that would have meant interviewing herself. Rogers saw the dog on Petfinders.com and then was able to obtain her from the humane society. The book ends with the suggestion that children look first to their local humane society or rescue organization, if they want a new friend of the animal variety.

The books are available at Stonehedge Gardens and the Jordan River Arts Council in East Jordan; Ga Ga for Kids, Circle of Arts and The Castle in Charlevoix; Local Flavor and Freshwater Art Gallery in Boyne City, as well as at many other shops and bookstores.

If you should want a book signed to a certain person or persons, contact the author at suzanne@straddlebooks.com. The books also are on the web at Mascot Books, Books a Million, Barnes & Noble and Amazon.

Jessica Zevalink and Katie Smith share their story of sailing America's Great Loop at the Charlevoix Public Library on July 28.

Female dynamic duo sail America's Great Loop

CHARLEVOIX — Join the sailing team of Jessica Zevalink and Katie Smith as they tell the story of sailing America's Great Loop at 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 28, at the Charlevoix Public Library.

These 23-year-old women took off with a ding and a kitten aboard a 27-foot sloop named "Louise" on a small budget and with minimal sailing experience. Over the course of two years they cruised the Mississippi river, the Gulf of Mexico, the Bahamas, the Eastern seaboard, and Canada, recently crossing their wake back in Lake Michigan. Hear tales about the good, the bad, the ugly and why cruising "the loop" is a must.

The program will be held at the Charlevoix Public Library at 220 W. Clinton St., in Charlevoix.

Veterans may now receive high school diplomas from local school districts

NORTHERN MICHIGAN — Military veterans of World War II, Korean conflict and Vietnam War, who did not receive their high school diploma due to their military service, can now be awarded a diploma by their local school district. School districts within Char-Em Intermediate School District service area of Charlevoix, Emmet and northern Antrim counties want to get the word out to area veterans about this recently passed legislation that authorizes Michigan school boards to award high school diplomas to the veterans or their families.

Public Act No. 55 of 2014 allows school districts to award diplomas to veterans who meet the following criteria:

— Before graduation from high school, the military veteran enlisted or was drafted into the armed forces of the United States during World War II, the Korean conflict or the Vietnam era.

— At the time of enlistment, the military veteran was enrolled in a high school in the school district to which the application is made.

— The military veteran did not graduate from high school.

— The military veteran served under honorable conditions during World War II, the Korean conflict or during the Vietnam era.

Qualified veterans or their families must complete an application and submit it to the district of the high school he/she was enrolled in at the time of enlistment. The application can be found at michigan.gov/documents/dmva/Application_for_High_School_Diploma_239497_7.pdf.

Questions about the process should be directed to the district superintendent's office. The Michigan Veterans Affairs Agency is committed to connecting those who served in the U.S. Armed Forces and their families to the services and benefits they have earned through their service. The agency works to identify and break down barriers veterans face in employment, education, healthcare and quality of life.

OBITUARIES

Beverly Boss

On Wednesday, July 15, 2015, Bev Boss went home to Heaven — where she immediately joined several committees and took charge of the Wednesday night dinners at her father's table, adding baked beans and raspberry pie to the menu.

Bev lived a life dedicated to God, her family and her community. Her attitude can be summed up in a favorite quote from Erma Bombeck: "When I stand before God at the end of my life, I would hope that I would not have a single bit of talent left, and could say, 'I used everything you gave me.'" Bev was born and raised in East Jordan and as much as she came to love the Rayder Nation, she remained a lifelong Red Devil. After graduating from East Jordan High School in 1947, she attended business school in Bay City, Mich., and became a secretary at Dow Chemical in Midland. After a few years, she decided city life wasn't for her and headed back north, where she worked at East Jordan High School and Charlevoix Hospital.

In 1955, she married Herb Boss. They moved into a little house on a hill on South Barnard Road, where she stayed home to raise six children. Bev loved to cook for family and friends and no matter how many people showed up for meals, there was always room for one more at the table.

When her youngest started school, Bev went to work in the Charlevoix Elementary School kitchen. In 1985, she returned to her business school roots and became the secretary at Charlevoix Middle School. Bev loved working at the middle school, saying she gained a whole new batch of kids (the teachers) and grandkids (the students).

After retiring in 2000, Bev didn't slow down. She volunteered at the Charlevoix Senior Center, the Community Food Pantry, and in many roles at Charlevoix Community Reformed Church, including being a driving force behind the Safe Haven breakfast club. But her special passion was for the Charlevoix Community Christmas project. Christmas was her favorite time of the year, and it was her firm belief that all children deserve a happy Christmas.

During her many years chairing the project, she made sure that happened for hundreds of children in the Charlevoix area.

Bev was preceded in death by her parents, Lee Sr. and Edith (Upton) Danforth; brother, Lee Danforth Jr.; and son, Dave Boss.

She is survived by her husband of almost 60 years, Herb Boss; their children, Sue (Dave) Mitchell, Dan (Sue) Boss, Lisa (Mark) Vind, Doug Boss and Barb (Brian) Myers; and her much loved and bragged about grandchildren, Emily Boss, Lauren and Ross Mitchell, and Rachel, Sarah and Robby Vind.

Bev will also be missed by her brothers, Don Danforth and Keith (Marilyn) Danforth; in-laws, Leona Danforth, Kathy Danforth, Nate (Kathryn) Boss, Ken (Myrna) Boss, Esther (Garry) Vandenberg and Kathy (Rod)

Lindner; many nieces and nephews; her church family at Community Reformed; her coffee ladies; and most recently, her special girls at Grandvue.

A service celebrating Bev's life was on Thursday, July 23, at Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that contributions be made to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project or the Safe Haven Breakfast Club. To really honor Bev's memory and her commitment to service, please consider a donation of your time and talents to one of those groups, or to one of the many other worthwhile organizations in our community.

Please share condolences or your memories of Bev at www.winchesterfuneralhome.com.

LOOKING BACK...

Recounting the history of East Park

In 1925, the wooden Bridge Street buildings that stood at the southwest corner of Round Lake near Antrim Street — one of them since 1872 — were removed. In their place a small park was developed, and on its grounds an open-air handstand platform was erected. Stairs led from the sidewalk down into the park, then up to the bandstand.

This only lasted a few years until the platform was walled in with many windows all the way around and roofed. It then became the home of the newly formed Charlevoix Board of Commerce, looking almost like an oriental pagoda. In the background, the welcome sign that greeted visitors from the south for decades appears on the brick wall of the Parkside Restaurant, a Charlevoix icon and destination until the end of the 20th century.

The cramped and outmoded building, having housed the renamed Chamber of Commerce for many years, was showing its age by the 1960s, its entryway stairs that went steeply down and then up were not too convenient or safe. The city commissioned Charlevoix High School graduate and architect Dale Suomela to design a new modern one accessible from street level. It was finished and opened in 1968. This building lasted until 2007 when the entire East Park from Clinton Street to Antrim was ripped out to make way for the magnificent park we enjoy today, with the band shell now occupying the area of the old Chamber of Commerce building.

Glik's, a family business with a hometown feel

BY ANNE KELLY
SPECIAL TO COURIER

Celebrating their 118th year, the Glik family business started out in 1890 when Joseph Glik had the idea of selling top quality merchandise from a horse drawn wagon in rural areas of Mississippi and Iowa. The business survived depressions, recessions, the onset of mega stores and on-line retailing to become ranked as the No. 14 oldest retailer in the United States.

Today, Glik's boasts 60 locations across nine midwest states. Glik's is described as "bigger than a specialty store and more personal than a department store or national chain." The Glik family attributes its success to honesty, integrity, hard work and excellent customer service.

Charlevoix Glik's manager, Diane Gofourth, attests to the quality of the business and the enthusiasm of its owners.

"I can't imagine working anywhere else," said Gofourth, who splits her time managing both the Petoskey and Charlevoix stores. "It is so nice to work for the Glik's because they are people who really care about their employees. We are not just a number. There is a sense of pride working here. They offer you ways to grow and reward your efforts. They make you feel as if you personally make a difference."

Employees get to know the owners on a personal level, according to Gofourth. Sometimes the three Glik brothers who jointly manage the franchise fan out to visit the individual stores and sell along-side of the employees. Even grandfather Joe, "the Chairman" at 89, takes part in the fun. Employees are challenged to "beat the boss" or "beat the chairman" in sales for the day.

Gofourth, 30, is looking forward to advancing in her career with Glik's. She is setting her sights on earning an area manager position with multi-store responsibility. Her assistant managers also have aspirations as they gain experience. At Glik's, employees are offered an opportunity to set their goals high. In the meantime they work at maintaining the tradition of customer service that has been the Glik's tradition all these 118 years.

Each store is individually town specific as to what is sold there. The employees play a strong role in suggesting products to the buying teams. Major brands are aimed at young, active adult buyers, but there is a brand for everyone from North Face and Under Armor to Vineyard Vines and Quicksilver.

Glik's strive to give back to the communities in which they settle.

The Glik's team has participated in several community fund raising events including contributing to United Way, participating in a fashion show to benefit Charlevoix's Joppa House, and sponsoring a jeans drawing to raise money for the Christmas Project.

"We wish to connect and contribute to each community we do business in," said Bob Glik, one of the Glik brothers who markets for the company. "This is our heritage of 'giving back' stemming from our very beginning in a steel-making/meat packing based town (Madison, Ill., populated by hard working eastern European immigrants...)."

Heldi Shaffer, Antrim County Conservation District officer, presented an informational talk at the 2015 Lake Charlevoix Association annual meeting, Thursday, July 9, at the Charlevoix Public Library. Schaffer's lecture featured lake friendly protection ideas. It was illustrated with slides of ideas of how to minimize impervious surfaces, how to plan strategic landscaping and how to utilize native plants, shrubs and trees along the shoreline banks. Her message stressed that we all should be proactive in our treatment of our lakefront property as it is our responsibility to keep the lake clean and healthy for our use today and future generations' use tomorrow. Fifty-three Lake Charlevoix Association members were in attendance at the meeting.

Jean McDonough to become nurse practitioner at Charlevoix Area Hospital

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix Area Hospital welcomes nurse practitioner Jean McDonough back home to the hospital where she held her very first nursing job after graduation from North Central Michigan College in 1989.

In 1975, McDonough's family had moved from the Detroit area to settle in Charlevoix. Even as a small girl, McDonough knew that she wanted to go into the medical field.

"I knew as a young adult that I really enjoyed helping people, so a natural career for me was the nursing profession," McDonough said.

After graduating from Charlevoix High School, McDonough attended North Central Michigan College where she received an associate's degree in 1989. McDonough's relationship with Charlevoix Area Hospital began upon her graduation, when she began work in the Med/Surg department of the small hospital.

Then in 1991, she left the hospital to begin a lengthy relationship with the local health department where she was a home health nurse and one of the department's first hospice nurses.

McDonough worked with pregnant women and high risk infants as well as various other health department programs.

As she gained experiences through a variety of nursing roles, it became clear that furthering her education would allow her to make a greater impact, and becoming a nurse practitioner became her long-term goal.

McDonough continued her education, ultimately receiving a Bachelor of Science in Nursing in 1994 from the University of Michigan, an Master of Business Administration in Healthcare Administration from Davenport University in 2007, and an Master of Science in Nursing with a family practice focus from Michigan State University in 2010.

In 2001, McDonough returned to Charlevoix Area Hospital where she held a nursing position in the emergency department until 2014. She also developed the hospital's health education program, leaving to return to school.

During that time, McDonough also practiced in the Alpena area and later the Petoskey area in the field of family practice.

Her clinical experiences include pediatrics, family practice, women's health, and urgent care. Back in Charlevoix, Jean will be practicing family medicine at Pine River Medical as well as seeing patients in Charlevoix Area Hospital's urgent care center.

"Nursing isn't the only role that Jean has taken on.

"I am currently an MSU adjunct faculty member as a clinical preceptor for the MSN program, a certified Department of Transportation medical examiner, and a member of the American Association of Nurse Practitioners and Michigan Council of Nurse Practitioners and Sigma Theta Tau Honor Society of Nursing," McDonough said.

She has always enjoyed working with the adolescent population and has been involved for the past 12 years with Camp Quality of Michigan, a nonprofit organization that supports children with cancer, and their families through year-round programs. She currently serves as the director of the week-long camp in Traverse City.

McDonough and husband, Shawn, have been married for 34 years and have five grown children and four grandchildren.

More than a quarter of a century has brought considerable change to the small hospital where McDonough held her first nursing job back in 1989.

"I am looking forward to returning to my home town of Charlevoix and working, once more, with Charlevoix Area Hospital," she said.

Consumers Energy offers $100,000 in grants for tree planting

JACKSON — Consumers Energy is offering $100,000 in grants to Michigan communities this year to plant trees, an effort to encourage responsible tree planting and sustainable urban forests in communities across the state.

Up to $2,500 is available per community for grants. Consumers Energy sponsors the program annually to encourage responsible tree planting and sustainable urban forests in communities across the state. The Michigan Forest and Park Association reviews applications and forwards its grant recommendations to Consumers Energy.

A tree planting project must meet criteria to avoid conflicts between trees and overhead lines to be eligible. Consumers Energy provides communities with a guide titled "Right Tree Right Place," a concept developed by the National Arbor Day Foundation, which shows how to choose appropriate tree species and suitable sites in community locations near electric lines. Trees should not be planted under high-voltage transmission lines, which transmit electricity across the state. Only certain trees should be planted under distribution lines — the power lines that serve communities and households. Learn more at arborday.org/trees/righttreeandplace/.

Consumers Energy spent more than $40 million statewide on work to clear trees from power lines last year, leading to continued improvements in electric reliability. The company also joined Michigan International Speedway this year in providing 50,000 trees to be planted through the Michigan Association of Conservation Districts, and annually sponsors the Michigan Big Tree Hunt through ReLeaf Michigan.

Chicago Club to receive Margaret Duerr award for its more than 125 years of community support.

Chicago Club receives Margaret Duerr Award

CHARLEVOIX — Chip Hansen will be the featured speaker at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 3, at the Charlevoix Public Library, where the Chicago Club will be honored as the 12th recipient of the Margaret Duerr Award. Each year an individual or organization who has demonstrated an interest in the preservation of the history, arts, education and environment of Northern Michigan is selected for the Margaret Duerr Award.

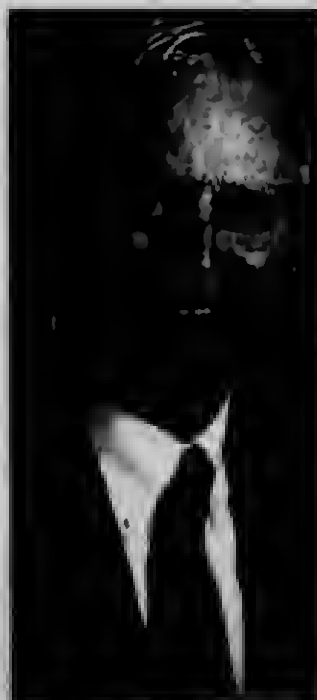

Hansen, president of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and member of many local service organizations, will reflect on the importance of "neighborhoods" in building character and community.

After Hansen's presentation, the Chicago Club will be honored as the 2015 Margaret Duerr Award recipient. The Chicago Club is awarded for more than 125 years of support to our community with a commitment to Charlevoix that has greatly enriched our town and its citizens. The Club's contributions include support of our restored public library.

A reception will follow, sponsored by the Friends of the Library's Michigan Room Committee.

event that begins the music in the park events for Venetian," Barron said.

"As the band played, the audience clapped and sang along to some of the worship music. Throughout the evening people walking along Bridge Street and along the Marina would pause to listen to the music resonating from the band shell. As people entered the park, they joined in the worship throughout the evening.

"They're a very good band and full of high energy," said Jim Malewitz. "There are a lot of people here I know. It's a good turnout."

Aaron Malewitz said the music is a great start to Venetian Week and way to praise God in a festive atmosphere.

"Worship on the Water is a great opportunity to get Christians outside of a church building and enjoy worship together in an outdoor forum," Aaron said. "I thoroughly enjoy this evening in the park. The music is great."

Ted Polleys, Community Reformed Church associate pastor, said the event is popular with area residents and has grown the past four years.

it does from the Venetian board," Polleys said. "More people show up each year. It's good to see people from all the different churches come together in this venue to worship God. We're glad to see this as Venetian Week event."

Polleys was enjoying bluesy soul to rock 'n' roll rhythms and vocals from the band, and said the unique sound is inspirational.

"It's refreshing music," Polleys said. "It's not your typical worship style, which is really cool. Everyone seems to enjoy the concert."

car show. The people are great and the car club helps local charities."

Organizers say proceeds from the car show will benefit the local community.

"Car people are caught up in their cars, but they're very giving people. They know this helps organizations in the community so they pay their registration fee, they buy their raffle tickets and they bid on silent auction items because they want to help," said Luann Keinath, Street Legends treasurer and co-chair of the show. "They know clubs like ours and other clubs in the area donate the proceeds, and that's the best thing about our show."

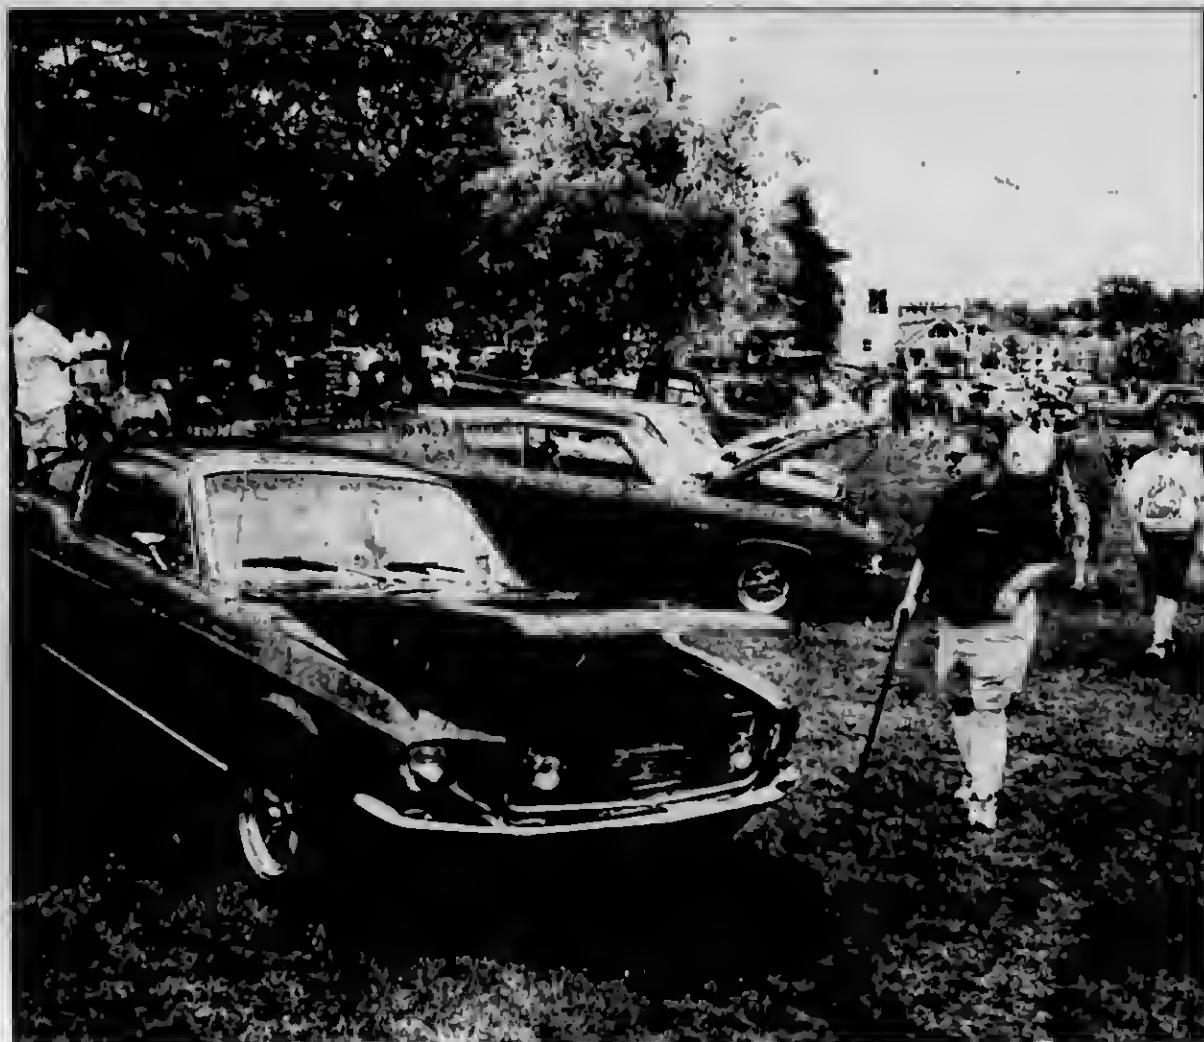

The past 23 years Street Legends has returned more than $133,000 to the community, Keinath said.

The club expects to contribute about $7,500 back to the community from this year's show, Keinath said.

"We are lucky we have residents who care," Keinath said. "This is the whole reason we have the show so we can support the community."

This year proceeds from the 50/50 raffle along with another drawing went to help fund a new police dog for the K-9 unit at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

"People were very giving for this cause," Keinath said. "Normally we wait until the fall to award our money, but the board approached Sheriff Don Schneider to see if we could help, and he was pleased we thought of the K-9 unit."

Car enthusiasts had a chance to show their cool rides to the public during the 23rd annual Street Legends car show on July 18, in East Park. The annual car show helps raise money for community needs.

Skydive Harbor Springs began using the Charlevoix Municipal Airport in 2014 for limited skydiving. In 2015, owner Luther Kurtz recently increased his operation, which has sparked the conversation among pilots about safety.

Scott Woody, the former airport manager, approved the operation in 2014 as a demo-only operation.

"I didn't allow for the operation to take place on busy airport days," Woody said. "I'm not against skydiving. I think it's a great sport and fun to watch."

Woody said adding another obstacle to look out for when pilots approach to land is a cause for concern to anyone who flies.

"You're approaching a small runway with a cliff at the end of it. The last thing you want to look out for is people attached to canopies in the air when air traffic is busy," Woody said.

Kurtz said he uses guidelines set by the Federal Aviation Administration and the United States Parachute Association and the company meets those requirements.

"The FAA guidance regulations say Charlevoix's airport can accommodate skydiving, just like this airport accommodates small airplanes and jets, and other types of aviation," Kurtz said.

To this point, there have been no accidents reported at the airport and skydivers land in a zone that is not in the flight zone, which meets the FAA requirements, Kurtz said.

"The primary means of separation between aircraft and parachute or other aircraft is visually," Kurtz said. "That's why when people in parachutes are flying they have to look and make sure they are not going in front of somebody and also the aircraft have to look to make sure they're not running into a parachute, another airplane or jet. That's how it is supposed to work at a small airport that doesn't have a tower."

Other pilots say there is no issue with the skydiving in Charlevoix.

Jimmy Chionsini, who owns a King Air C90 — twin-turboprop aircraft, said he flies in and out of Charlevoix throughout the year. He said when they arrive at airports that have skydiving his pilot knows what is going on.

"My pilot has never had an issue with skydiving at an airport," Chionsini said. "They follow the rules."

Doug LaBelle, who has used the Charlevoix airport, also said his pilots have never had issues with skydiving operations at local airports.

"Neither one of my pilots have interference with parachutes at an airport where an operation has occurred," LaBelle said.

LaBelle said Kurtz's business meets the standards to operate. He felt the number of jumps should not affect a pilot's operation and the city council should work more to combat the number of birds on the runway than worry about skydivers landing on an approved drop zone.

"It just doesn't make sense that members of city council are worried about liability when it appears the paperwork is in order," LaBelle said. "There are more birds than jumps at the airport."

Safety facts Statistically, parachute jump deaths are at their lowest nationally, according to the U.S. Parachute Association.

In 2013, there were 3.2 million jumps out of airplanes in the United States, and only 24 people were killed in the process. That's a death likelihood of about eight in a million jumps, which is one of the lowest death rates in the sport's history, according to the USPA.

The rate of people dying to skydiving accidents has declined steadily since the 1970s, the association reported. The average number of yearly fatalities during the 1970s was 42, compared to 26 during the 2000s and 22 since 2010.

Between 2000 and 2013, the number of fatalities per year decreased 25 percent, according to the USPA.

Another interesting statistic shows the rate of skydiving deaths decreased by 37.5 percent even as more Americans choose to jump out of planes: the number of annual jumps increased by 18.5 percent since 2000.

Tandem skydiving, which is the type done by Skydive Harbor Springs is said to be even safer. The USPA reported less than 0.003 student fatalities per 1,000 tandem jumps over the past decade. While sky-diving is getting less risky — due, in part, to increased regulation and safety considerations, according to the USPA — it is still the act of jumping out of the plane and therefore, is not without danger.

Federal Aviation Administration, which regulates air activities, does not regulate the act of skydiving.

"The FAA has extensive regulations and guidance for the safety of flight, which includes air traffic operations, pilot certifications, airport operations and aircraft manufacture," said Elizabeth Isham Cory, Great Lakes region FAA external communications and public affairs official. "We regulate the packing of the chute and reserve chute. The FAA regulates everything around the sport of skydiving, but not the sport itself. Skydiving is a self-regulated sport."

The FAA has no regulation for safety once a person jumps, she said.

"Pilots and aircraft involved in parachuting operations are subject to the same certification and maintenance requirements as pilots and aircraft involved in sightseeing operations, except for the promise to residents that she will ask the questions and search out the facts of every issue that comes to her as a representative to the third ward.

"I remain committed to being thorough on any item coming to city council that requires a good look at," Gibson said. "I was elected to do a job and I will be committed to my campaign to continue to represent the people of my ward."

Bryan, 62, decided to run after hearing from friends and neighbors that there needs to be a change to the third ward representation.

"When you have enough people come to you and ask you to run it becomes clear the people are dissatisfied," Bryan said. "I filed because I felt this is what I should do for my community. I am committed to this campaign and the city of Charlevoix."

Bryan said the city council has a negative perception and people are looking for a change and hopes to bring a different perspective to council.

"We need a new perspective of looking at what matters to all of us," Bryan said. "I want to ask questions and have a 'how can we make this work' attitude while still being considerate and respectful toward others."

Two key differences set him apart from the ballot-certified candidates: He wasn't required to gather petition signatures, and he didn't meet the same filing deadline as the other candidates, said Charlevoix City Clerk Joyce Golding.

"They file a write-in candidate declaration of intent with me and file the same form the each candidate files with the county," Golding said. "The write-in candidate's name is not on the ballot, but when voters record the person's name, who is running on the ballot, it is tallied."

Golding said write-in candidates have until 4 p.m. on Oct. 23 to file for the November election.

City council members Jeffrey Porter, Ward 1 and Leon Perron, Ward 2, are also up for re-election.

Bridge Street Tap Room co-owner and manager Aaron Hagen is on the ballot against in Porter in the upcoming election.

These three city council seats are up for election on Nov. 3. All seats are two-year terms expiring November 2017.

Invasive quagga mussels found in Crooked Lake

CONWAY — Routine surveys recently led to the discovery of quagga mussels in Crooked Lake, near Conway. Quagga mussels are an invasive species that are known to cause severe disruptions to our native ecosystems and can be destructive to water-related infrastructure. In response to this discovery, Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council highly recommends that all boaters decontaminate their boats before they leave Crooked Lake to prevent the spread to other inland lakes.

"This find does not mean Crooked Lake is infested with quagga mussels," said Kevin Cronk, Director of monitoring and research for Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council. "At this point, they have only been found at a few locations near the Little Traverse Township boat launch off of U.S. 31."

Regarding the magnitude of this discovery Cronk commented that "This is the first inland lake in our service area, beyond Lake Charlevoix which has an open connection with Lake Michigan, where quagga have been documented." In fact, when reporting the infestation to the Midwest Invasive Species Information Network, the Watershed Council found that this was the first report of a quagga mussel infestation in an inland lake for the entire state of Michigan.

The quagga mussels were discovered during an aquatic plant survey being conducted on Crooked Lake last week.

"When I saw the mussels I had a suspicion they were quagga," said Matt Claucherty, an AmeriCorps volunteer for the Watershed Council. "I wasn't 100 percent sure because they had never been found in Crooked Lake before."

A sample was collected and sent to Ashley Baldridge, PhD, a Research Benthic Ecologist at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory for confirmation.

Quagga mussels are a small freshwater bivalve mollusk that grow to around four centimeters in adulthood. They are a close relative of the invasive zebra mussel, both species introduced into the Great Lakes region roughly 30 years ago. Since that time they have steadily spread, though, quagga mussels have out competed zebras and are now the dominant bivalve in the Great Lakes. Quagga mussels have the ability to rapidly colonize the waters they inhabit, adhering to hard surfaces or clustering together in sandy or mucky areas.

Quagga mussels cause a variety of problems for people and the lake ecosystem. They clog water intake structures, pipes and screens leading to substantial increases in operation and maintenance costs. Their sharp shells can litter shorelines, creating hazards for those recreating on beaches and other shoreline areas. Perhaps the most serious consequence of their introduction is the impact that they will likely have on the Crooked Lake ecosystem. Quagga mussels compete directly with fish and other aquatic organisms for food, disrupting the natural food web and nutrient cycle of the lake. Furthermore, Crooked Lake is located at the upper end of the Inland Water Route, which means that, if not held in check, the invasive mussels will drift down and infest other water bodies, such as Burt Lake.

"Our main concern is that quagga mussels will be transported to other inland lakes in our area in or on the boats and trailers going in and out of Crooked Lake" Cronk said. "Even boats that are in the lake for a short period of time can pick up quagga mussels and spread them to other lakes or streams."

To avoid spreading the quagga mussels to other lakes, boats, trailers, waders and other fishing and boating equipment should be properly cleaned, dried or disinfected after use. Although some invasive species, such as Eurasian watermilfoil are readily visible to the human eye, many others like the quagga mussel are too small to be readily noticed. The public can help control the spread of these aquatic invaders by taking simple actions every time you remove your boat from the water regardless of whether you know the lake is infested or not.

— Remove visible mud, plants, fish, or animals from your boat, trailer, or other equipment (anchovies, centerboards, props, etc.) before leaving the water body. Note that the quagga mussels were found attached to aquatic plant stems.

— Drain all water from live wells, bilges, motor, transom, and other containers before leaving the launch area.

— Wash your boat, trailer, and equipment thoroughly with hot tap water (140 degrees or higher) to remove plants and organisms that were not visible at the boat launch.

— Allow your boat to dry for a minimum of 5 days in a sunny location before transferring into a new body water.

— Do not release live bait or aquarium pets into any waters.

— Discard fish waste in the trash.

For more information on quagga mussels, and on clean boating to prevent the spread of aquatic invasive species visit watershed-council.org/learn.

United States Golf Association encourages people to Play 9

CHARLEVOIX — The United States Golf Association (USGA) is celebrating the sport of golf on July 29, 2015, by encouraging people to take the time to play nine holes of golf.

Whether new to the sport of golf, or being an avid golfer, the USGA's Play 9 is an opportunity to play a round of golf at a local course. As part of Play 9, the Charlevoix Golf Club will discount the price for a round of golf to $12. Golfers are encouraged to book a tee-time online at charlevoixgolfclub.com. By booking a tee time, golfers are guaranteed a time to play golf.

"The USGA is doing a wonderful job by promoting the importance of playing nine-holes of golf," said Tom Heid, golf director. "A lot of golfers simply do not have the time to play eighteen holes of golf, nine holes is a great option and a time saver. By taking the time to play nine, golfers are being active and enjoying the outdoors."

The Charlevoix Golf Club is a nine-hole walking course. This course can be played in two hours. With a gentle, sloping terrain and tree lined fairways, the Charlevoix Golf Club caters to every skill level.

To learn more about Play 9 or the Charlevoix Golf Club, please call the recreation department at (231) 547-3253 or, to book a tee-time, call the Pro Shop at (231) 547-3268.

2015 MSPGA State Seniors Open coming to area in late August

BELLAIRE — Some of the state's top senior golfers are headed to Northern Michigan to compete for the Michigan Publinx Senior Golf Association State Seniors Open Amateur Championship in late August.

The Shanty Creek Resort and Lodge in Bellaire will play host to the MSPGA's statewide championship, now in its 40th year, from Aug. 28-30.

The three-day, 54-hole medal play tournament has three divisions open to competitors, including a senior (50 and up), super-senior (65 and up) and legends (70 and up) division, and will crown champions in each division for the lowest gross and net (handicap-adjusted) score.

Defending champions Billy Green of Waterford, Mike Phillips of Bloomfield Hills and Dennis Ahern of Chapel Hill, N.C., will be in this year's field, and 2014 net winners Ray Donnelly of Troy and Tom Miller of Alden are expected to attend as well.

2014 MSPGA Players of the Year Dave McTear of Rockford, Jerry Fenby of West Bloomfield, John Pratt of Troy and Ray Maidment of Saline, and past winners Jim Briegel of Ann Arbor, Mike Grace of Waterford and Tom Pilon of Plymouth also highlight a star-studded field.

Local golfers have the opportunity to join the hunt for the title, as entry is open to any golfer age 50 and over who can complete a competitive round in under five hours.

Sign-up forms are on the organization's website, mbspa.com, in the state tournament section. Registration costs $300 to compete for both the net and gross title, or $290 to compete for only the net.

For more information on the course at Shanty Creek, visit the club's website at www.shantycreek.com.

Junior Golf Program announced 2015 season award winners

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix County Junior Golf program ended its 2015 season at its annual awards day.

Program director Dean Davenport announced the various skill test winners and tournament champions and added, "It was another successful season. We had just under 100 enrolled and once again a large enrollment of girls highlighted our program now that there is a girl's team at Charlevoix High School."

Davenport cited the 8-9 year-old class as the most attentive and a young group with great potential. He also pointed out the great cooperation the program receives from local courses; Antrim Dells, Belvedere, Charlevoix Country Club and the Municipal that allows the program to use their facilities with no charge. Davenport praised the 25 mentors that make the program so successful. The program has been teaching youngsters in the Charlevoix area life's values through golf for 21 years.

Those winning the skill testing and the two tournament champions are:

— Putting: ages 8-9, Eric Arlt and Sara Pletcher; ages 10-11, John Saur and Merette Carson; ages 12-13, Tyler Ostrum, Abby Hilligan and Kian Bondi; age 14, Camden Musilek and Rylenn Sladek.

Coach of the Year

Shawn Racignol, Petoskey

There are coaches who relish in the spotlight, then there are ones who go quietly about their business, deflecting to those they coach. Petoskey coach Shawn Racignol is without a doubt the latter. The Petoskey baseball coach helped guide his Northmen to 25-8 season, leading them to a Division 2 district championship and Division 2 regional final appearance. Petoskey was once again in the Big North Conference title hunt, finishing second with a 10-2 record. Four Northmen would be selected for post-season All Star games, while the team also carried a 3.51 GPA.

Honorable Mention:

Petoskey: Parker Monley, Craig Clark;
Gaylord: Joe Miller, Jacob Freeman, Levi Irish, Jack Korte; Charlevoix: Austin Putman, Christian Matye, KeNen Borths; Harbor Springs: Chase Lepird;
East Jordan: Collin Petrie, Herschell Sutton, Colin Shepard; Boysie City: Zach Napont, Tanner Kruzel, Dom Archey; Alanson: Brett Williams, Jake Phillips;
Mackinaw City: Matt Rivera, Zach Smith;
Pallston: Will Friend;
JoBurg: Trevor Pickelmann, Orlin Kierczynski, Joel Kussrow;
St. Mary: Josh Nowicki.

Swiss puts Petoskey baseball on the map en route to being: Player of the Year

DREW KOCHANNY

(231) 439-9345, dkochanny@petoskeynews.com

PETOSKEY — When recent Petoskey graduate Jordan Swiss first began his soon to be impressive prep baseball career, questions surrounded it.

Not about his talent, that was clear, but whether or not that talent would get noticed in baseball so far up north.

Playing a sport during a season in which downstate players have traditionally gained the notice of scouts before those in northern Michigan, it came as a legitimate concern.

Four years later, it's safe to say that scouts and teams around the state of Michigan know of both Swiss and the talent that lies in this region.

"I had the opportunity to move to a more baseball specific area but I chose to stay in the town I grew up in, and play as a Northmen," said Swiss. "I've kinda felt like a Northmen since the very first time I put on a Little League jersey for all stars. That was my first experience representing baseball outside of Petoskey. After that, I couldn't see myself playing anywhere else."

In staying in the area, he helped gain respect for northern Michigan baseball from the rest of the state, while being the first ever player from Petoskey to be named to the Comerica Park All Star game. He would also be named first team Division 2 All-State and now, the Northern Michigan Review Area Baseball Player of the Year.

Though he had been a consistent contributor on the Petoskey varsity team since his sophomore season, everything came together for Swiss this season, in the field, on the mound and at the plate.

"I had an impressive group of guys behind me," said Swiss. "They always played exceptional defense. We consistently made the routine play, and that's what you have to do if you want to win. On the offensive side, we were constantly picking each other up."

While he's been a standout on the mound throughout his high school career, Petoskey senior Jordan Swiss became one of the better pitchers in the state this season, playing to the tune of a 0.333 ERA.

At the dish he batted .396 with 44 hits, two home runs, 25 RBI and 29 runs scored, while swiping 15 bags.

He carried a .923 fielding percentage as a shortstop, being a part of 16 double plays and one triple play.

Pitching, though, was where he shined the most.

"I felt so comfortable on the mound," said Swiss. "My plus-pitch was my slider. I had it going all year long. I had the confidence with that pitch to strike out any batter I faced."

When he wasn't dominating on the mound, Petoskey's Jordan Swiss brought his bat when stepping into the box this past season, hitting .396.

He logged 63 innings, with an 8-2 record and would allow just three earned runs all season, netting a 0.333 ERA, while striking out 83 batters.

Behind Swiss, the team flourished this season, putting together a 25-8 season, earning a district championship and regional final berth. They'd also bring in a 10-2 Big North Conference record, finishing second in the league.

"Jordan was a big piece of the puzzle for three years," Petoskey coach Shawn Racignol said. "He made a big impact as a sophomore and it was nice to watch him mature in his career, both physically and mentally.

"I think the biggest difference for his this year was his overall knowledge of the game and his mental approach. He was never not prepared to play and that's rare for a kid to play every single game and be prepared to go."

That level of preparation will continue on for Swiss, as he continues his next chapter of baseball at Saginaw Valley State University.

Deciding to be a Cardinal over a number of other offers, including Division I, was easy after meeting SVSU head coach Chris Ebricht.

"His vision for building a winning team and assisting individual players each reach their fullest potential seemed like a perfect fit for me," Swiss said of Ebricht. "I knew immediately on my first visit, that's where I was going."

"He believed in me, and in return I believed in him, 100 percent. The campus is awesome, and their baseball facilities are impressive. With his help, one day, I may get to accomplish my dream to play in the big leagues."

In talking with Swiss, never does he give off the star athlete persona that often follows in the position, but rather carries a humbleness, deflecting most of the attention to his teammates, coaches and family.

"It's a huge honor and very humbling to be selected as player of the year," said Swiss. "I'm really thankful to have had a good enough season to be considered. There are a lot of talented ball players around this area. I just couldn't be more excited."

It's an attitude and big reason why it's easy to believe Swiss will continue to succeed at SVSU, heading towards bigger goals in the game, continuing to let people know about the talent this area can offer.

"I think he's more than ready to move onto the next level and we wish him the best of luck," added Racignol. "We'll be here for all the support he'll need in the future."

DDA takes a closer look. Building tenants want new public restrooms

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Owners of the Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company would like to see a change to the public restrooms utilized by their patrons and boat tourist.

Rich Bergmann, brewery co-owner, talked about the restrooms during the Downtown Development Authority/Main Street board meeting after a tour of the Robert Bridge Memorial Park building by board members on Monday.

"I feel we have dated equipment," Bergmann said, referring to the mechanical equipment in the restrooms.

Bergmann said one challenge his company deals with is hand washing in the women's restroom. The counters are always wet. He said that is because sink location and hand dryer location, which causes the water to be everywhere.

"It just does not keep a restroom clean because you have water moving everywhere and people shake their hands and it's all over the mirrors," Bergmann said. "I just don't think it is a good design for a place we want to keep clean."

Members from the Downtown Development Authority/Main Street board and public got to tour the Robert Bridge Memorial Park building on Monday with Pat Elliott, Department of Public Works superintendent and Annia Doyle, DDA/Main Street director. They were there to look at the repair needs building tenants brought to their attention earlier in the year. From left are board members Fred Dimartino, mayor Gabe Campbell, Diana Dupont, Kirby Dipert, John Kurtz, main street sub-committee member Dennis Kusina, Dan Barron, Annia Doyle and Elliott.

Charlevoix recently lost one of its most most prolific community volunteers, though those who knew Bev Boss believe that her examples of dedication and selflessness will live on.

"She left a legacy of caring for people who aren't cared for, and sharing," said Jan Boss, a relative to Bev and director of spiritual formation at the Charlevoix Community Reformed Church.

"Don't grieve Bev, be Bev."

Boss was born and raised in East Jordan, and worked in the East Jordan and Charlevoix School districts, as well as the Charlevoix Area Hospital. She had many causes, but most notably was chairwoman for the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project, which grew to give hundreds of children in the Charlevoix area a Christmas.

"She told me one time, that she laid in bed crying because kids in Charlevoix wouldn't have Christmas presents," Jan said. "She was a huge inspiration to everyone that she met in being totally unselfish and grace giving."

Last year was the first in more than CHARLEVOIX — Determined, spirited, and hopeful are just a few of the words one might use to describe Charlevoix resident Kali Pung. At the age of 26, Pung suffered a life-altering swimming accident that left her with a C1-C2 spinal fracture and paralysis from the neck down. Doctors gave Pung's parents a grim picture for recovery, but she defied them all and hasn't stopped living life to help others with spinal injuries.

"The doctors told my parents I probably wouldn't make it through the night, however, when I kept beating the odds, they said that I must 'have always been a fighter, had strong faith, and loved life.' What they said was very true and still is," Pung said.

After much rehabilitation and resolve Pung can now breathe and talk on a pacer, feel pain throughout her entire body, ignite most major muscle groups and wiggle her fingers and toes with concentration. These improvements, however, came with much time spent

DDA approves wayfinding sign for Marina District

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — To keep some businesses happy that are located in the Marina District, some members of the Downtown Development Authority approved a wayfinding sign, despite recommendations from the director to wait.

The sign request is from those businesses that run along Bridge Park Drive because they don't get the foot traffic that is on Bridge Street, said Bridge Street Tap Room co-owner Aaron Hagen.

"We really would like to see this sign go up on the other side of the map of Charlevoix," Hagen said. "We are far from the end of our summer season where there is pedestrian traffic walking the sidewalks of Charlevoix. It would be really beneficial for everyone in the Marina District to have this sign up."

Hagen added that potentially the plan is to have one of these signs on every street corner all through downtown Charlevoix.

"When we do get those signs made for each street it would be a simple change to modify this one going up," Hagen said.

DDA/Main Street director, Annie Doyle made the recommendation to wait on the sign because the Michigan Department of Transportation did not want the sign in the public right-of-way. The sign they want does not meet MDOT specifications and Doyle said the Main Street design committee expressed an interest in coming up with a master plan for signs in the downtown.

"The Main Street Design committee would like to come up with a master plan for wayfinding signs," Doyle said. "I think we need to do this right."

In June, the DDA board approved a Marina District sign that had seven panels, which pointed to the public docks, splash pad, charters and rentals, ferry service, harbor cruises, brewery and public restrooms, because they believed it was approved by MDOT.

The sign would have been attached to a light pole on U.S. 31 at the corner of East Clinton Street with each panel directing people toward businesses along Bridge Park Drive and harbor amenities.

The sign was approved 5-1, with members Kirby Dipert and Tamle Gillespie absent, member Diane Dupont against and member John Kurtz abstaining to speak for the Beaver Island Boat Company. BIBCO did not want the sign put up as it is now. BIBCO would like to wait until a master plan is in place so the sign could be done right, Kurtz said to board members.

Doyle's other concern was the more than $1,600 price tag that came with a sign that most likely is only temporary, she said.

"We approved half our sign budget on a sign that may or may not stay in the downtown," Doyle said.

Doyle expects the sign will go up by the map of Charlevoix sign in East Park within a month.

Authority board chairman Dan Barron voted in favor of the sign because he felt there is no reason to go through more bureaucracy. It was the same sign approved in June, he said.

"I don't believe if we sent it through committee we would see it up this summer," Barron said. "It is an interim sign and there is no reason to waste time in the bureaucratic process. I think having the sign up is the wish of the design committee."

Experiences with boating go back to childhood

The first time Jack Weber took the helm of a vessel was in grade school during a family trip to the Wisconsin Dells.

"The captain of the tour boat asked if anyone wanted to take the helm, and I volunteered," Weber said.

That memory and his first grade memory of being on flat bottom wood row boat — with a small 4 hp outboard — first fishing trip with his father are what helped develop his boating interest.

"The fishing trips were not a weekly or daily occurrence, but often enough to make an impression on me," Weber said.

The fishing expeditions continued into his early teen years, at which time being a teen led to different activities such as sports, cars and dating. After graduating high school Weber attended the University of Wisconsin. While at college Weber had the opportunity to join the Wisconsin Hoofers, an outdoor activity group, which led to learning how to sail — on Sunfish and Melges Scows.

After college Weber had lost touch with boating for about 8 years until he started dating his wife to be at the time. Her family had a summer cottage on Crystal Lake where they used a watercraft for skiing and other water sports.

"After we married, we decided that it was time to get a boat of our own so we purchased a used Larson with a 65 horsepower Mercury outboard," Weber said. "That boat about 20 years, at which time our high school aged daughters and their friends established a need for a larger, newer boat.

Weber purchased a Sea Ray that he still owns today. He and his wife retired to Charlevoix and brought the boat with them. After moving to the area, boating on a larger lake was a learning experience for them.

"Fortunately, some of our new friends, the D'Alcorns, invited us to join them at some of the boating activities that they were a part of," Weber said. "They encouraged us to join the yacht club and the Tip of the Mitt Sail and Power Squadron. We felt that the yacht club was mostly for the sailboat racers, but the Power Squadron offered educational and social activities that fit our needs.

We joined and have been members for about eight years."

At the first officer election Weber and his wife attended there was an opening for a Member at Large, and he decided to volunteer for it. Weber was a Member at Large for three years, before the secretary position opened because Weber had secretary recording experience from previous volunteer positions he decided to take on the responsibility of squadron secretary. Tip of the Mitt Sail and Power Squadron is a great resource and social opportunity for people who enjoy boating, Weber said.

"The programs presented at the monthly membership meetings have greatly increased our knowledge of the community we retired in," Weber said. "I have taken many classes and seminars that have increased my boating skills and water safety knowledge, which is the main purpose for the existence of the United States Sail and Power Squadron. The educational and social opportunities we have experienced as members of the Power Squadron have been a significant addition to our retirement years."

"The Members Log" is a monthly series where the Charlevoix Courier will feature a member of the Tip of the Mitt Sail and Power Squadron, which is a chapter of the United States Sail and Power Squadron. All the chapters promote boating through education, seamanship and navigation for all vessels small or large sailing and mechanically powered. The series is designed to tell the personal boating stories of each member, share their experiences with the organization and give the reader an insight about membership with the Tip of the Mitt Sail and Power Squadron. This month the Courier turns its light to Jack Weber, the secretary for the Tip of the Mitt Sail and Power Squadron.

Botany lesson

Plants are amazing creatures. They don't have the sort of nervous system we do and they are mostly incapable of movement. They none-the-less communicate with one another and with the other creatures around them. They send chemical messages not only to other plants, but also to a variety of insects and even to mammals like us. And we could not get along without them.

We all need vitamins, all sorts of them. There are a half-dozen B vitamins, and others named for almost all the other letters of the alphabet, it seems. We personally cannot make our own vitamins, even though the bacteria in our gut make some of them. This botany lesson concerns only Vitamin B1, also known as thiamin. Too little thiamin in our diet can produce that dreadful disease, Beriberi. Few other diseases have such an ugly name.

Beriberi produces degenerative changes in both the digestive system and the nervous system. It can be fatal, but in the modern world, it is blessedly rare and only the product of a terribly poor diet. Thiamin would plants produce a vitamin that we humans absolutely need?" Plants may be amazing, but they are not benevolent. Surely the plants must get something out of it.

The biggest problem facing rooted land plants is getting enough water. A deficit of water brings plant growth to an abrupt halt. The leaves of land plants are constantly evaporating water into the air, and cannot function without access to that air. How does a plant know how many new roots to grow in order to provide enough water to supply the loss from leaves? Is there some sort of communication from the leaves to the roots? Remember plants in food cures the disease very quickly. Most of those sources of thiamin are plants. Green parts are especially curative.

The question is, "Why don't have nerves or blood vessels.

The leaves of plants produce thiamin, which migrates down the plant and actually is necessary for the growth of roots. In that circumstance we are more like the less beautiful roots of plants that we are like those attractive leaves. If a plant has more leaves making thiamin, it will grow more roots to supply the necessary water. Newly grown roots are the only ones that can take up water from the soil.

Is all this just a curiosity, or might it be of value to those of us who like to grow plants? A transplant with more leaves will grow roots faster than one with fewer leaves. Excessive pruning of the top of a plant can dramatically reduce its overall growth, because the roots are inhibited as much as the tops are.

A knowledge of thiamin can help us to grow better trees, shrubs and vegetables. Vitamins are really important to all living things, and plants provide them....

Slow down Charlevoix

Editor: With the construction on State Street, the residents on Antrim Street have seen a welcome reprieve from the incessant speeders. Unfortunately, with construction complete the speeders have their speedway open again. Despite numerous complaints to police and city officials, nothing is done to slow the speed of drivers on Antrim Street, especially motorists who have children. As parents, one would hope that they recognize that Antrim is a residential street with kids playing outside, people walking and tourists taking in the local sights and sounds.

Despite this, hospital employees, local residents and contractors alike find it necessary cover the section from Grant Street to Park Avenue in the speed of sound. At that 25 miles per hour — the speed limit, it should take eight seconds to go one city block — about the length of a football field. Instead, the drivers on Antrim Street make it in about four to five seconds. Is the potential cost of a life worth three or four seconds? Please, the residents on Antrim Street beg you to slow down, we love our kids.

Dr. Jeff Porter maintains a level playing field for all businesses

Editor: I have known Dr. Porter for almost 30 years, and I have come to respect his intelligence and have grown fond of his irreverent sense of humor. But more importantly, I have come to know his love of the city of Charlevoix. When I see the letters published in your paper criticizing his stances in city council meetings, I question the motivations and civic experience of the individuals opinions on these public issues. I would love to hear the backgrounds and experience of the people with the dissenting opinions. Can they match up with Dr. Porter's record of civic duty? I think not. Not only did Jeff Porter serve his country in Vietnam as a MASH unit dentist, but after moving to Charlevoix in 1971 he has served on the Downtown Development Authority and the Charlevoix City Council, raised money for the Charlevoix Community Public Library, the Crooked Tree Arts Council and both the Congregational and Episcopal churches.

The questions at hand are simple. Can a business gain advantage over other businesses by violating civic ordinances and working inside deals? The owners of the Tap Room made a business decision to occupy a small space off the main street to minimize start up risk and test a concept. The concept has proven to be popular and has every reason to succeed. However, in making the decision to occupy their location they took a business risk on the ability to expand. Does that mean that the city should relax its ordinances to accommodate one business? Should the city and its residents now expect and tolerate open alcohol in public spaces, like New Orleans? Doesn't this create an economic disadvantage to other business along Bridge Street? Or should the owners make a strategic move to another location, much like Cherry Republic, to a space more appropriate to their ambitions?

I will say this, that the next city election will unlikely be funded by the Hobo and Gypsy Artist SuperPacs. Thankfully, it will be decided by Charlevoix residents who hopefully understand that laws are passed to maintain a level playing field for all businesses and to reflect the values of its citizens.

Has Enbridge earned our trust?

Editor: Michigan's Petroleum Pipeline Task Force recently recommended that squeezing oily sludge strip-mined in Alberta, Canada, through the pipeline crossing the Straits of Mackinac (Line 5) should be prohibited. Who in the Michigan government will decide whether or not to enact this prohibition?

Enbridge's 2010 spill near the Kalamazoo River provides ample reason to apply pressure to enact the Task Force's recommendation quickly.

Our National Transportation Safety Board's investigation of that spill from an Enbridge pipeline near the Kalamazoo River revealed:

— A week before the spill Enbridge's vice-president for U.S. operations testified before Congress that "Our response time from our control center can be almost instantaneous, and our large leaks are typically detected by our control center personnel." Enbridge's definition of "instantaneous" is unorthodox. For 17 hours after receiving alarms, the Enbridge control center staff in Edmonton, Alberta, kept trying to push oily sludge through the leaking pipeline.

— Enbridge kept such a "low profile" they failed to prepare local emergency responders to help in the event of a disaster. Local firefighters investigating the smell of crude oil in the area weren't even aware the Enbridge pipeline existed.

— Enbridge's own employees at the scene of the spill responded inappropriately, and Enbridge failed to have help nearby to call on. It took two weeks for Enbridge to admit that the pipeline spilled tar sands oil, which requires a different response than what Enbridge claimed was spilled. This oily sludge is diluted with a toxic chemical, an additional risk for residents and responders.

Enbridge offers us comforting, assuring words claiming Enbridge's constant high-tech monitoring ensures Line 5's safety, and Enbridge is thoroughly prepared for any disaster, that its "goal has been to safely and securely transport energy resources through that pipeline."

Has Enbridge earned our trust?

Charlevoix Area Garden Club appreciates support of its annual Garden Walk

Editor: The Charlevoix Area Garden Club sends a big thank you to the "Class of 2015," the homeowners who generously opened their gardens to the public for the 17th Annual Garden Walk. During this year's Garden Walk, the club also staged a luncheon with tables designed by our members. Another big thank you to Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant for their generosity in providing a delicious lunch for 200 patrons. And last, but not least, we send yet another big thank you to both Linda and Richard Mueller, the owners of Castle Farms, not only for participating in the Garden Walk but also for providing the venue for the luncheon. The two combined events are the biggest fundraisers of the year for the Charlevoix Garden Club that maintains eleven civic gardens.

COMMUNITY Highlights

ANNIVERSARY

Andersons celebrate Golden Anniversary

Gary and Kay Anderson of Charlevoix, Mich. (formerly of Milford, Mich.) will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Aug. 1, 2015. They met at Flint junior college and wed in 1965.

Gary was born and raised in Milford (graduating from Milford High School in 1963). Kay was raised in Northville and Brighton (graduating from Brighton High School in 1963). Gary worked for his father Donald "Sam" Farley in his electrical business (Farley Electric) for years before taking over the reins himself. Kay worked as a pre-school assistant when she wasn't at home with their three girls. They raised their children in Milford where many friends and family still reside. Their oldest daughter Holly (Gary) Fuchs live in Charlevoix and have three children (Tyler, Maxy and Boden). Gary and Holly work at Northern Michigan Pain Specialists where Gary is a physician. Kelly (Darren) Romano live in Charlevoix and have three children (Ablgall, Megan and Jillian). Darren and Kelly own and operate The Grey Gables Restaurant and Catering in Charlevoix. Their youngest daughter Amy (Greg) Farmer live in Traverse City, Mich. and also have three children (Drew, Riley and Anderson). Greg and Amy are both high school math teachers and teach at TC Central and TC West. Gary and Kay spend their winters in warm climates, most recently Hawaii. Next year they plan on spending the winter in Arizona.

They have been blessed in life by their special group of friends in Milford, a few close friends in Charlevoix and a tight knit family. They enjoyed a European cruise last year with their good friends to celebrate their 50th.

Goodwill Northern Michigan's executive director retires

The Board of Directors of Goodwill Northern Michigan has announced the upcoming retirement of the organization's executive director, Cecil McNally. While no date has been officially set, an executive search for his replacement will be initiated later this summer, with the position anticipated being filled within the next 12 months. Upon hire of a new executive director, McNally will remain on board for an undetermined period of time as senior adviser, where he will assist with the transition.

McNally has been the leader of Goodwill Northern Michigan since 2003. During his tenure, he successfully expanded the retail operations in Northern Michigan from three stores to nine, while increasing Goodwill's community impact across the area. He oversaw the construction of the new Goodwill Inn in Traverse City and established Patriot Place, a homeless veterans transitional living center, in Gaylord. McNally helped add Food Rescue and new food service and job training programs to Goodwill's community outreach. His passion for providing affordable housing in the Traverse City area culminated with the approval and recent ground-breaking of the Carson Square development in Garfield Township.

"I am proud of the people and accomplishments the organization has made the last 12 years, we have a very talented group of employees that are dedicated to Goodwill and the communities we serve," McNally said. "I look forward to seeing Goodwill continue to grow and have a positive impact on our communities."

While the board seeks to find a replacement, board chairman, Glenn Hirt, reflects on McNally's contribution to the organization.

"Goodwill is a significant component of the societal infrastructure of our community," Hirt said. "Cecil was instrumental in getting us to this point. We wish him the very best and hope to see him continue his involvement into his retirement."

Goodwill Northern Michigan is a human services agency, covering 19 counties across northern Michigan. Its primary goal is to help community members overcome barriers to independence, through housing assistance, job training and food programs.

Search for Le Griffon still on west of Charlevoix

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Historical Society will present a program on the search for the historic French fur trading vessel Le Griffon at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 4, in the Charlevoix Public Library community room A.

This program will be presented by state of Michigan Archaeologist Dean Anderson of the State Historic Preservation Office. Dr. Anderson received his Ph.D. from Michigan State University in 1992, held the position of Michigan Historical Archaeologist through 2010, and became State Archaeologist in 2011.

For the past several years, the search for the Griffon in western Lake Michigan, spearheaded by Charlevoix resident Steve Libert, has been in the local, state, national and international news. The boat was built by French explorer and fur trader Rene-Robert Cavelier, sieur de LaSalle, near Niagara Falls and sailed to Lake Michigan. In September of 1679, she left Green Bay with a load of furs and was never seen again.

Thought to be the first European sailing vessel to ply the waters of the Upper Great Lakes, the remains of the Griffon are now referred to as the "holy grail" of Great Lake shipwrecks. Intrigue over its fate and location has never ceased, and the quest to discover the Griffon continues.

Steve Libert has pinpointed a wreck near Wisconsin west of Charlevoix and hopes to determine its provenance soon. Dr. Anderson will be presenting his interpretation of the possibilities.

Surviving with the guilt of living

Sudden, accidental or traumatic deaths can leave us feeling shaken, unsure and vulnerable. We find it difficult to make sense of such a loss; it just feels cruel and random.

When a person survives an incident in which others — especially loved ones — have died, it's common to feel guilty for living. The grief process is completely different than what we might experience when a death has been anticipated, such as after a prolonged illness. Survivor's guilt is an expression of grief and loss, and should be treated as such. For some, the guilt is just one of many complex feelings following a traumatic death, and is an expression of mourning. Friends, family, faith leaders and other community resources are often able to help us work through these difficult feelings. But for others, it can become devastating, all-nightmares. Talking about the traumatic event, as a simulating it into everyday living and honoring those who have died can help survivors overcome feelings of guilt.

AMY WIELAND

Executive Director, Hospice of Northwest Michigan

Survivors sometimes experience symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder and depression consuming and self-destructive.

A sudden loss leaves us no opportunity to prepare or to say goodbye. It can escalate beyond grief into shock, anger, guilt, depression, despair and hopelessness, with serious symptoms like flashbacks and that call for more formal treatment. Unfortunately, those who need help often avoid it because of the perceived stigma of getting professional mental health support. They also may not know that Hospice is an excellent resource to anyone who has suffered loss of any kind, including those experiencing survivor's guilt and severe depression. Hospice of Northwest Michigan offers free grief and loss support to anyone in the community, and can help individuals connect with other professional resources too.

There is nothing wrong with needing help to make sense of a tragic, sudden loss. Survivors search for meaning and reason behind it, and find none. They must be allowed to grieve, to understand that "what if?" and "why me?" are questions that need not be answered. Losses can't be compared to one another; the greatest loss is always the one that the grieving person is suffering.

Hospice is about living each day fully, and its foundation is quality of life. That's why it is such an ideal resource for those who survive when loved ones are lost suddenly. It's a plan for the survivors, a portal to a community support system that will assist with all types of grief and loss. Hospice works to ensure death can happen with dignity — not only for the deceased, but for the living — even when it happens unexpectedly.

We prepare for the unthinkable by purchasing insurance, drafting wills and making our wishes known. Choosing a hospice that will be ready to meet your family's needs during a sudden, unexpected loss, or a prolonged illness, is similarly proactive steps that will ensure all surviving loved ones have the resources they need to recover and heal. You have a choice.

Charlevoix library gives 'George' a name and a home

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library announces the recent donation of The Thinker by Marshal M. Fredericks to the library's art collection. This bronze statue was donated by local patrons Michael and Rhea Dow. It now sits in the main lobby for all to see, touch and enjoy.

One of the most prolific sculptors of the 20th century, Marshall M. Fredericks (1908-1998) is known in America and abroad for his monumental figurative sculpture, public memorials and fountains, portraits and animal figures.

His sculptures can be found in more than 150 public and corporate locations throughout the world. Fredericks' works are located in parks and gardens, government embassies and royal palaces, museums and zoos, universities, hospitals and libraries.

The artist named the statue "The Thinker," but the Dow's and the library wanted a name that was a bit more colorful and approachable. We are proud to announce that we have five winners of the "Name That Chimp Contest." More than 100 children submitted names and the name chosen was "George."

The winners will receive a gift certificate to the Round Lake Bookstore and the name will become part of the permanent plaque on site at the library. The Charlevoix Public Library is located at 220 W. Clinton St., Charlevoix.

For more information, visit charlevoixlibrary.org or call (231) 237-7340.

OBITUARIES

Robert G. Elliott, 74

Robert G. Elliott, 74, of Charlevoix passed away Wednesday, July 22, 2015, and is at eternal rest with his Lord.

He was born in Detroit on Feb. 10, 1941, and served in the U.S. Navy.

Bob married Carol Legg in Detroit on Jan. 22, 1966. The couple moved to Charlevoix where they owned and operated Frank's Flower Shop and Greenhouse. They raised their family and were active in the community.

Bob retired from Big Rock Power Plant in 2001. Bob and Carol enjoyed winters in Florida since their retirement.

Bob enjoyed fishing, hunting, gardening and the outdoors. He especially enjoyed spending time with his wife, children and grandchildren.

Bob was involved in founding the local Big Brothers and Sisters, was part of a team for Habitat for Humanity for Humanity Blitz Build, volunteered as a cook for St. Matthew's House Kitchen for the homeless and needy in Naples, Fla., and traveled to Ethiopia on a mission trip to provide medical relief.

Bob was a member of the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix. Bob is survived by his wife, Carol of Charlevoix; daughter, Shawn (Steve) Elliott Massa of Valparaiso, Ind.; son, Patrick (Ashlie) Elliott of Charlevoix; granddaughters, Elizabeth, Katherine and Maddie; and sister, Marion (Jim) Hajj-Behne of Glen Allen, Va.

The funeral was on Friday, July 24, at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Chip Sauer officiated. Following the funeral, military honors were conducted by the Charlevoix Area Veterans in the church yard.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

The Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix is handling the arrangements.

M. Faculak, 92

M. Faculak, 92, passed away Friday, Jul 24, 2015, Charlevoix Area Hospital in Charlevoix. Mass was Wednesday at St. Mary Church in Charlevoix. Winchester Funeral Home, Charlevoix.

Wellness Wednesday at Charlevoix hospital

Charlevoix Area Hospital will host the Wellness Wednesday program from 8-11 a.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 5, in classroom B. The screen includes Total Cholesterol, HDL ratio and glucose levels, body mass index score, muscle and fat percentages and a blood pressure reading. No fasting is required. However, if individuals are fasting, LDL and triglyceride levels also can be obtained. Cost for the service is $15.

Hemoglobin A1C Levels are offered for known or borderline diabetics for an additional $5. All participants will receive a blood pressure log, pedometer and test results at the time of the screening. A registered nurse will adapt health consultation and educational materials to individual results. No appointment is required.

Chee Peng on Bridge Street has reopened under new ownership with a ribbon cutting ceremony with the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce. Charlevoix restaurant reopens under new ownership

BY NICOLE SEYMOUR
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Chee Peng on Bridge Street just reopened to new owners this past week. The business, now owned and operated by Tousee Thao and Knick Thaggen, kept the name the same for a couple of reasons.

"Not only does 'Chee Peng' mean 'good luck' in our language, but we wanted to keep the name the same out of respect for the family we bought the business from," said co-owner Thaggen.

What new restaurant goers will see is a completely remodeled seating area and new menu options. Still keeping with traditional dishes the restaurant is focused on creating an authentic dining experience with long simmered sauces and using the galarai root — a Thai root similar to ginger — and lemongrass to boost their already flavorful menu.

In addition to a Chinese and Thai mix, the restaurant also offers a "Mexican Monday" special where you can get a wide variety of Mexican dishes. Both owners, while local residents for the past few years, are from the San Diego area with a Mexican heritage that they wanted to incorporate into the restaurant in the form of specialty dishes.

"We don't want people to feel like they have to drive to Traverse City or another town to get authentic flavors and dishes," Thaggen said.

While spice and full flavor is part of the menu at Chee Peng, they also offer a variety of gluten free and vegetarian selections with the option for guests to request dish substitutions and additions to service those with special dietary needs.

Chee Peng is open seven days a week from 11 a.m.-9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 3-8 p.m. on Sundays. To see a listing of daily specials and promotions people are encouraged to go to their Facebook page at facebook.com/pages/Chee-Peng-Restaurant/100881266623682?ref=ts..

Yard sale to raise funds for new K-9 unit

CHARLEVOIX — In order to help raise funds to replace the Charlevoix Sheriff's Department's K-9 dog, Brek, who died last December after being diagnosed with cancer, organizers will have the Charlevoix County K-9 Fund community yard sale from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 8, at American House Senior Living Community, 615 Petoskey Ave.

The Charlevoix Tent Company has agreed to donate 20 tables which will be available to rent for $10 each. Renters who choose to empty out their closets and attics to make a little extra cash have the choice of pocketing all of their earnings or donating some or all of their yard sale funds to the K-9 effort.

It costs about $15,000 to buy and train one of these dogs. They assist with missing people cases, in drug searches and even help police during robberies.

For more information on table rental, call American House in Charlevoix at (231) 547-2599.

White Cane Days to coincide with Charlevoix Waterfront Arts Fair

CHARLEVOIX — "Help the Lions help the blind" will be a common greeting to residents and visitors alike during the Charlevoix Lions Club annual White Cane Days from 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 7-8. Club members fan out through the city to raise money to support numerous projects that help blind and other visually impaired people. Lions Club members will be at Family Fare Market, Oleson's, Ace Hardware, Kmart and at various locations downtown asking for contributions.

"Charlevoix residents and visitors alike have been generous supporting this important fundraising project," said club member Bob Grupp, who assists in organizing White Cane Days for Charlevoix Lions. "We thank our neighbors and visitors for the support."

More than 80 years ago, Lions Clubs began using white canes with a red band to assist the blind in achieving independent mobility. Today, a white cane universally acknowledges that the bearer is blind. White Cane Laws are enacted in every state and in many other countries, providing blind persons a legal right-of-way when traffic is present.

All monies raised are used exclusively to support Lions projects to assist blind and other visually impaired people in Charlevoix and statewide, as well as eye care for local residents in need.

SOME PROJECTS receiving funds include:
— Leader Dog puppy search and training
— Michigan Leader Dog Training Facility
— Michigan Lions Youth Marching Band
— Welcome Home For The Blind
— Michigan Eye Bank and Transplant Center

Charlevoix Cinema III to hold more screenings of The Wizard of Boulder Park

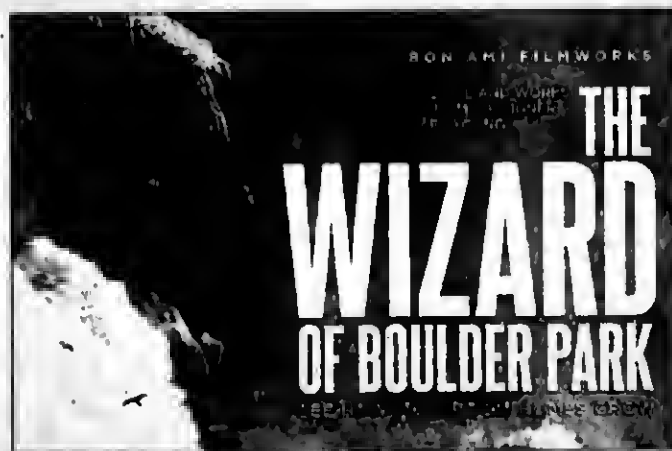

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Historical Society and Charlevoix Cinema III have scheduled additional screenings of the new historical documentary, "The Wizard of Boulder Park."

The documentary focuses on the life and works of Earl Young, a self-taught builder who created thirty-one of the world's most unique homes and structures in Charlevoix using glacial boulders culled from the northern Michigan landscape. Produced, written and directed by three-time Emmy-award-winning documentary filmmakers Brian and Anne Belanger of Bon Ami filmworks, the film presents authentic stories and perspectives of Earl Young's work from the viewpoint of historians, architects, current homeowners, friends and family members.

"The film received rave reviews following its premiere in June, and there were many people who were unable to see it because the Cinema had sold out by mid-day," said Denise Fate, president of the Charlevoix Historical Society. "Other summer residents were simply not in Charlevoix at that time, so we have made arrangements with the filmmakers and the Cinema to bring it back to the theater on a limited basis."

The additional screenings are at 11:30 a.m. on Aug. 7, 8, 14, and 15 and at 4 p.m. on Sept. 21. Sept. 21, 2015, will mark the 100th anniversary of Earl Young and Irene Harsha, wedding.

Admission is $15 at the box office, or tickets can be reserved by email at marykurtz@live.com. Proceeds from the ticket sales will benefit the Charlevoix Historical Society.

A DVD of the documentary will be available mid-August at the Charlevoix Historical Society Museum Gift Shop at 103 State Street, or online at chxhistory.com.

Grant funding to support the re-screening is provided by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

Charlevoix as the crow flies in 1938

LOOKING BACK...

On Feb. 20, Looking Back featured an aerial view of Charlevoix taken by Abrams Aerial Survey of Lansing that encompassed the whole town. This closer view of the same photo reveals details of what central Charlevoix looked like in 1938. The city provided only thirteen rather short slips for pleasure boaters on the west shore of Round Lake. To their north, beside the bridge, where the Edgewater Inn now stands, the long diagonal roof of the Charlevoix Lumber Company's sheds appears to the left of a large, barren plot of ground. This used to be occupied by rows of log "rollways" during the heyday of the lumber industry until the surrounding woodlands stood denuded of timber about two decades beforehand. There was so much sawdust in the ground here by the 1920s into the 1940s that it occasionally caught fire and smoldered for days, sending smoke over the north side of town. At far right, appears a white rectangle in a trapezoidal boundary of trees at the far end of East Dixon. This was the tennis court area of the huge Inn Hotel across Mercer Boulevard to the east, whose lengthy, thin dark roof can be seen to the right of the boulevard islands. Tennis great Bill Tilden played on these courts in the 1920s. The hotel was the second largest in Michigan after the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, 250 rooms, 550 feet long (over a tenth of the mile), torn down in 1941, one reason being a lack of adequate parking space anywhere near the building. The outline of the Chicago Club resort's Old Island is easily made out at the east side of Round Lake, seven acres of untouched woodland in the heart of town. And the south shore of Round Lake was peppered with boat builders, boat repair sheds, boathouses, boat slips, wharves, fisheries, almost its entire length given over to our maritime commercial businesses, a plain, no-frills, far cry from the condos and elegant houses that populate the waterfront today.

Undergoing radiation radiation therapy and multiple surgeries, Boss did not slow down during her treatment. "She loved the Lord believed he called her to help people," Jan said. "Even until last October after her second brain surgery, she would come in and help us cook. She believed that's what she was called to do."

Herb Boss, Bev's husband of 60 years, said Boss continued to stay busy after raising their six children, and going back to work at the Charlevoix Middle School before retiring in 2000.

Still, Boss continued to take an active role in the community, as founding member of the Safe Haven Breakfast Club at the Community Reformed Church. She also organized Wednesday night dinners in addition to teaching Sunday School and Bible study session. She worked with the Charlevoix Food Pantry, too.

"She enjoyed being with people and just loved being where she had kids around her," Herb said. "She was a wonderful mother."

Boss was recognized in the Charlevoix community for her tireless efforts and was awarded the 2011 Outstanding Citizen Award at the annual Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Awards Gala and the Charlevoix Zonta Club's 2015 Rose Day Award.

The Boss family asks that contributions be made to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project or the Safe Haven Breakfast Club.

in and out of hospitals and treatment centers. While much of that time was spent working on regaining her health, what Pung found was a focus on helping others in her same condition.

"I saw so many people who did not have the same mindset, family, financial ability or future awaiting them after being discharged," Pung said. "I knew I needed to help them and bring them hope, too."

That is when she began the Kali's Cure for Paralysis Foundation. Since its beginning in 2008, the foundation has earned $1.5 million in donations with a hope to reach $2 million over the next few years.

While Pung runs Kali's Cure she's quick to note she doesn't profit or use any of the donations toward her own medical expenses and it operates on a volunteer basis with all donations going to help others. Currently the foundation is hovering around three percent which means 97 cents of every dollar goes directly to the cause.

Through the foundation Pung also has been able to travel the country to support other organizations by providing donations from Kali's Cure to help fund research efforts. Some of these efforts include funding for FDA approved pacers and working with organizations such as Life Beyond Barriers and the Michigan Rehabilitation Institute.

One of the biggest fundraisers for Kali's Cure is their annual golf outing. This year Dunmaglas Golf Course will host the 9th Annual Kali's Cure Golf Outing at on Saturday, Aug. 1.

The event host is Frank Beckmann and will include special guests: Dan Pohl, Rick Smith, Billi "Huge" Simonson, Steven "Luker" Danyuk, Bill Hobson, and Eric Hippie. Registration begins at 11 a.m. with a noon shotgun start. The foundation also is hosting a "Links with Legends" auction event where the winning bidder gets to play nine holes with PGA tour pro Dan Pohl — second place at 1982 Masters — and nine holes with legendary golf instructor Rick Smith — coach to Phil

Mickelson and Jack Nicklaus.

"The money raised is used to help others as we fight for a cure," Pung said. "Although it requires a lot of work and so many dedicated people to remain a 100 percent volunteer operation, we are happy to have made it 8 years without a single person paid out of Kali's Cure donations."

With 97 percent of donations going to help the cause and provide treatment for others, events like the yearly golf outing are just one way the foundation works to hit its donation goal.

For more information on the golf outing or how to donate, visit kalicure.org or Kali's Cure on Facebook.

Venetian Street Parade, Block Party draw crowds downtown

MALACHI BARRETT

CHARLEVOIX — Bridge Street shut down, floats paraded and residents listened to the smooth grooves of the Petoskey Steel Drum Band on the last day of the Venetian Festival.

The eight day festival brought thousands of families to Charlevoix from across the Midwest. The Venetian Street Parade featured an hour and a half of floats adorned in this year's Mardi Gras theme.

"The festival is staged extremely well, we had a large enthusiastic crowd for events," said Dan Barron, festival director. "Saturday is a wonderfully festive day and gives us the chance to celebrate our community with 30,000 people."

More than 80 organizations participated in the parade, including local businesses, schools, churches and youth groups.

Barron emphasized the community building aspect of the festival. He said the event is a way to bring the community together in a positive way and create a sense of identity.

"People have a shared goal and desire to promote Charlevoix," Barron said. "There is community pride in our ability to present a world class festival. We strive to have a small town festival with big town appeal."

After the cascade of parade floats came to an end, the Petoskey Steel Drum Band played an exclusive concert for parade goers on Bridge Street. The band put on a show that had 3-year-old Declan Raschke, Logan Missig, 4, and Sawyer Raschke, 2, dancing in the street to the festive songs of Jimmy Buffett, Arrow and other tunes of the Caribbean.

"With the street closed this year, it was a lot easier to do things for us," said band director Barry Bennett. "It's always a blast, this is our first time back after a few years and it's a hoot to play for Charlevoix."

Overall, residents were in a festive mood and were happy to enjoy a perfectly sunny day in downtown Charlevoix.

Shops and restaurants remained open during the festivities, allowing people to take in the downtown sights and sounds. Five-year-old Miles Blakeney and his brother Mason, 3, took the opportunity to take in some french fries and carnival food. They were shepherded from East Jordan by grandparents Carol and Chuck Hillaker.

"This is a lot of fun, we got up on the Ferris wheel at the carnival and the view was beautiful, we were able to get the scenery of Round Lake and everyone out today," Carol said. "How often do you see a small city with something always going on in the downtown?"

Charlevoix Venetian Festival also gives people a chance to reconnect, she added.

"You'll be out — at the festival — and run into someone you haven't seen in a year," Carol said.

DDA

Bergmann's employees are responsible for cleaning the public restrooms because of lease negotiations for using city property for his brewing company, and he is not satisfied with the design and look of the public restrooms.

Pat Elliott, Department of Public Works superintendent and Annie Doyle, DDA/Main Street director, gave board members a first-hand look at the condition of the building, after restroom repairs were completed.

"It is important for the board to see the building and hear from the businesses and the DPW on what has been done," Doyle said.

Inside the building, Elliott showed board members the new sensors that were installed to the urinals, toilets and some other repairs made to the public restrooms.

"The urinals and toilets are what you expect for a building about 30 years old," Elliott said. "We replaced the mechanical parts to have them flush properly as you can see the fixtures themselves are in good condition."

Board member Rick Wertz did not believe the restrooms worked properly after spending $1,600 to replace the sensors.

"You shouldn't have to play around with a hand dryer," Wertz said. "It takes some time to get those things to work. I gave up on the right hand one and used the left hand one. We need to have all that stuff working properly."

Bergmann said to board members that toilet sensors have been repaired, but they are not conducive for amount of people using the facilities, since the Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company opened earlier this year. He also believes the tile and drains are not adequate and should be redone.

The public restrooms are also used by passengers from the Beaver Island Boat Company and Keweenaw Excursions. Calling the restrooms are out of date for the amount of people using them, Bergmann would prefer the DDA and city spend money to make the public restrooms more presentable for each business. He wants the DDA to consider constructing the restrooms similar to the public restrooms at the harbor masters building.

"It's an antiquated design for the traffic that area has," Bergmann said. "I think we should set a standard that they look like the marina restrooms not the restrooms built 25 years ago."

He will honor the lease agreement to keep them clean, but continued to say the public restrooms are not sufficient for the amount of people using them. His main complaint is the image his business and Charlevoix might get from older, public restrooms.

"I think we got to be honest with ourselves about what it is going to take, to make the restrooms what we would jointly feel is an appropriate facility for the image we want to have," Bergmann said. "The (restrooms) the boaters use. That's the standard. It's bright. It's clean. The lighting is different and the hand drying systems are different. That is what people would expect from us."

DDA chairperson Dan Barron said the DDA will take into consideration Bergmann's request for redesigning or upgrading the public restrooms if it fits in with the DDA's other financial obligations.

"We need to have this conversation as part of our budget meetings in the future," Barron said. "We need to get a handle on what it will cost and we will need city staff's help and guidance moving forward."

Barron said board members all agree that building repairs need to get done in a fiscally responsible way.

"We want the building fixed," Barron said. "We want to repair it, but we should work with city staff on this to decide what is the most cost effective approach."

DDA members also looked at the wallpaper issues and at the hallway that leads to the brewery from the public restrooms, which is in disrepair from what appears to be a malfunctioning and leaking air-conditioning unit.

John Yaroach, said the DDA should get measures in place about who does the work and then get the most important needs done, but felt the building itself looked good.

"The building is in better condition than I was led to believe, but that may be because some work has been done," Yaroach said. "The building is serviceable."

Yaroach believes it is the city manager's function to facilitate the work and make sure the projects are bid out properly.

Yaroach also felt much of the work is cosmetic and wants a priority list of the needs for the DDA board to focus on. Barron agreed with Yaroach that much of the building is cosmetic work and wants to work with the city on bidding the work out.

"On our inspection the building did not appear to be as bad of condition as previously described," Barron said. "It is useable."

The sentiment of the board is not to take on these repair projects without knowing the costs, Barron said. He also believes the cosmetic work likely can wait until the heart of the tourist season is over when less people are in the building.

"We should focus on some this in the fall and do it properly," Barron said. "Then we won't have people (visiting the area) trying to avoid maintenance crews."

Youth craft show to take place in August

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library will host a youth craft show, from 5-7 p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 5. This year the youth craft show will occur before the 7 p.m. Jazz @ the Library concert that features Chris Pickley on the saxophone. Come to the show on the library grounds and pick up some crafts and help support the creative kids.

Then, stay for a beautiful evening concert in the children's garden.

The youth craft show is an opportunity for kids to show off the diversity of their imaginations and talents and to step into a business venture. "It's a wonderful way for our kids to learn some valuable business lessons and earn a little extra money," states Audrey Shapiro, children's services coordinator.

The kids have to make their own wares, plan and set up their own booth, and then sell their gifts during the show. For children who are interested, there is still space for more booths.

Stop by the youth department at the library to register or get more information at (231) 237-7350.

Minnesota's Kampf makes it four straight wins in Shay Mile

By Drew Kochanny
734-439-2345 • dkochanny@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — When Heather Kampf earned a third straight win in the annual Ryan Shay Mile in Charlevoix a year ago, she quickly turned to focusing on a fourth straight the following year.

After Saturday, mission accomplished. Kampf, a Team USA Minnesota runner, would earn a fourth straight win in the annual event through downtown Charlevoix on the final weekend of Venetian Festival, running a time of four minutes, 26.83 seconds.

The invite only one mile event runs down Bridge Street in Charlevoix, with fans and runners of the annual Drenth Memorial Foot Race, which runs just before the Shay Mile, lining the race.

Through an up and down season thus far through events across the country, Kampf knew she could always count on Charlevoix to bring her some good fortune.

"It's like a homecoming to a place that I've had a lot of success, so it's really nice," she said.

A former University of Minnesota runner, Kampf holds the record in the Shay Mile for the women's race with a time of 4:21 a year ago.

While she wouldn't match that time on Saturday, a strong field meant she had to put a bit extra kick in this year.

"This was such a quality field. They did a great job of recruiting really solid athletes here. So it was great," said Kampf. "Every race is different, you kind of have to play the field and know what your strengths are. I definitely feel comfortable with my downhill ability, so really just trying to stay in contact with the race."

Former University of Michigan runner Brook Handler would take second in the race with a time of 4:27.75, followed by her teammate and former Wolverine, Amanda Eccleston in third, in 4:28.70.

DREW KOCHANNY/COURIER

For the fourth year in a row Heather Kampf of Minnesota earned a first place finish in the women's race of the annual Ryan Shay Mile through downtown Charlevoix. Kampf brought in a time of 4:26.83.

Amanda Mergaert placed fourth in 4:28.71; Christy Cazzola, fifth, 4:29.14; Sarah Boyle, sixth, 4:33.54; Emily Lipari, seventh, 4:35.78; Amanda Addison, eighth, 4:35.78; and Abgael Waniku, ninth, 4:56.73.

Kampf has races still to come this summer in Pittsburgh, another in Michigan and New York City, all mile events, looking to ride the momentum gained in Charlevoix.

"I've had kind of an up and down year," she said. "I ran a big (personal record) in the 1500 for the USAs, then missed the team by 0.02 seconds, so that was tough. But I'm confident in my fitness and I'm excited about what next year has to offer."

A possible fifth straight win in the Shay Mile seems highly likely if Kampf enters the field once again.

In the men's Shay Mile race on Saturday, first time participant Jake Edwards of Columbus, Ohio would earn a first place finish as well.

Edwards, a former Ohio State runner, would bring in a time of 3:56.62, just edging Lex Williams, a former Wolverine runner, who finished in second at 3:57.30.

Wanting to make the trip up after hearing about the race a couple years back, Edwards finally committed to it this summer.

"I've had it on my calendar," he said. "I've wanted to do it for a couple of years, but it's a long drive up. So this year I made plans to make sure I was here."

Thomas Scott would take third in 3:59.81, followed by Josef Tessera, fourth, 4:01.74; Zach Perkins, fifth, 4:02.58; Ben Payne, sixth, 4:02.86; Tony Filapek, seventh, 4:07.08; Keremy Will, 4:09.56; Forrest Missenti, ninth, 4:11.24; Jacob Sussman, 10th, 4:21.38; Josh Davis, 11th, 4:25.14; and Sean Smith, 12th, 4:29.83.

Knowing a few of the runners in the race, Edwards knew that using the large Bridge Street hill, which leads into downtown Charlevoix, to push away would be the key.

"I knew Tom Scott was right there and knew I had to get away from him," said Edwards. "I've got pretty long legs and I wanted to work that downhill as well as I could to get away from him. It was great, I ran as hard as I could down it and got a little gap."

While he's got a few more races to catch up to Kampf, after a good first impression on him, there's a strong chance Edwards makes it back for a few more Shay Miles in the near future.

The natural beauty of the area doesn't hurt all that much either.

"It's great," he said. "I've always wanted to see Northern Michigan. It's beautiful."

Charlevoix's Way makes hometown proud in Drenth Foot Race

CHARLEVOIX — Amber Way made quite a name for herself as a track and field and cross country runner for Charlevoix High School.

As a recent graduate who will run for Michigan State University come fall, Way's time of filling up headlines as a Rayder are over though.

But it doesn't mean she won't still build her resume in her hometown.

On Saturday, she began to do just that by taking first in the 5K women's division of the annual Drenth Memorial Foot Race through downtown Charlevoix.

DREW KOCHANNY/COURIER

Recent Charlevoix High School graduate Amber Way (front) would take in a first place finish in the 5K women's division of the annual Jeff Drenth Memorial Foot Race on Saturday in downtown Charlevoix.

Way earned a time of 18 minutes, 24 seconds in the 5K race to take first, while Brittany Neeley of Greentown, Ind., would place second in the women's division in 18:37, setting up a potential Big Ten Conference rivalry down the road, as Neeley runs for Indiana.

Thomas Osika of Waterford would place first overall in the 5K race, running a time of 16:28.

Andrew O'Connor of Croswell would place second in the 5K, in 16:36.

Also of note in the 5K race, Garrett Romero of East Jordan would place third in 16:37, Winter Romeyn of Ellsworth took fourth in 16:47 and Michael Carey of Midland took fifth in 16:52.

Also in the women's division, Kaitlyn Arnold of Jackson took third in 18:48, followed by Katie Osika, Waterford, 19:15; and Sarah Goble, Petoskey, 19:49.

In the 10K race, Ryan Robinson of West Bloomfield took first in 33:04, followed by Daniel Turco of Sault Ste. Marie in 37:45.

Sarah Pardee of Charlevoix took first in the women's division in 39:25, while placing third overall.

Matt Muessetter of Denver earned fourth overall in 40:01, while Austin Pung of Silverwood took fifth in 40:27.

Also in the women's division of the 10K, Maegan Murphy of Mason, Ohio, took second in 40:56; Jennelle Roberts of Boyne Falls took third in 43:03; Kayla Keane of East Jordan placed fourth in 44:05 and Anna Baldori of Charlevoix placed fifth in 44:12.

Skydiving here OK for now

Council could review matter again next year during license renewal

Lonnie Allen/Charlevoix Courier
Skydiving discussions by the Charlevoix City Council bring out a large attendance of residents who are interested in the fate of the operations of Skydive Harbor Springs in Charlevoix.

Lonnie Allen
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Skydiving in Charlevoix may be settled for now, but if the Aug. 3, city council meeting is any indication of what Luther Kurtz and his business Skydive Harbor Springs will face once he tries to renew his license this issue could boil over again.

The long 90 minute discussion between the city attorney Scott Howard, city council members, Kurtz, and city staff about the electronic correspondences from the Federal Aviation Administration, the United States Parachute Association and the city's insurance carrier often led to hypothetical questions for the attorney.

Council member Bill Supernaw question to Howard was are we "spinning are wheels here?"

"I have heard many things and have talked with many of my con-

Council OKs 2 new fulltime city positions

Lonnie Allen
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — City council members approved two new full-time positions on Monday — an emergency medical services director/assistant fire chief and assistant operations manager for the airport.

The EMS position came about after the city council approved a request from Charlevoix Police and Fire Chief Gerard Doan in June to switch from a full-time fire department to one where firefighters are paid per call so money can be shifted to pay EMS providers proper wages.

The new full-time position at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport is expected to save the city money by eliminating part-time positions.

"You have less turnover, less training and more stability," said city manager Mark Heydaul. "Ideally, you would be able to keep someone with more knowledge instead of having new people at the airport all the time. You want someone with stability."

Before City Council members unanimously approved the new airport position they wanted to hear from staff about the need.

"Every few months I bring this issue up that the city of Charlevoix has a part-time city clerk," said councilmember Leon Perron. "A job that is very technical, very tedious and very time-consuming, but I am always told by staff and my fellow council people we can't afford a full-time city clerk, but we can turn around and have three managers at the airport. I want staff to help me understand this."

The decision to add an assistant operations manager position came when a part-time employee was offered full-time employment elsewhere, said Patty DeRosia, human resource assistant.

"We just don't have the qualified people to cover every shift at the airport," DeRosia said.

CHARLEVOIX — Each year, on the second weekend in August, juried artists from Michigan and around the country exhibit their work for an expectant crowd of art enthusiasts and patrons. The 57th annual Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair will take place in East Park on Saturday, Aug. 8, and the Waterfront Art Fair committee is proud to feature local artists, Russ and Sue Bult, Dave and June Otis, Andrew Otis, Stephen Kostyshyn, Irish Morgan, Kevin Barton, Luciano Duse, Carol Ross, Terry Salmonsnn, Kim Krumrey, Jo Moffit and Kevin Bartnn.

Participating artists from other parts of Michigan and around the country also return with new pieces to share with their followers. Kathleen Chaney Fritz, recent Venetian Festival artist, is one of the most anticipated exhibitors. Twenty percent of the exhibiting artists will be new to the show this year, keeping the event fresh with new talent. Artists report that they look forward to the one day show as a reunion of friends who, fellow exhibitors and patrons alike, share the passion for their art. The show is rich with a variety of media including painting, drawing, mixed media, ceramics, glass, jewelry, and fiber.

For 57 years, the show has evolved from a fledgling attempt to bring cultural events to the north by a handful of determined arts enthusiasts, into Scholarship winner Grace Whitley sets sights high

Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Grace Whitley has her sights set high, and hopes to follow her dream as she starts college in fall for interior design.

Daughter of Paul and Tanya Whitley of Charlevoix, Whitley is enthusiastic, talented, and motivated, with traits noticed early on by educators.

She is the kind of student that elementary, middle and high school art teachers hope to discover and encourage during the time spent within their classrooms. Mary Beth McGraw, Waterfront Art Fair director, was Whitley's elementary school art teacher.

"I remember Grace as being a student who, even at a young age, had a way of approaching projects that showed insight ... a thought process that stood out," McGraw said.

She is now ready to begin her journey into the world of art by attending the College of Creative Studies in Detroit this September.

"I went down to visit the campus for a 'talk and tour' to learn about their program last spring," Whitley said. "I was really impressed when I heard about the success of their alumni getting jobs. It is a four year program which places an emphasis on securing employment for graduates. The school is really focused on connecting students with industry. I have an uncle in Royal Oak who attended the College of Creative Studies for two years and was hired by a company half way through his program."

Whitley hasn't finalized her course of studies except that it will be in the area of interior design.

"I am interested in architecture, but I am also thinking about Krista Jarema's Camp READ—Read Everyday and Discover—students (from left) James Dixon, Max Dixon and Autumn Houghton, became inspired while reading the "Lemonade War" in class. They decided to have their own lemonade stand and donate their profits to a local organization. Last week, Jarema's students sold lemonade at Lake Michigan Beach. All of their proceeds will be donated to the Charlevoix Humane Society. They had their stand open for about two hours and made a little more than $50.

Vendors sought for benefit to help raise funds for local man's fight against cancer

NICOLE SEYMOUR
Special to the Courier

Vendors and donations are being sought to help a local man cover some much needed cancer treatment and care. In March, 21-year-old Zach DuBois was rushed to McLaren Northern Michigan hospital in Petoskey where he was diagnosed leukemia, in advanced stages. His diagnosis led to three days of receiving blood transfusions before stabilizing enough to be transported to Mott Children's Center in Ann Arbor for further care.

Complications brought on by the cancer continued to hinder his treatments at the center, as he was then diagnosed with a serious heart condition brought on by chemotherapy treatments. With systems beginning to shut down he was then placed in ICU and underwent round the clock renal di-alysis.

"Zach fought hard and made it out of ICU and continued a grueling treatment plan. It began as a reduced treatment due to his heart condition, but eventually his heart was able to take the full treatments," said family friend, Becky Kuebler.

Much of his will to live has come from his 2 1/2-year-old daughter, Alyana, who has been at his side during treatments, she said. This is the second time the DuBois family has faced a cancer diagnosis in the past two years.

"He's really been responding well to treatments and has beat the odds the doctors gave him," said Kuebler.

At the moment, it looks like DuBois may be able to make another short visit home before he begins another 40 days of chemotherapy. Family and friends are hopeful this will be his last round of treatments.

With treatment costs and outpatient care still a concern, friends and family have scheduled a benefit for DuBois from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 22, at Boyne Valley Equine Tours & Services LLC located on 7436 Pincherry Road in Charlevoix. The event is free and will feature horse drawn wagon rides, live music and food trucks. Currently benefit coordinators are still looking for more vendors to participate. Vendor registration is free and vendors can choose the percentage of proceeds from the day's sales they wish to donate. All donations will go toward DuBois's medical care.

For more information on the event or how to become a vendor, call Becky Kuebler at (231) 203-1626 or email boynevalleyets@gmail.com.

Kiersten's ride: To raise funds, awareness of suicide prevention programs

MALACHI BARRETT
(231) 439-9353 • mbarrett@petoskeynews.com

On Aug. 12, the East Jordan Community will recognize the third anniversary of Kiersten Clavier's death by suicide.

Two days later, they will mount a horse or ATV to ride in an annual event to raise funds and awareness for suicide prevention in Northern Michigan. Kiersten's mother Lisa Clavier said the ride has already made a difference in bringing the often-stigmatized issue into the community conversation.

"What we found is that many more people have been touched by suicide than we realize because it's not talked about," Clavier said. "We found that a lot of people wanted to help who had parents, siblings or friends commit suicide. We unknowingly reached many more lives than we realized we would in Northern Michigan."

In its third year, the ride has raised more than $20,000 for North Country Community Mental Health and the Charlevoix and Emmet County Suicide Coalition. According to the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services Vital Statistics, there are an average of four deaths by suicide per year in Charlevoix County and the same in Emmet County since 2008.

Kiersten attended East Jordan Public Schools and had completed the 11th grade before her death. She was a member of Charlevoix County 4-H, the Michigan Trail Riders Association and a volunteer for the Exceptional Riders Program in Petoskey.

"(The ride) was a way of helping our community do a bit of healing by helping others," Clavier said. "In the past we have used funds to bring yellow ribbon programs to schools and train counselors and first responders."

Kiersten's Ride will be held on Aug. 15, at Chandler Hills Campground on 2930 Magee Road North, in Boyne Falls. Horseback trail riders will depart for a 10 mile trail ride at 10 a.m. riders must provide their own horse, though water will be provided for the horses.

ATV riders will leave at 2 p.m. for a 30 mile trail ride. Riders must be 14 or older with ATV certification and have all necessary safety equipment.

Registration applications are available from Clavier by calling (231) 675-5047, or sending an email to lisaclavier@hotmail.com. Applications can be mailed to Clavier at 04316 Cosler Road, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Clavier said the ride promotes an ongoing discussion of suicide in the community, which remains a taboo subject.

The Suicide Prevention Workgroup and Kiersten's Ride are sponsoring applied suicide intervention skills training sessions. These training sessions will be held Sep. 26 and 27 at East Jordan High School and Oct. 17 and 18 at Pellston School. There also will be mental health first aid training sessions, yet to be scheduled, which helps people in a variety of mental health crises.

Suicide is the second leading cause of death for young people ages 10 to 24, said Michael Lucido, North Country Community Mental Health Charlevoix county clinical supervisor and chair of the Suicide Prevention Workgroup for Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

"It's not just a local problem but a national problem," Lucido said. "Still, the numbers don't tell the stories of each person or how many people are impacted by each loss by suicide. It is a tragedy every time we lose someone this way for families and our small town communities."

The best way to manage mental health issues have been primarily through interventions like therapy and medications, he said. To access these treatments, call the North Country Community Mental Health Access Center at (800) 834-3393 for referrals either to access local offices or a private provider.

Third Level Crisis Center has a 24 hour emergency hotline (800) 442-7315 that can assist people or their families in crisis. There is also a Crisis Text Hotline at (800) 741-741. If someone is actively suicidal, this is considered a mental health emergency. You should either call 911 or head to the nearest emergency room for help.

"The most important thing to know is that there is hope and help is always available 24 hours a day 365 days a year," Lucido said. "Just ask or help someone to ask for it."

Reads Jarema's Camp READ — Read Everyday and Discover — students (from left) James Dixon, Max Dixon and Autumn Houghton, became inspired while reading the "Lemonade War" in class. They decided to have their own lemonade stand and donate their profits to a local organization. Last week, Jarema's students sold lemonade at Lake Michigan Beach. All of their proceeds will be donated to the Charlevoix Humane Society. They had their stand open for about two hours and made a little more than $50.

Vendors sought for benefit to help raise funds for local man's fight against cancer

NICOLE SEYMOUR
Special to the Courier

Vendors and donations are being sought to help a local man cover some much needed cancer treatment and care. In March, 21-year-old Zach DuBois was rushed to McLaren Northern Michigan hospital in Petoskey where he was diagnosed with leukemia, in advanced stages. His diagnosis led to three days of receiving blood transfusions before stabilizing enough to be transported to Mott Children's Center in Ann Arbor for further care.

Complications brought on by the cancer continued to hinder his treatments at the center, as he was then diagnosed with a serious heart condition brought on by chemotherapy treatments. With systems beginning to shut down he was then placed in ICU and underwent round the clock renal di-alysis.

"Zach fought hard and made it out of ICU and continued a grueling treatment plan. It began as a reduced treatment due to his heart condition, but eventually his heart was able to take the full treatments," said family friend, Becky Kuebler.

Much of his will to live has come from his 2 1/2-year-old daughter, Alyana, who has been at his side during treatments, she said. This is the second time the DuBois family has faced a cancer diagnosis in the past two years.

"He's really been responding well to treatments and has heat the odds the doctors gave him", said Kuebler.

At the moment, it looks like DuBois may be able to make another short visit home before he begins another 40 days of chemotherapy. Family and friends are hopeful this will be his last round of treatments.

With treatment costs and outpatient care still a concern, friends and family have scheduled a benefit for DuBois from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 22, at Boyne Valley Equine Tours & Services LLC located on 7436 Pincherry Road in Charlevoix. The event is free and will feature horse drawn wagon rides, live music and food trucks. Currently benefit coordinators are still looking for more vendors to participate. Vendor registration is free and vendors can choose the percentage of proceeds from the day's sales they wish to donate. All donations will go toward DuBois's medical care.

For more information on the event or how to become a vendor, call Becky Kuebler at (231) 203-1626 or email boynevalleyets@gmail.com.

Kiersten's ride: To raise funds, awareness of suicide prevention programs

MALACHI BARRETT
(231) 439-9353 • mbarrett@petoskeynews.com

On Aug. 12, the East Jordan Community will recognize the third anniversary of Kiersten Clavier's death by suicide.

Two days later, they will mount a horse or ATV to ride in an annual event to raise funds and awareness for suicide prevention in Northern Michigan. Kiersten's mother Lisa Clavier said the ride has already made a difference in bringing the often-stigmatized issue into the community conversation.

"What we found is that many more people have been touched by suicide than we realize because it's not talked about," Clavier said. "We found that a lot of people wanted to help who had parents, siblings or friends commit suicide. We unknowingly reached many more lives than we realized we would in Northern Michigan."

In its third year, the ride has raised more than $20,000 for North Country Community Mental Health and the Charlevoix and Emmet County Suicide Coalition. According to the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services Vital Statistics, there are an average of four deaths by suicide per year in Charlevoix County and the same in Emmet County since 2008.

Kiersten attended East Jordan Public Schools and had completed the 11th grade before her death. She was a member of Charlevoix County 4-H, the Michigan Trail Riders Association and a volunteer for the Exceptional Riders Program in Petoskey.

"(The ride) was a way of helping our community do a bit of healing by healing others," Clavier said. "In the past we have used funds to bring yellow ribbon programs to schools and train counselors and first responders."

Kiersten's Ride will be held on Aug. 15, at Chandler Hills Campground on 2930 Magee Road North, in Boyne Falls. Horseback trail riders will depart for a 10 mile trail ride at 10 a.m. riders must provide their own horse, though water will be provided for the horses.

ATV riders will leave at 2 p.m. for a 30 mile trail ride. Riders must be 14 or older with ATV certification and have all necessary safety equipment.

Registration applications are available from Clavier by calling (231) 675-5047, or sending an email to lisaclavier@hotmail.com. Applications can be mailed to Clavier at 04316 Cosier Road, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Clavier said the ride promotes an ongoing discussion of suicide in the community, which remains a taboo subject.

The Suicide Prevention Workgroup and Kiersten's Ride are sponsoring applied suicide intervention skills training sessions. These training sessions will be held Sep. 26 and 27 at East Jordan High School and Oct. 17 and 18 at Pellston School. There also will be mental health first aid training sessions, yet to be scheduled, which helps people in a variety of mental health crises.

Suicide is the second leading cause of death for young people ages 10 to 24, said Michael Lucido, North Country Community Mental Health Charlevoix county clinical supervisor and chair of the Suicide Prevention Workgroup for Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

"It's not just a local problem but a national problem," Lucido said. "Still, the numbers don't tell the stories of each person or how many people are impacted by each loss by suicide. It is a tragedy every time we lose someone this way for families and our small town communities."

The best way to manage mental health issues have been primarily through interventions like therapy and medications, he said. To access these treatments, call the North Country Community Mental Health Access Center at (800) 834-3393 for referrals either to access local offices or a private provider.

Third Level Crisis Center has a 24 hour emergency hotline (800) 442-7315 that can assist people or their families in crisis. There is also a Crisis Text Hotline at (800) 741-741. If someone is actively suicidal, this is considered a mental health emergency. You should either call 911 or head to the nearest emergency room for help.

"The most important thing to know is that there is hope and help is always available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year," Lucido said. "Just ask or help someone to ask for it."

My Flywheelers experience

I am finding it very hard to begin, as there was a lot of excitement at the 28th annual Flywheelers event. The sweltering heat of the day made a few of my neurons melt in my brain, but the tractors, doodlebugs, barbecue sandwich, iced tea and people made it well worth it. The experience of learning about tractors from those who restored these farm-life machines gave me a sense of farm history in Northern Michigan. With me was 12-year-old Nathaniel Evans, whom is growing up on a farm in Boyne City, and loves every aspect of tractors. Nathaniel took me through the restored farm vehicles and told me what every knob, pedal and lever does.

SCOTTY

During my Flywheelers show visit, I had the true pleasure of meeting the LaBonte family. Together they restored their 1954 Ford NAA, which is enjoyed by five generations of their family. Richard Jr., joked with me how for a long time, this tractor that has been in the family since it rolled off the line, was the boys' four-wheeler on the farm. Meeting four generations of the LaBonte family, I got to hear their stories of the heart and soul they put into their tractor. Their stories gave me a sense of the pride they took in attending this event that allows them to display their hard work.

After talking to the LeBonte family a gentleman named Robert (Bob) Carr took me aside and took me down another path in history of a tractor he operated on a boarding academy farm in 1964. The piece of equipment was a 1955 Minneapolis Moline. He told me of planting and plowing and the long days of hard honest farm work. He also told me how he returned to the same academy later to build an airstrip. Carr is the founder of Ocean Shore Aviation, it was truly a pleasure speaking with him, hearing the excitement and passion he has for his company, and the nostalgia the Flywheelers event gives him.

As I continued on, moving through the sea of doodlebugs and tractors I came upon Cord Lemon an elderly man and his 1918 Chevrolet Doodle Bug, and Jon Miller with his 1928 Doodle Bug. Both gentlemen are from Hillsdale County and made sure I knew where that was.

Even though it was extremely hot the day of the show, with temperatures in the 90s, everyone was in good spirits, smiling and having a great time. The children seemed to enjoy making ropes, seeing piglets and baby goats. They even had a giant shoe they could climb in and out of and a big plastic car filled with sawdust for the kids to dig through for treasures of pennies to dollars, which was made possible by the many food vendors who donated their tips to the treasure hunt.

Walking into the main part of the event there also was a flea market with vendors as far as my eye could see. It was very impressive just how many came out on such a scorcher of a day. The parade was an amazing, as the announcer gave detailed information on every tractor, doodlebug, and antique on wheels that made its way through the route. You could see the hard work, sweat, tears and love that went into the history of every machine.

One cannot forget to mention another key aspect of the show that helps make it possible — volunteers. The volunteers are just as important to the event as the machines themselves. I felt it was truly giving of every volunteer to put their heart into this event to make it a very pleasant experience to everyone who attended.

Councilmember Porter's complaints should be considered harassment

To the City of Charlevoix Voters:

Over time, we have watched and listened to the comments of City Council member Jeff Porter, and are concerned he wants our wonderful city to digress.

The heart of any community's success is jobs. The City Council should not only support new business, but should actually recruit them. Jobs have a positive impact on all aspects of our community: families move to Charlevoix — or remain here, purchase homes, pay taxes, and kids go to the schools, which raises state revenues; and payroll is recycled throughout our community. All of which are positive.

Mr. Porter's attacks on The Bridge Street Tap Room and the Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company are unacceptable. These young entrepreneurs should be commended. They are creating new jobs, volunteering in our community, paying taxes and providing services to our community and its visitors. ALL of which are positive.

Just in the last 30 days, Mr. Porter has called the City with 14-18 complaints about the above-mentioned businesses; none of these complaints by Mr. Porter were determined to be city code violations. Mr. Porter's chronic complaints should be deemed as harassment.

These complaints, along with Mr. Porter's unprofessional comments at several council meetings this past year, show us his "true colors." We hope the voters remember these things in November.

Good things happen when negativity stays home

Editor:

I would like to thank all of the volunteers that helped make our new volleyball court a reality. This includes material, labor and machinery. We ended up building two courts as the original had to be moved in order to make room for the second. This asset was at no cost to the city.

The following individuals and businesses were responsible for making this happen in time for Venetian: Utility Tractor Service, K and D Swanson Excavating, Bergmann Marine, Dry Harbour Marine, Northwest Heating and Air, Hugh's Excavating, Ace Hardware, Kevin and Ken Pearsall, Mark White Painting, DCL Inc., Shine LLC., Charlevoix Insurance Agency, Kyle Ramsey, Cody Crain, Josh Vargas, Greg Withrow, Chris Seymour, Kent Seymour, Kris Way, Ericka Faust and Dean Spencely.

Amazing what can be done when negativity stays home.

Kudos to the Charlevoix Sheriff's Department

Editor:

At approximately 11 a.m. on Monday, July 27, I called the Charlevoix Sheriff's Department to report the theft of two signs taken from my property in Boulder Park during the Venetian weekend. One was a "For Rent" sign for our Earl Young cottage and the other was a real estate "For Sale" sign.

Within 10 minutes, Sgt. William Sheets, of the department, arrived to investigate. After looking at the sight of the "crime" he prepared his report and informed us that a periodically things like that are taken as a prank rather than an act of vandalism. After he departed, he continued his patrol of the neighborhood and much to our surprise he returned within minutes with our signs, which he found on a street one block from ours.

Thank you Sgt. Sheets for your quick police work. We are so fortunate to be living in a town like Charlevoix the Beautiful that has such a responsive sheriff's department.

Skydiving is too risky for Charlevoix Municipal Airport

Editor:

I'm writing to comment on the skydiving activity being conducted at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport. I have been piloting aircraft since 1957. I currently lease a T-Hanger at the airport and fly in and out on a regular basis. I support the activity of skydiving as long as it does not present a safety issue to pilots and aircraft.

I am, however, not in favor of skydivers landing on our airport. It is too small. The jumpers, out of necessity, must descend through the same airspace being used by approaching aircraft that are preparing to land at the airport. The mixing of aircraft operations and that of skydiving activities at a small airport, such as ours, is dangerous for the skydivers. The fact that aircraft and jumpers are using the same airspace increases the risk of having an accident. We don't want that to happen in Charlevoix.

So, in the interest of safety for all, I believe that the jumpers should land off the airport.

Sincerely,
Alvin Ranger

Lecture series finale ends with architectural photographer

CHARLEVOIX — Crooked Tree Arts Center and the Charlevoix Public Library will be present Robert Swanson discussing his book, "Inside/Outside Museums," at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 13, at the Charlevoix Public Library, 220 Clinton St.

Swanson is an architect, who developed a passion for photography. In his book, "Inside/Outside Museums," he features modern art museums designed by significant architects along with masterworks by prominent modern artists. Museums are of a particular interest to Swanson because they typically represent the highest level of architectural achievement. Thirty-six of the buildings included in his book were designed by Pritzker Prize winners, the equivalent of a Pulitzer, except that it is for architectural achievement.

Photography has been a long term avocation and consuming interest for Swanson, focusing primarily on architectural subjects. A native of Bloomfield Hills, Swanson is a graduate of Cranbrook School. He received his bachelor's degree in Architecture at the University of Michigan and his Masters' at MIT. Professionally, he was associated with the firms of Saarinen Swanson and Saarinen, and Swanson Associates, each of Bloomfield Hills and Swanson Meads in Birmingham. His notable projects include the University of Michigan College of Art and Architecture, Oakland University's Kresge Library and the de Salle Auditorium at the Cranbrook Academy of Art. To broaden his photographic horizon, he has participated in workshops in Santa Fe, New Mexico and in California's wine country and also attended courses in Photoshop and the mechanics of digital photography. He has received numerous awards in both architecture and photography—such recognition makes Swanson an excellent lecturer to meld the topics into one presentation.

Tickets are $5 per person. The lecture series is supported in part by the Charlevoix Public Library and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

For more information and to purchase tickets, contact the Crooked Tree Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or visit crookedtree.org.

Performer Jim Gil at Odmark Pavilion in Charlevoix

Performer and child development specialist Jim Gil encourages positive interaction between adults and children through entertainment.

CHARLEVOIX — Jim Gil, an award winning children's singer and songwriter, will perform from 6:30-7:30 p.m., on Thursday, Aug. 13, at Odmark Pavilion in East Park in downtown Charlevoix.

Gil is a musician and author with unique credentials among children's artists. He is a child development specialist, having completed his graduate studies in child development at the Erikson Institute of Chicago with a special emphasis on the study of play. For this reason, each of Gil's recordings and books is created as an opportunity for playful interactions between a child and adult.

Gil won acclaim for bringing the same emphasis on family play to his live concerts. Anyone who has ever attended one of Gil's family concerts knows that rather than performing for the children and parents, he leads them to sing and play together. At the Charlevoix concert, he will be performing his Family Room Tour, so get ready to sing, dance and clap along during this visit.

"What is unique about my concerts is the degree to which children, parents and grandparents sing and dance and play together. It's more than a 'performance'... a family room experience is created in the concert hall," Gil said.

After more than 20 years, he is as enthusiastic as ever in his invitation to children, parents and grandparents to sing and play together.

Gil released six popular award-winning music CDs. He is also the author of two children's books. His latest book (which includes a CD), "A Soup Opera," is a sing-along opera inspired by concerts that Gil performs with symphony orchestras. The book received an American Library Association award in 2010. To date, Gil has received five separate awards from the American Library Association for his recordings and books over the years. This concert is funded by the Leo S. Guthman Fund, a private family foundation that funds the arts, youth leadership development and other types of programs.

All Charlevoix Elementary students are encouraged to visit the Charlevoix Library booth at the concert. Children can tell library personnel what book they are reading and what it's about, and receive a gift certificate to Round Lake Bookstore.

For more information, call (231) 237-7350 or visit charlevoixlibrary.org. For more information about Gil, visit jimgil.com.

Sidewalk sales set for Aug. 13-15

Charlevoix area merchants announces their annual end of summer sidewalk sales to take place Thursday through Saturday, Aug. 13-15.

Merchants will be out in force with sales to reduce inventories before the fall season. Shoppers will find discounts on gift items, home decor, clothing, books, jewelry, accessories and more. Hours may vary, but most merchants will be on the sidewalk from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. and inside after 6 p.m. So shop early for the best steals, deals and unbelievable savings, said staff of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

LOOKING BACK... Ladies Home Journal house in Boulder Park

COURTESY PHOTO

In the early 1930s, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cross of Jerseyville, Ill., found Ladies Home Journal house pattern No. 357 to their liking. They approached Charlevoix's master builder in stone Earl Young to build it for them in his relatively new development called Boulder Park west of town on the Lake Michigan shoreline. This structure is believed to be the only house Young agreed to build that he did not design, but he gave it the meticulous attention to detail that he poured into every house he built, both inside and out. Young added only the stone cladding on the lower level, as required by the park association's building code, and the dormer windows. Otherwise the house, one of the most imposing in Boulder Park, conforms to the original plan. It was completed in 1933, and received its nickname, "The Enchanted Cottage," from its current owners shortly after they bought the house in the mid 1970s. The name is painted on the boulder at lower left.

A 50-minute documentary on the life and influence of Earl Young titled "The Wizard of Boulder Park," produced in partnership with the Charlevoix Historical Society, premiered at Cinema III on June 8, to a sell-out house. The documentary will be repeated by popular demand four times this month all at 11:30 a.m. on Friday, Aug. 7; Saturday, Aug. 8; Friday, Aug. 14; and Saturday, Aug. 15; at Cinema III, 107 Antirrim St. Tickets are $15 per person, available now at the theater box office during operating hours or through reservation by emailing marykurtz@live.com. Ticket proceeds again go toward support of the Charlevoix Historical Society. Call the Society at (231) 547-0373 for more information.

Local church schedules rummage sale Aug. 14-15

The Charlevoix United Methodist Church, 107 State St., Charlevoix will have a rummage sale from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 14-15, to coincide with the Charlevoix Sidewalk Sales. Lots of bargains and proceeds will go to fund a mission trip to Kentucky and local church youth mission.

Liberated Threads exhibit at Charlevoix Public Library

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library announced its newest exhibit — Material Obsessions V presented by Liberated Threads of Northern Michigan, a monthly group at the library. Liberated Threads presents its fifth annual show of textile and mixed media works of art Aug. 1-Sept. 30.

This is a group of artists who are primarily fabric-based, but enjoy mixing it up with a variety of media and techniques. Their art ranges from the abstract to the realistic and all is presented for viewing.

The community room foyer walls, as well as the Michigan Room showcase, offer a range of work for enjoyment and purchase. Review the exhibit book in the foyer for contact information.

An artist reception will take place from 3-5 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 6, in the community room. The public is invited to see the exhibit and meet the artists.

The Liberated Threads group meets monthly at the Charlevoix Public Library, at 1 p.m. on the third Wednesday of each month and welcomes new members year-round.

Arlyle Marie Koehler, 89

Arlyle Marie Koehler (nee Roberts), 89, of Detroit, died Thursday, July 30, 2015, at St. John's Hospital in Detroit.

She was born October 16, 1925, in Lake City to Carlisle and Bertha (Hicks) Roberts. Arlyle graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1943, then earned a Bachelor's degree in education from Central Michigan University. She was a loving, caring teacher who taught elementary school in Petoskey, Charlevoix, and Oregon, retiring from the Lakeview School District in St. Clair Shores after 17 years. Arlyle was married to William A. Koehler in 1964, and he preceded her in death on April 6, 2006.

Arlyle is survived by her daughter, Diane (Rick) Locke; son, William Koehler; five grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; brothers, Jack Roberts of Charlevoix, Carlyle (Martha) Roberts of Northport; sister, Mary Schrandt of Lansing; best friend and fellow teacher, Linda Lawrence. She was preceded in death by her sisters, Marjory Himmel, Phyllis Roberts, and Joan Jolliffe; and brother, James Roberts.

Visitation will be 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 4, at the Bible Baptist Church in Charlevoix, where the funeral will begin at 2 p.m.. The Reverend Philip Green will officiate. Burial will follow at the Barnard Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix County Humane Society, 614 Beardsley Road, Boyne City, MI 49712.

Native veterans service recognized on Beaver Island

BEAVER ISLAND — Native people have served in the military at twice the rate expected for their population size, even when the country they were fighting for did not always fight for them.

On Aug. 1, on Beaver Island, 43 veterans who have served and are currently serving in the U.S. armed forces were recognized for their service by members of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians, the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa & Chippewa Indians, AMVETS Post 46, and about 200 islanders and visitors combined. Memorial bricks for the Native Americans from the Beaver Archipelago, inscribed with individuals names and service information were placed at Beaver Island Veterans Memorial in their honor.

Tribal color guards started things off carrying their colorful banners and presenting their tribal flags, which will be flown periodically at the memorial park. A missing man fly-over by Paul Welke's Island Air fleet followed. Alvina Cornstalk Napont dressed in native attire led the Pledge of Allegiance.

Joe Mitchell, of Charlevoix, the dignified Odawa Pipe Carrier — performer of sacred ritual — conducted a pipe ceremony for all veterans especially the newly installed Native Americans and Robert Keshik from Garden Island who died in Korea. Albert Cole, Tribal Administrator of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians in Harbor Springs offered greetings and salutations for his people and a member of the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa & Chippewa Indians of Traverse City greeted and thanked the crowd on behalf of her tribes. fought with Company K of the 101st Michigan Sharpshooters in the Civil War. It is not known where he is buried but the pipe ceremony will bring his spirit home and the others as well. Bob Anderson of AMVETS Post 46 rang a special bell as each veteran was honored.

Those in attendance also included: Cmdr. Steve Bidstrup, of Michigan Department of AMVETS, Michigan AMVETS Executive Director Carol Hebert, Paul Ladochi, past District 6 Commander and Matt Mageria, District 6 Commander.

A rifle salute by the AMVETS Post 46 rifle team and taps in honor of Robert Keshik wrapped up the ceremonies.

CharEm United Way pledges $4,000 grant to Hospice of Northwest Michigan

Hospice of Northwest Michigan has announced it will receive a $4,000 grant from CharEm United Way to be used towards its growing Grief/Loss and Bereavement programs.

Amy Wieland, Hospice of Northwest Michigan executive director, said the funding will be used to enhance existing grief, loss and bereavement materials, allow for additional community opportunities and access to their program and to ultimately support the community patients, families, friends and neighbors through any type of loss, not just a death.

"We are extremely grateful to the CharEm United way for supporting this program's continued development and for recognizing the value of this free and open mental and physical health resource to the community. We are able to meet so many more unmet grief, loss and bereavement needs with their support," Wieland said. "CharEm United Way funding will allow Hospice of Northwest Michigan the flexibility to immediately respond to our patients, families and community needs when loss is experienced."

Hospice of Northwest

Michigan is the only non-profit, community-based, locally-managed hospice in northern lower Michigan, meaning it is not owned, operated, regulated or supported by corporate interests, Wieland said.

"That gives us the flexibility to make decisions that serve our own communities' unique and ever-changing needs," she said. "Of course, it also means we're much more dependent on local support to survive."

Hospice of Northwest Michigan is a 501(c)(3) non-profit, community based hospice, serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. To learn more about Hospice of Northwest Michigan or to schedule presentations to local organizations, call Wieland at (231) 547-7659.

CharEm United Way is a local charitable organization that strives to improve the lives of the people in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties by working together to share community resources. Their funding decisions are made by members of the community to serve the community. For more information about CharEm United Way, visit charemunitedway.org or call (231) 487-1066.

Summer celebrations bring people home to Charlevoix

It's hard to believe another Venetian has come and gone. What an amazing week! Our guests and families alike will be looking forward to next year as they join their annual summer calendar and we will welcome you back. Please save the date for July 16-23, 2016.

A big thank you and congratulations to the Venetian Festival Committee and president, Dan Burton for a job well done. The committee, our city staff and volunteers always go above and beyond to winter, we all embrace connecting with old friends, enjoying outdoor activities, showcase Charlevoix and its wonderful assets. This event has become a homecoming for Charlevoix, bringing the community together for a weeklong celebration. After a long seeing our community full of people, enjoying and learning why we make Charlevoix our home. We also owe thanks to those who live in the surrounding communities that come to visit for the day or night, enjoy a meal, shop and take in a movie or a concert. To the boaters that come from near and far for fuel and provisions, and to those that make Charlevoix their annual vacation spot year after year, I thank you for making it possible for us to live, work and play in one of the most beautiful communities I know. Tourism is the anchor of our economy, and without your support we would not be able to offer these wonderful events, amenities and services. Though we bid Venetian Festival farewell for the year, let's not lose the momentum of this wonderful summer; it's only August and we have a lot left to offer.

From 6-9 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 8, the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair will be celebrating its 57th annual event in East Park.

Our Farmers Market continues each week in East Park from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. on Thursdays through October. Don't forget, Sidewalk Sales are just around the corner, enjoy those deep summer discounts from Aug. 13-15. Lastly, you can still enjoy a concert in the park or catch a movie at dusk through August. For a complete listing of performances and times, please visit charlevoix.org.

For the year-round guest, we have numerous restaurants, galleries, boutiques and specialty stores that would pique the interest of any shopper. Come explore all Charlevoix has to offer and learn why we call it "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

Local grocer to receive outstanding achievement honor in September

ONNIE ALLEN

311 547-6558 • allen@schurz.com

The Michigan Grocers Association will honor a Northern Michigan family-owned grocery market as the 2015 Outstanding Grocer in September. McDonough's Market on Beaver Island will be recognized along with Koegel Meats of Flint as the 2015 Al Kessel Outstanding Achievement Award winners.

"The awards honor former MGA board member Al Kessel, who passed away in 2012," said Linda M. Gobler, MGA president and CEO. "Al was the founder of Kessel Food Markets, which served Flint, Saginaw, Bay City and Corunna from 1981-2000. To reflect his generous spirit, the awards recognize the achievements of one outstanding retailer and one outstanding business partner. Winners were selected by a 12-member MGA committee."

McDonough's Market, is a third-generation family-owned grocery store and Beaver Island's only full-service grocer. The McDonough family has owned the store since 1933, when grandparents Lloyd and Eva McDonough purchased it from the Beaver Island Lumber Co. Later, ownership passed to parents Bud and Skip McDonough, who oversaw many expansions and improvements. Today, Bud and Skip's sons — Bill, Jim and Tim McDonough — own the store, along with Skip, and it continues to be operated as a true family venture; spouses and children are a large part of what makes the business successful, said Bill McDonough.

"We stay connected to the people and serve the community as our parents and grandparents did before us," McDonough said.

He added, with a laugh, that the brothers still receive visits from Skip to keep them in line.

"Mom still checks in on us to make sure we are running the store to her standards," McDonough said. "We have a very well organized and clean business, which is the way our parents taught us."

MGA member Spartan-Nash of Grand Rapids nominated McDonough's in part because the McDonough family demonstrates honesty and sincerity, a strong work ethic, kindness and community-mindedness. SpartanNash notes that the McDonough family continually strives to improve the quality of life on Beaver Island in many ways, from working with fellow leaders on nearby islands to raising funds, to serving on the volunteer fire department. In fact, Bud McDonough was the island's first volunteer fire chief.

"We are very involved on the island," McDonough said. "We feel as a family it is important to serve the community you live and have a business in. We've been involved with the fire department since we were kids."

As Beaver Island's only full-service grocer, McDonough's sells everything from food staples to gourmet food, to souvenirs and clothing, to hunting and fishing licenses. Known for its fresh-cut meats, year-round fresh produce, beer, wine and spirits selections and more, MGA says it is a "must-stop" location for island residents and tourists alike.

"It's the most remote island community," McDonough said. "We make sure we have the supplies for our community and those visiting the island."

"Both the McDonough and the Koegel families have made significant contributions to Michigan's food industry," Gobler said. "They are active in the association and have earned the respect and admiration of colleagues and customers throughout the state and beyond. The awards are well deserved recognition."

The awards will be presented at the MGA Fall Conference, Sept. 20, at Mackinac Island's Grand Hotel. It is the state's premier food industry event.

McDonough and his family feel the award is a great compliment to be recognized among the many grocery retailers in Michigan.

"We're flattered and honored that our peers would consider us," he said. "We appreciate SpartanNash and their support and we're very fortunate to be associated with them."

SummerFolk concert series continues

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library will continue the SummerFolk Concert Series.

SummerFolk celebrates local folk artists with an evening of music. The featured performer kicks off the evening with a 45 minute concert, which is followed by an open mike session; an opportunity for the public to share talents. Open mike sign-up begins at 6 p.m. the night of the concert, and is limited to five performers.

The SummerFolk Concerts run from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on the last Monday of each month, with an added special concert with The Librarians on Aug. 17.

"This concert is a special ensemble of current and past local librarians with musical roots. The group includes: Dwain Martin, Jessica Dominic, Robin Luce and Amy Cook and will delight the audience at this fundraising concert.

Martin, a songwriter in the folk-rock genre, possesses a spirit of joy, conscience, gratitude and a strong lyrical foundation using a variety of musical styles and instruments. He utilizes the talents of Dominic, Luce and Cook when they join him to play his songs as well as many of their own. This performance will help raise money for the folk concert series throughout the year and donations at the door are appreciated.

Peter "Madcat" Ruth, whose Grammy winning repertoire of styles include blues, American roots music, folk, jazz and world music, will be the featured performer on Aug. 31. Lee Murdoch will round out the series on Sept. 28. Murdoch's music is grounded in the work song tradition from the rugged days of lumberjacks and wooden sailing schooners.

For more information about the folk concert series, call Dwain Martin, (231) 547-2651.

Village of Ellsworth announces crowdfunding platform

LANSING — The Michigan Economic Development Corporation and the village of Ellsworth today announced a new crowdfunding campaign through Michigan-based crowdfunding platform Patronicity. The campaign will support the activation of a vacant downtown lot into a public green space.

If the community hits its crowdfunding goal of $26,000 by Aug. 31, Michigan Economic Development Corporation will provide a $26,000 matching grant with funds made possible by the Public Spaces Community Places program.

In December 2011, the building that occupied the vacant lot burned down, deemed a complete loss. The fire revealed an opportune location for a new town square located next to the Township Hall.

"Public Spaces Community Places is a good resource for communities to restore or activate public spaces," said Michigan Economic Development Corporation Community Development Director Katharine Czarnecki. "We are pleased to be able to partner in this effort to transform a vacant lot into a community gathering place for residents and visitors."

Money raised through the crowdfunding campaign will go toward phase one of the public park project. This includes site preparation and grading, installation of utilities, tearing down an old garage structure and landscaping. Once completed, the park will also include public restrooms and an open air pavilion.

"Now is the time for all those persons who have wanted something done with that corner to step forward and make the dream a reality," said village president Hugh Campbell. "We really appreciate the community coming out to help us with this project. This park will be a community asset that will be around for generations of citizens to enjoy, and we really couldn't do it without the support of the community and MEDC."

The total cost for phase one is approximately $67,000. The Village of Ellsworth and Banks Township have already pledged a combined total of $15,000, with the crowdfunding campaign meeting the remaining amount.

For Ellsworth project details and to donate, visit patronicity.com/project/ellsworth.

Public Spaces Community Places is a collaborative effort of the Michigan Economic Development Corporation, the Michigan Municipal League, and Patronicity where local residents can use crowdfunding to be part of the development of strategic projects in their communities and be backed with a matching grant from Michigan Economic Development Corporation. Communities, nonprofits and other business entities can apply at patronicity.com/puremichigan.

Hops for Hospice event raises $1,500 for Hospice of Northwest Michigan

CHARLEVOIX — The inaugural Hops for Hospice Boat Cruise Event, raised $1,500 for Hospice of Northwest Michigan in collaboration with the Charlevoix Marathon, Keweenaw Excursions and Shorts Brewery have already started booking the boat for the Second Annual Hops for Hospice Event in 2016.

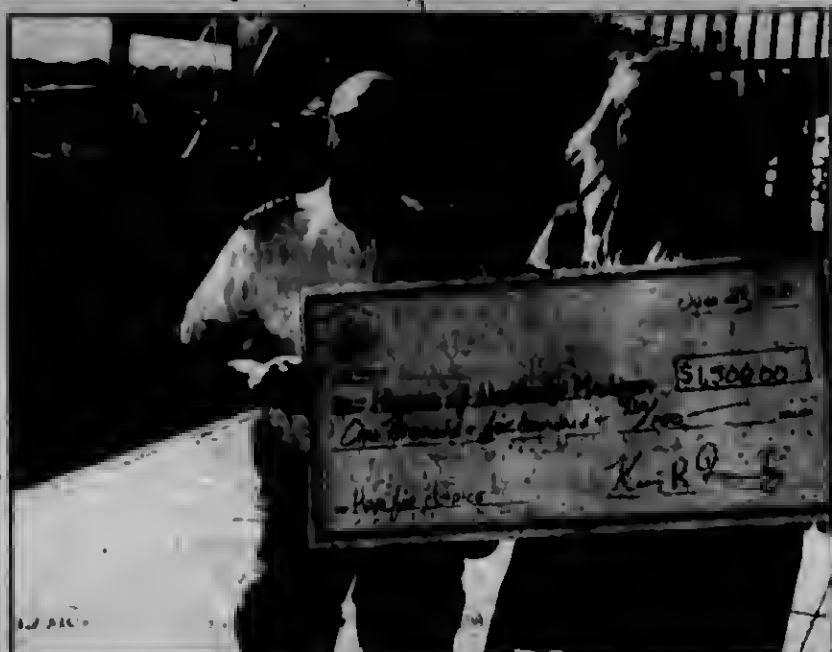

Like anything important, it takes the support of the local community to make something good happen, event organizers said. The Charlevoix Marathon, Keweenaw Excursions and Shorts Brewery chose to make Hospice of Northwest Michigan their charity of choice for this event and by doing so gave Hospice a footing to better serve the community in the future.

The Board of Directors, volunteers and staff of Hospice of Northwest Michigan appreciate this support, as they know how much the proceeds directly benefit hospice families and those in our local community. Every little bit helps and these funds ensure that Hospice is able to continue to provide quality end-of-life care for patients and their families in the area.

Hospice serves more than 150 hospice families each year, and a large number of community members not in the hospice program.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan is the only 501(c)3 nonprofit, community-based, locally-managed hospice in northern lower Michigan, meaning it is not owned, operated, regulated or supported by corporate interests. The organization serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. For more information, call (800) 551-4140 or visit hospicenwm.org.

Master Gardener classes to begin in Gaylord

GAYLORD — For those who love gardening, a new volunteer opportunity is available with a chance to learn more about it from the Michigan State University Extension Master Gardener Program.

The 14 week program will be held from 6-10 p.m. on Monday beginning Aug. 31 through Dec. 7, at the University Center of Gaylord, rooms U111 and U112.

This is a volunteer leader training program for people who are eager to learn science-based environmentally-friendly gardening practices and share this knowledge with others to help improve and beautify Michigan communities. The master gardener training experience provides in-depth education in many aspects of horticulture, including trees and shrubs, flowers, vegetables, fruits, soil, water, pests, lawns and indoor plants.

The reservation deadline for this training class is Aug. 7, for payment by check and Aug. 21, for payment by credit card. The cost of the full program which includes a 1,000 page training manual is $300. However, the Northern Michigan Master Gardeners Association will reimburse up to one-half that cost for two individuals once they have finished the course and obtained certification. Certification requires completion of 40 hours of horticulture-based service volunteering within one year of successfully completing the training program. After that, master gardener status is maintained through at least 15 hours of community service and five hours of education each year.

Charlevoix Crop Walk gears up for September event

CHARLEVOIX — Area residents are gearing up to join in the Charlevoix County CROP Walk, at 9 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26.

The six-mile walk will begin at three Charlevoix County locations, including Elm Pointe in East Jordan, Whiting Park in Boyne City and Charlevoix Middle School in Charlevoix. Each location will conclude the walk at the Congregational Church in Ironton where lunch will be provided for all walkers. All church and individuals are welcome to join the walk.

The locally organized

Charlevoix County CROP Walk set a goal of recruiting 130 walkers to raise $26,000, which will work to combat hunger here in the community as well as around the world. Twenty-five percent of all proceeds raised in Charlevoix County will come back locally to The Good Samaritan of Ellsworth, Care and Share of East Jordan, the Charlevoix Food Pantry, Seventh Day Adventist, Boyne Food Pantry in Boyne City and Boyne Falls Food Pantry, Boyne Falls. Last year, more than 100 walkers and volunteers raised more than $24,000, and $6,000 of that was divided between local food pantries. The remaining funds helped to combat hunger and poor sanitation around the world, including in the United States.

For more information about CROP Walk or if your church or organization would like to participate contact: East Jordan, Marge Teske, at (231) 536-3128; Charlevoix, John Young at (231) 547-2024 and for Boyne City, Mary Richwine at (231) 582-6035.

Petoskey Department of Public Safety donates to Women's Resource Center

PETOSKEY — Petoskey Department of Public Safety will present a $500 donation to the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan as part of their Petoskey Festival on the Bay open house and water ball competition from 1-3 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 15, at the fire station located at 101 East Lake St., Petoskey.

The funds were raised by the Leary Firefighters Foundation and the Guinness Foundation to help maintain a high level of public safety in communities across the country. The donation was facilitated by Bay-side Beverage, the local Guinness distributor.

The open house also will feature a "stuff the police vehicle" non-perishable donation drive to support survivors of domestic abuse and their children utilizing Safe Home services.

"The Women's Resource Center and Petoskey Department of Public Safety work together on a regular basis," said John Calabrese, Petoskey Public Safety Director. "The funding can help them in their work which, in turn, will also help us."

Widely respected, the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan is an integral part of the human service delivery system in Northern Michigan. The organization is the primary provider for crisis and ongoing services to survivors of domestic abuse, sexual assault, child abuse and child sexual assault/abuse in Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Antrim and Otsego counties. Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan services are provided to survivors at no charge, such as a round the clock crisis and information line, Safe Home shelter for domestic abuse survivors, emergency response at hospitals, counseling, support groups, advocacy for legal, medical, housing and financial assistance.

In addition to the "stuff the police vehicle" donation drive, the Petoskey Department of Public Safety open house will feature a water ball competition. Teams from Petoskey Public Safety Department, Harbor Springs Area Fire Department, Springvale Township Fire Department and event partner Resort-Bear Creek Fire Department will compete by pushing a large ball across an overhead cable using water from fire hoses.

Sherman Chamberlain, of Charlevoix, tells city council members about his skydive jump at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport with Skydive Harbor Springs. Chamberlain said the company is very professional and takes every precaution to make each jump fun and safe.

LONNIE ALLEN/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Liz Myer, Charlevoix Municipal Airport manager answers questions from Charlevoix City Council members about what she has heard from different pilots about skydiving at the airport.

Lonnie Allen/Charlevoix Courier

Charlevoix City Council member Bill Supernaw (right) questions airport manager Liz Myer about the letters received from Island Airways during the skydive operation discussions during Monday's city council meeting.

stituents and it seems the FAA has the control in this issue," Supernaw said.

Howard told Supernaw he wouldn't say council is "spinning its wheels," but is constrained by the FAA on what council is allowed to do because the city airport receives federal money.

"Because the airport receives federal money there are certain federal guidelines the city and the airport need to comply with," Howard said. "One of which is you are essentially required to allow certain aviation activities at an airport unless you can show there is a substantial safety hazard as a result of those activities."

Howard said that simply telling the FAA the city is concerned about safety is not enough and if council took any action by eliminating skydiving by citing safety concerns would not fly with the FAA guidelines.

"In no way would I recommend council to vote at this meeting banning skydiving because of safety concerns at the Charlevoix airport," Howard said, "because I am certain the FAA would overturn that decision."

Howard suggested to council the airport advisory committee could come up with a policy to regulate skydiving, but they should work with the FAA on the framework to be sure it meets their guidelines. One thing Howard noticed that should be done immediately is to make sure each licensee at the airport is compliant with the city code of ordinances. Howard found in his research that as far as he could tell no one at the airport is compliant with the indemnity agreement.

"(City staff) was unable to find any indemnification agreements by any of the licensees at the airport," Howard said. "That is part of your code of ordinances and it is something important to address, not in discussion but as a house-keeping point."

Once Howard finished answering the questions from city council he suggested the city work with the constraints of the federal government to allow skydiving or the other option would be shutting down the airport, which he doesn't believe anyone is suggesting. After discussions members from the public were allowed three minutes to speak on the topic many of them voiced support for the skydiving operation.

Charles Schpering, president of the Charlevoix Flying Club — Emmet Sports Flyers — said he has been watching the skydivers for over a year and believes it is a safe operation. He makes about 20 to 30 flights a month at the airport.

"I don't see any conflict of interest to my flying as a flight instructor or anybody else flying because when they are on the runway they are in an airplane and when they jump they are over the airport which does not interfere with planes landing following the flight pattern," he said. "I can't see an issue with their operation."

Don Seelye, of Charlevoix, is still against skydivers landing at the airport. He has 3,500 hours as a pilot and is based in Charlevoix. His concerns are with the landing.

"My concerns deal with safety during the landing of the craft," Seelye said. "Avoiding the jumpers is a distraction to the pilot. Having to find, see and avoid a parachute during a landing is a very dangerous situation."

Sherman Chamberlain, of Charlevoix, who received a birthday gift from his family to parachute with Skydive Harbor Springs earlier this summer, told council how he felt Luther's operation makes safety its priority. He explained his kids bought him the jump and it takes about 20 minutes to read through all the questions before the jump.

"I think safety is paramount in his operation," Chamberlain said. "Basically the long-and-the-short of it is I realize I am doing a dangerous activity and I am not going to sue anybody if anything goes wrong. That is basically the just of this reading."

Other audience members expressed that it appears the FAA does not see an issue with skydiving in Charlevoix and there seems to be sufficient insurance coverage, so the city council should drop the issue and focus energies elsewhere.

After hearing audience comments and reviewing the documents council member Shane Cole said it was time to for council to put the matter behind them until a more appropriate time.

"I want this (discussion) to end until Luther's licensing comes up for renewal in March," Cole said.

Cole made a motion to have council wait until March to review skydiving in Charlevoix, when Skydive Harbor Springs' license comes up for renewal.

It was approved 4-1 with Council member Jeff Porter against and Kurtz not voting.

Before the vote on Cole's motion, Gibson said she is not against skydiving but wants to make sure the city is protected against any liability.

Cole said he did not want this to interfere with Kurtz's operation at the airport and Gibson said, it was not her intent to stop skydiving with her recommendation.

Gibson's motion will have the city attorney and city manager consult with an aviation attorney to determine the level of risk and develop a strategy to reduce the risk to an acceptable level in the form of a waiver to insulate and protect the city from the risk of liability.

That motion passed 5-0, again Kurtz was not voting.

"That is not stopping the skydive operations," Gibson said. "I just want the city to be totally protected."

Howard agreed he is not an aviation attorney and that Gibson's recommendation is a "sensible course" for council members to take.

"I'm fine with it and I recognize I can't be an expert at everything," Howard said.

For the rest of this summer skydiving landings will continue at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport after city council members approved two recommendations on Monday.

"It is a relief that council sees that skydiving is OK in Charlevoix," Kurtz said. "It's a good thing we are moving past this."

a prestigious gathering of fine artists and craftsmen. Today, the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair ranks first in the state as a one-day exhibition and second only to the three-day fair in Ann Arbor. The evolution has not been without its growing pains, but the originally established tradition of excellence has never been compromised over the years. Today, the participants are juried into the show and most years acceptance is limited to approximately 125 artists, selected from hundreds of applicants, with special attention paid to providing quality work and a variety of media. The Art Fair committee is headed by Mary Beth McGraw, former Charlevoix Public Schools art teacher, and comprised of a small number of volunteers who put in endless hours adhering to the format and specifications set down in the by-laws of the organization.

The Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair and the nonprofit Charlevoix Council for the Arts are tandem organizations whose mission is to provide exposure to the arts for Charlevoix and surrounding Northern Michigan communities. They donate funds for art scholarships for aspiring young artists, hiring performances and presentations to the schools, for supporting local art and music related endeavors, and for providing educational stimulus for the arts in the community primarily through the annual Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair.

To date more than $50,000 in college scholarships has been given out to promising young artists. This year's scholarship was awarded to graduating Charlevoix High School senior, Grace Whitley.

"One of our missions is to encourage young people to have an appreciation for the arts," said McGraw. "We (the Charlevoix Public Schools art teachers) have seen our students' talent grow over the years in our art classes, and are happy to assist with a scholarship to help them embark on a possible career in art. That is a very rewarding part of what we do."

Artists from around the country flock to downtown Charlevoix one day a year to participate in the Waterfront Art Fair. The juried show on Saturday, Aug. 8, is expected to attract hundreds of spectators to East Park.

POSITIONS

The new position combines to seasonal positions with another part-time position.

"The person will be doing their job and the other two part-time positions we have not filled," DeRosia said. "It is a needed solution for the airport staffing."

The change to staffing was done fiscally and responsibly and eliminates risk at the airport from using seasonal labor, Heydlauff said.

"When you have people taking care of sensitive things at the airport you want them highly trained," Heydlauff said. "By having this position we eliminate part-time seasonal positions, which we had a hard time filling."

Keeping an employee that is already trained and highly skilled at the airport is the best option, said Liz Myer, airport manager.

"The person we want to keep is our trained mechanic," Myer said. "It would cost more to farm out the mechanic labor. By doing this we have eliminated three positions to keep a skilled employee."

Heydlauff spoke with the city treasurer about what the cost would be to the budget if the city eliminated the seasonal staff then add those positions to the other part-time position to make a full-time position.

"As a rough estimate the city will most likely break even financially,"

Heydlauff said.

Also by eliminating those positions the city and airport are expected to actually benefit from this move, he said.

Once staff finished their explanations Perron said jokingly to Heydlauff this is one of those occasions where more information would have been helpful.

"This is one of those cases," Perron said. "I am just pointing out between you, Liz and Patty that we just got a whole hunch of information."

design as an interior decorator," she said.

Whitley is this year's recipient of the Charlevoix Council of the Arts scholarship, awarded each year to a promising graduating senior who plans to attend a college in the field of art or design.

She appreciates the art training she received while attending school in Charlevoix.

"I had Mr. (John) Guirey for four years in high school," Whitley said. "He taught us not to draw from pictures, but from observation."

POW WOW JIINGTAMOK

AUGUST 9 & 10

THE HISTORY OF THE ODAWA HOMECOMING POW WOW

By Winnay Wemigwase, LTBB Tribal Citizen

The first "Indian Naming Ceremony," which served to honor those who helped Native people and their causes, was held near what is now the Harbor Master's office in Harbor Springs, MI, in 1934. At these ceremonies, non-Indian individuals were "adopted" into the tribe and given Indian names. These ceremonies continued for eight years with one person adopted each year. No ceremonies were held due to the war from 1942 to 1945. The ceremonies resumed in 1946.

On November 9, 1947, the Michigan Indian Foundation, Inc. was founded. The purpose of this group was to preserve Native culture and to help the local Native community. With the continual increase of spectators at the Indian Naming Ceremonies, the foundation initiated construction on an updated amphitheater in the spring of 1948. This outdoor theater would be known as the Harbor Springs Ottawa Indian Stadium.

The naming ceremonies came to an end approximately 10 years later. These large scale events changed from the Naming Ceremonies to a yearly production of the play "Hiawatha." These pageants were described as very elaborate and involved a lot of local Native families, dedication and hard work. The Hiawatha Pageant was performed in the Ottawa Indian Stadium until the 1960s.

In 1992, the First Annual Odawa Homecoming Pow Wow was held at the Ottawa Stadium in downtown Harbor Springs. It was hosted by the Andrew J. Blackbird Museum, and the committee was chaired by Shirley Naganashe-Oldman. It served to bring our people back to the stadium for singing and dancing and to educate the local community about who we are as contemporary Odawak. The Homecoming Pow Wows were held there yearly through 2001. The pow wow moved from the Ottawa Stadium to the current Pleasantview Road location in 2002. The current location brought the pow wow to tribal property and to the center of our community. It sits adjacent to the LTBB Governmental Center and our Natural Resource Department building, both places being central to the daily business of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians. As hosts of the Annual Odawa Homecoming Pow Wow, the LTBB community continues its tradition of celebrating who we are through song and dance.

MEN'S TRADITIONAL

MEN TRADITIONAL DANCERS USE STORYTELLING MOVEMENTS TO ACT OUT THE FEARS OF BRAVERY. THEY IMITATE ANIMALS WITH SIDE-TO-SIDE MOVEMENTS AS PART OF THEIR DANCE. A STORYLINE DEVELOPS AS EACH DANCER CHALLENGES THE ENEMY OR REPRESENTS AN ANIMAL.

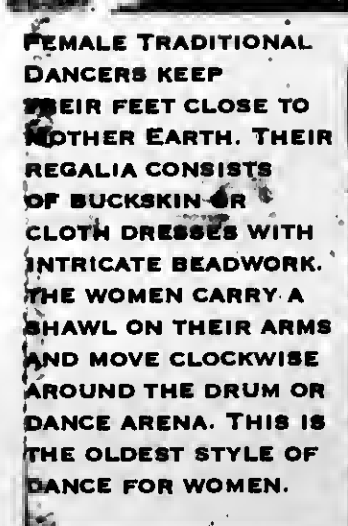

MEN'S GRASS DANCE

IN THE OLD DAYS, IT WAS THE JOB OF THE GRASS DANCERS TO FLATTEN THE GRASS IN THE ARENA BEFORE A POW WOW. THE NAME "GRASS" DOES NOT COME FROM THE STOMPING OF GRASS, BUT IT COMES FROM THE OLD HABIT OF TYING BRAIDS OF SWEET GRASS TO THE DANCER'S SELTS, PRODUCING A SWAYING EFFECT.

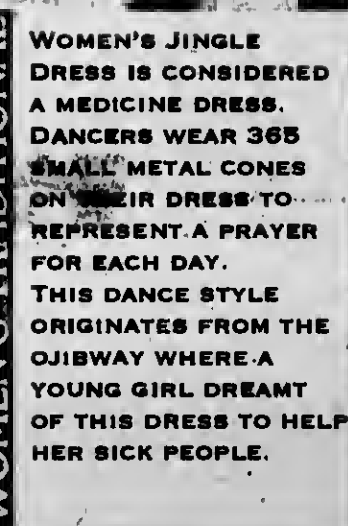

MEN'S FANCY DANCE

THE MALE FANCY DANCE IS BASED ON THE TRADITIONAL WARRIOR SOCIETY DANCES. IT HAS EVOLVED INTO A COMPETITIVE DANCE FOR MODERN WARRIORS. DANCERS EXPRESS THEMSELVES BY INTRICATE FOOTWORK, SPINS AND COLORFUL REGALIA.

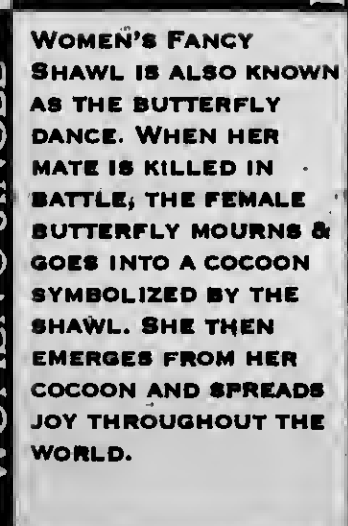

FEMALE TRADITIONAL

FEMALE TRADITIONAL DANCERS KEEP THEIR FEET CLOSE TO THE EARTH. THEIR REGALIA CONSISTS OF BUCKSKIN OR CLOTH DRESSES WITH INTRICATE BEADWORK. THE WOMEN CARRY A SHAWL ON THEIR ARMS AND MOVE CLOCKWISE AROUND THE DRUM OR DANCE ARENA. THIS IS THE OLDEST STYLE OF DANCE FOR WOMEN.

WOMEN'S TRADITIONAL

WOMEN'S JINGLE DRESS IS CONSIDERED A MEDICINE DRESS. DANCERS WEAR 365 SMALL METAL CONES ON THEIR DRESS TO REPRESENT A PRAYER FOR EACH DAY. THIS DANCE STYLE ORIGINATES FROM THE OJIBWAY WHERE A YOUNG GIRL DREAMT OF THIS DRESS TO HELP HER SICK PEOPLE.

WOMEN'S JINGLE

WOMEN'S FANCY SHAWL IS ALSO KNOWN AS THE BUTTERFLY DANCE. WHEN HER MATE IS KILLED IN BATTLE, THE FEMALE BUTTERFLY MOURNS & GOES INTO A COCOON SYMBOLIZED BY THE SHAWL. SHE THEN EMERGES FROM HER COCOON AND SPREADS JOY THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Voting begins for Northern Michigan Review Super Fan

The nominees have been chosen, and now it's up to you to select the area's biggest Super Fan.

We've assembled nine of the best representatives of what it means to be a Super Fan from the Otsego, Emmet and Charlevoix counties and across a wide swath of schools.

These fans all are frequent attendees at games and events and passionate about their school, but many go above and beyond to help out their programs in ways that make them unique.

We're very excited about this group as we think these nine selections truly represent what we're looking for when the contest started.

But while every one of these fans deserves the honor of being called a Super Fan, there can only be one winner, and that's where we need your help.

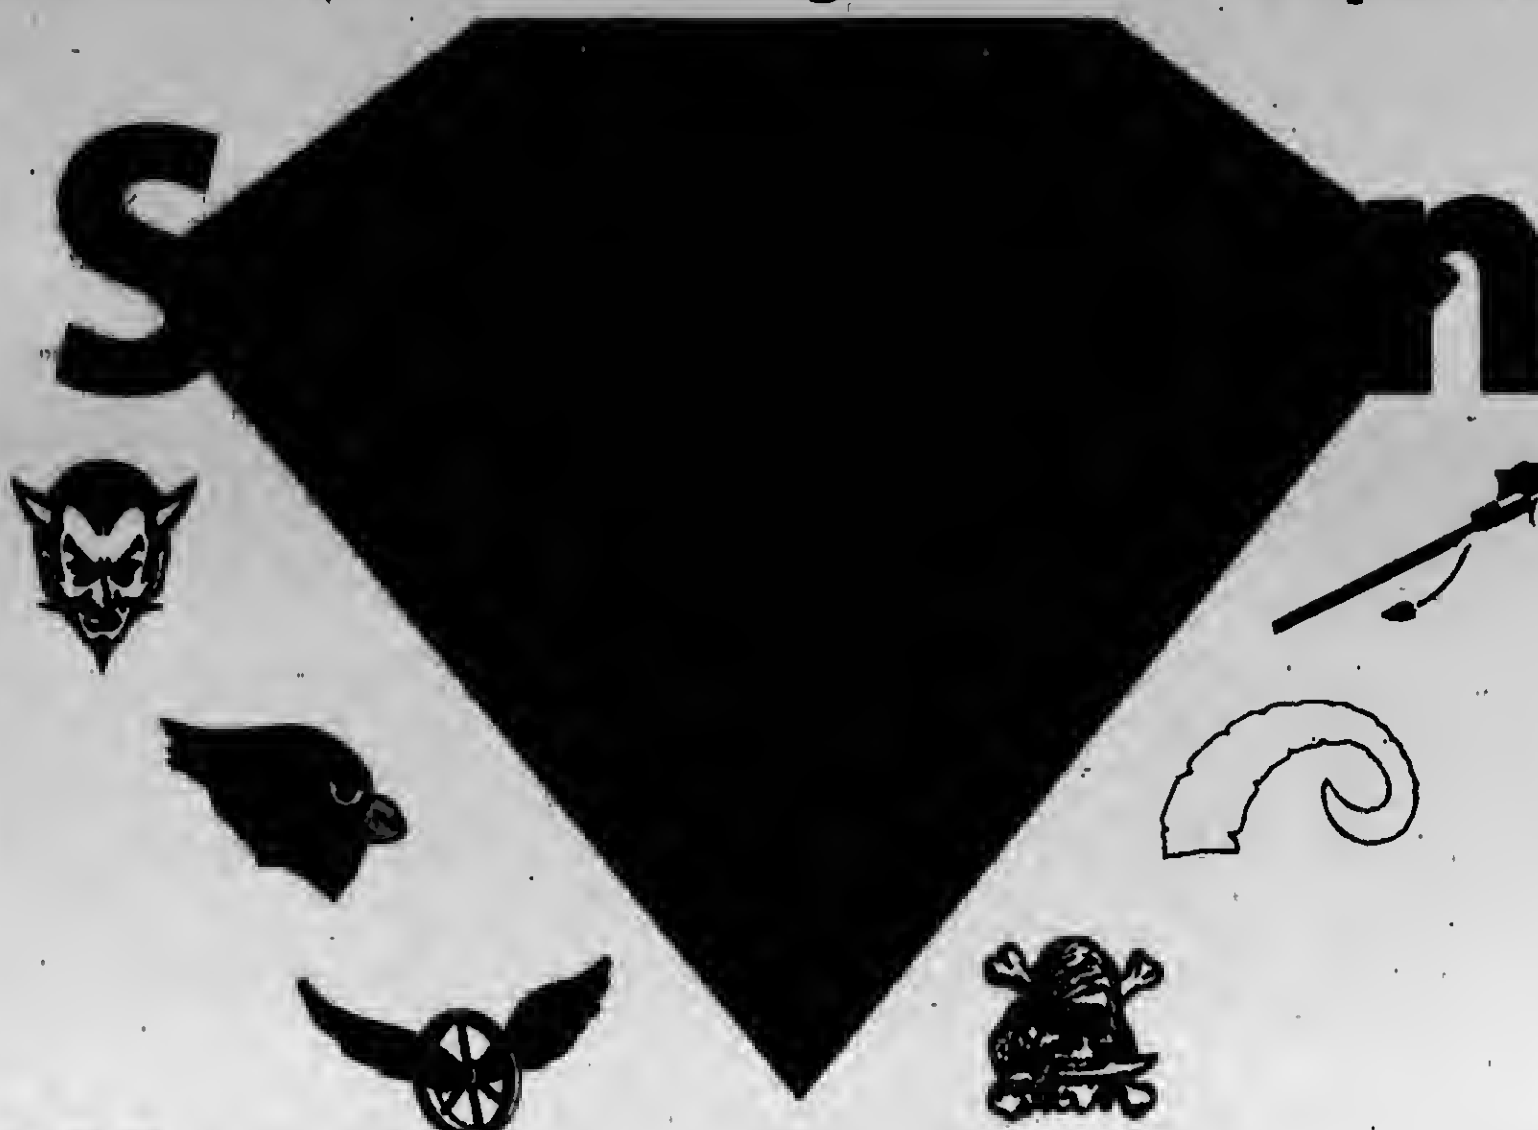

Starting today, Friday, we're opening up voting on our website, petoskeynews.com, to decide the best of the best, the area's true Super Fan.

You can go to petoskeynews.com/superfan to join in on the action and vote for your favorite candidate. Voting will run until next Friday, Aug. 14, and you can vote once.

The winner of the vote will get a full story on them in the Aug. 21 edition of the Petoskey News-Review going into more detail about what makes them a standout fan.

Thanks for your participation so far, and be sure to support your favorite candidate early and often as the competition for the top spot is sure to be fierce.

Now, once again, may the best fan win.

Who's your number 1?

The candidates are in and the time to finally vote for the area Super Fan has arrived. Visit petoskeynews.com/superfan to cast your vote for the area Super Fan who best shows their school spirit.

Charlevoix's Tribfelner competes in inaugural all-star game

TRAVERSE CITY — If the following years follow suit of the inaugural Northern Michigan All-Star Basketball game, it's safe to say it may only grow from here.

Boys and girls basketball players from around the area gathered for the first ever Northern Michigan All-Star game in Traverse City on Sunday, where four teams put on a show to represent their area.

A North and South team was selected for each boys and girls, with familiar names and a couple of area girls participating for the girls' North squad in Alexis Tribfelner of Charlevoix and Raegen Pedigo of Boyne Falls.

Both the boys and girls' games took place at Traverse City St. Francis High School, where Pedigo and Tribfelner finished first and second respectively in scoring for the North, but a last second free throw by the South team would give them a 41-40 win.

Pedigo would score a game high and team high 15 points for the girls' North team, while Tribfelner scored 11 points for the North, but Autumn Goggin of Kingsley would come through in the clutch with 4.6 seconds remaining for the South team.

Tied at 40-all, Goggin would have a shot at the line with just under five seconds remaining.

Missing the first, Goggin would shake off the pressure to give her team the one point lead and eventually the win on the second shot.

With heavy scoring from Pedigo and Tribfelner, the North would lead by 10 points in the second half, 34-24, but an 11-0 run from the South, aided by 10 points from Jenna Szostak of Tawas would give the South the momentum they needed.

Szostak would go on to earn MVP honors with 14 points, six assists and five rebounds for her South team.

Playing with just five players, team North would also feature Gaylord's Lindsey Zarembo, Madison Ewing of Johannesburg-Lewiston and Leighton Koepke of Bellaire.

Koepke, a Class D All-State selection this past season, would score eight points, while Ewing scored five and Zarembo, one.

Pedigo and Tribfelner each earned All-Area and All-Conference selections this past season.

Also for team South, Goggin finished with 11 points, Shayla Soto of Frankfort scored six, Logan Winton of Fairview and Brooke Shutte of Arenac Eastern, each with four and Taylor Kibby of Kalkaska, two points.

On the boys' side, the North boys came away with a 67-59 victory, with Alpena's Tyler Pinter helping the North to the win.

Team South would lead throughout the game with Traverse City West graduate Stephen Sheppard leading the way, hitting five 3-pointers, while scoring 15 points in all.

Pinter would match Sheppard's scoring, however, in helping the North to a win, just like he had in leading his Wildcats to back-to-back Big North Conference titles his junior and senior seasons.

A teammate of Pinter's at Alpena, Brad Styra would finish with eight points for the North, while Trenton LaVergne of Lincoln Alcona earned the game MVP, with 19 points, six rebounds, four assists and three steals.

Also for the North, Mason VanPamel of Hillman scored 16, Pat Dunn of Onaway scored six and Dylan Ross of Hillman added four points.

For the South, Dillon Zettel led all scorers with 21 points in the game, Scout Tobin of Grayling finished with 10 points, Michael Olm of Traverse City St. Francis scored seven, Deion Dyal of West scored six, while Austin Cooper of Kalkaska and Ty Lurvey of St. Francis each finished scoreless.

Recent Charlevoix graduate Alexis Tribfelner would play for the girls' North team during the inaugural Northern Michigan All-Star basketball game on Sunday in Traverse City, scoring 11 points in a narrow one-point loss.

READY FOR SOME FOOTBALL

The Rayers, coming off of a 6-4 season year ago, will begin fall practice on Monday, Aug. 10 in a week of two-a-days, leading up to their first game of the season on Friday, Aug. 28 against Elk Rapids.

Above: Charlevoix varsity football players go through defensive drills during a camp at Montrose a week ago. The Rayers defense is coming off of a season in which they held opponents to an average of 6.5 points in their six wins, which included three shutouts on the year. They'll begin fall camp to once again make a return trip to the post-season on Monday, Aug. 10.

Mark Greyerbiehl, Charlevoix

The former owner of the Ace Hardware in Charlevoix and a current board member of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce is a passionate and devoted Rayder fan, attending a wide range and number of sporting events to cheer on Charlevoix. But beyond his presence at games, it's his help behind the scenes in the athletic department, supporting players, coaches and teams in whatever way is necessary that sets him apart as a true Super Fan. Vote for Mark at petoskeynews.com/superfan

Autumn Stutzman, Boyne City

One of Boyne City's biggest supporters through the Ramblers boys' basketball run to the Breslin Center this past season, Autumn could often easily be found as the face painted fan in the stands. Heading into the fourth grade, Autumn best epitomizes what it means to be a passionate Rambler fan. With basketball as her new favorite sport, Autumn is already counting the days until the Ramblers take to the court again next season. Vote for Autumn at petoskeynews.com/superfan

Richard McDonald, Petoskey

Richard can be found at the vast majority of Petoskey athletic events and is always an inspiration and motivator for the athletes. Richard's patented high fives representing your years of being on the team, on deck or the sidelines, provides a relaxing presence in a normally intense game like environment. Richard has been there rain, shine, or even the occasional northern Michigan snow game cheering his program on to victory. You can always count on Richard to be there front row encouraging and willing the team to victory, it's almost like having an extra teammate on the field. Vote for Richard at petoskeynews.com/superfan

Joe Martin, Johannesburg-Lewiston

Rain or shine, "End Zone Joe" Martin doesn't miss a Johannesburg-Lewiston varsity football game, and he is always seen standing in the end zone wearing his Cardinals gear — regardless if it's a home or away game. On his lawn, his Cardinals flag flies in a flower bed while his handmade "Cardinal Cutouts" are located throughout Johannesburg. During the Division 8 playoffs last season, Joe and his family stopped on the side of the road ahead of J-L's bus route to cheer the team as it rolled past them en route to Beal City. After his son, Joseph, was born, "End Zone Joe" took him to a J-L practice to meet the coaching staff Joseph will one day play for on the gridiron. Vote for Joe at petoskeynews.com/superfan

Vote For Your Super Fan of the Year

Melissa Nowicki, Gaylord St. Mary

More people know Melissa Nowicki for her signature cowbell and horn than anything else when it comes to supporting St. Mary sports. That explains why so few people sit next to her during football games. Her horn use while cheering once earned her a "More Cowbell" t-shirt from a fellow fan. The shirt depicted Will Ferrell and his infamous saying during his Saturday Night Live skit in 2000. Her family owns an embroidering and screen printing business, so her closet is full of custom-made St. Mary sports t-shirts and clothing. Her two sons, Adam and Josh Nowicki, play varsity football, basketball and baseball for the Snowbirds. Her husband, Matt Nowicki, is the varsity baseball coach at the school. Vote for Melissa at petoskeynews.com/superfan

Jim and Cheryl Brown, East Jordan

If the Red Devils are playing, it's a good bet that Jim and Cheryl Brown are there, regardless of the sport. They're a constant presence in the stands at East Jordan athletic events, cheering on the Red Devils, whether it be middle or high school. They're also active volunteers, organizing the concession stands and assisting at game events whenever possible. They do this while assisting their daughter, Cheyenne, who was born with cystic fibrosis, a genetic disorder affecting the lungs, and being active in the fight against that ailment as well. Vote for Jim and Cheryl at petoskeynews.com/superfan

Jim and Carolyn Cloutier, Harbor Springs

If there's a Harbor Springs sporting event going on, chances are you'll find Jim and Carolyn cheering the Rams on from the front row. Jim can often be found with his camera catching the Rams in action, as well. They've both tirelessly supported the Harbor Springs community and the Rams' athletic program for years and truly define what it means to be Super Fans in the Harbor Springs community. Please join Hayes Township on August 10, 2015 from 6:00 to 7:00 p.m.

at the Township Hall, 09195 Old US 31 N., Charlevoix for a gathering of residents, friends and colleagues to thank Paul Hoadley for his years of dedication to Hayes Township. Paul began his service to Hayes Township in 1981 serving on the Planning Commission as the Chair-person. He was Township Supervisor from 1984 until 1996 and served as assessor from 1994 until his retirement on June 30 of this year. Paul continues his service to the Township as a member of the Parks & Recreation Committee and volunteers his time helping out at the new Hayes Township Park, Camp Sea-Gull. Please join us in showing our gratitude to our wonderful friend, colleague and trusted Township Official. We will be serving soft drinks, cake and cookies.

Bay View picks Charlevoix man for leadership post

(231) 439-9342 • rbentley@petoskeynews.com

BAY VIEW — In choosing their organization's next day-to-day leader, members of the Bay View Association's board found what they were looking for in a candidate from a neighboring county.

Mike Spencer, 40, plans to wrap up his current employment with the city of Charlevoix by late August and start work as Bay View's executive director days later. Members of Bay View received an introduction to him during the association's annual meeting Saturday, a little more than a week after Bay View trustees voted unanimously in favor of his hiring. Bay View operates on a 337-acre campus just east of Petoskey, one that's home to more than 400 summer cottages as well as two hotels, a bed and breakfast and about 30 additional buildings. The seasonal community offers music, educational and recreational programming for its members, with many events also open to the general public. While Bay View maintains an affiliation with the United Methodist Church, its members come from a variety of Christian denominations.

Spencer started work with the city of Charlevoix in late 2007, and has served as its planning director, zoning administrator and a geographic information systems specialist for much of the time since. He also stepped in as acting city manager in recent months when a vacancy opened in that position. At Bay View, he'll replace John Stakoe, who plans to retire this fall from the executive director post after holding the position since 2010.

Bay View board member Bob Docking heads the personnel committee that handled the recent executive search. He noted that Spencer has long-running ties to Northern Michigan, having grown up in the region. In researching Spencer's background, Docking said those involved with the search process received reports that he's hard-working, dedicated, a good listener and a leader who can work well with staff and community members.

"I think he wants to build a team," Docking said. "I think he loves this area and is proud of it and wants to do what he can to CHARLEVOIX — The threat of rain gave way to sunny skies and warm temperatures on Saturday, as artists and visitors filled to East Park for the 57th annual Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair.

Hundreds of people perused the more than 100 exhibitors on Aug. 8, and for Harbor Springs resident Joette Hansen, the art fair has been a traditional stop for more than 30 years.

"It is such a well-run art show," Hansen said. "The artists bring real, high-quality artwork to view and even purchase if that is something you want to do."

CHARLEVOIX — Phone service with Charter Communications is expected to save Charlevoix Township about $1,200 per year, said Charlevoix Township Supervisor Chuck Center, during his report at their monthly board of trustees meeting on Aug. 10.

"Originally the savings was expected to be $1,400 a year, but because we have four phone lines we had an additional cost for an (Informational Technology) person," Center said. "They didn't tell me that when we were negotiating the deal, but we are still saving about $100 per month with the new phones."

Trustees also approved membership with the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance during their Monday meeting.

Trustees approved the $3,000 annual membership fee unanimously after a brief discussion.

Board members agreed that the alliance was helpful with the various governmental procedures between the township

CHARLEVOIX — Since the late 1800s the Parsons family has harvested the sap of the maple trees surrounding Harwood Lake in Charlevoix, but today the family business has grown into much more than maple syrup.

Thanks to son-in-law Phillip Munday, an Australian cChef, and daughter, Amber (Parsons) Munday, the duo have revamped the family business to feature new products, a new website and a new brand — Harwood Gold.

"It's been a lot of work, but we are starting to see some reward from our labor," Phillip said.

Chef Phillip's maple barbecue sauce, catsup, maple chutney, maple sriracha sauce and other products are some of the newest products that are available for sale

See FARM, page A10

Amber and Phillip Munday open their new point of sale location at Parsons Farm in Charlevoix. Amber and Phillip took over her parents' maple syrup business in 2014, and have revamped the brand by adding new products to the traditional maple syrup sales.

Charlevoix Pool begins annual fundraiser

NICOLE SEYMOUR
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Area Community Pool is beginning its yearly fundraiser this month with some event changes.

In years past, the pool has held an auction-style event consisting of dinner, drinks and entertainment. This year's fundraiser deemed "Imaginary Pool Party" will not include an auction. Instead it is simply asking community members and pool-goers to donate based on what they think they might have spent had an actual event been held.

This change will allow the facility to retain more money to keep the pool and different programs active, instead of incurring additional expenses, said pool staff.

Pool staff are excited about the monthlong fundraising event as it will give community members more of a chance to see the facility and its programs, along with offering an opportunity to really focus on what the pool means to the community.

The change in fundraising efforts isn't the only thing new at the pool. Just this past year, the facility has seen two big changes with the hiring of new facility manager, Peggy DeNio, and new swim coach, Phillip Marhugh.

"The overall atmosphere of the pool is just so welcoming," DeNio said, when asked about how she feels about the program since coming on as facility manager earlier this year. "Program participation has really grown this year. People are happy here and really seem to enjoy the programs we offer."

Another bright spot for the pool comes with the hiring of a new certified swim coach. Marhugh, former coach of the Harbor Springs swim team the Hammerheads, has been working on rebuilding the swim team. Training for the swim team begins in September with the season starting in October. Currently Charlevoix Schools works with the program and provides busing to practices for students after school. Marhugh also coaches several swimming and exercise programs offered to public.

"We're just so fortunate to be able to have a new certified coach to our program. We just have a great team here," DeNio said.

With the fundraiser running throughout the month, DeNio is hopeful that people will embrace the change in events and take an opportunity to check out the pool. For more information on the event and various community programs, visit charlevoixpool.org or call (231) 547-0982.

Township looks to install sign to prevent driving on bike trail

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schultz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Members of the Charlevoix Township Board will look to create more signage for the new Lake to Lake Trail at the south side of Fire Hall Drive near the township water tower, because trail users are parking vehicles on the trail.

"People seem to think it is a parking lot to access the trail," said township supervisor Chuck Center.

Discussion about a sign going up or maybe installing a type of barrier to prevent motor vehicles from driving on the trail were discussed during the meeting.

Center said he doesn't believe a barrier can be installed, but they will look at adding a sign to alert motorists that they are parking on the trail.

Dave Christiansen, assistant fire chief and township board member hopes that something can be done to prevent more vehicles from parking on the trail.

"We need to do something because people assume it's a parking lot," Christiansen said.

Township officials will decide on sign to prevent vehicles from driving on the trail by the next meeting.

"It's a problem and hopefully a sign will help," Christiansen said.

Charlevoix Area Hospital offers beauty program for women in cancer treatment

BY EMILY PADGETT
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — An uplifting, national program has arrived at Charlevoix Area Hospital. The Look Good Feel Better program has been around for 28 years and provides an opportunity for women enduring cancer treatments to learn how to make up and style themselves under the unfamiliar circumstances that chemotherapy or radiation might put them in.

A physician asked the Personal Care Products Council what recommendations they had for someone experiencing extreme appearance changes and the program was implemented as a result.

Licensed cosmetologist volunteer their time to be trained by the combined efforts of the American Cancer Society, and the Professional Beauty Association. They teach women at Look Good Feel Better gatherings beauty routines that they might not have learned before cancer treatments. The women might need to practice covering up discolored skin patches, draw on eyebrows, or select and style a wig.

Women who have endured surgery could learn how to accessorize to camouflage scars, if they so choose.

The attendants register in advance and then receive a kit matching their skin tone. This step is very important so that the women at the workshop can practice using the cosmetics with a professional to guide her, said Karen Hadley, chemotherapy-infusion center director.

Hadley, also an advanced oncology certified clinical nurse specialist feels that this is a great program.

She mentioned, "Patients just love it. You can really see the difference, and they look great." Hadley also explained that many patients visit the hospital on Mondays for treatment, so the oncology department scheduled this program from 1-3 p.m. on Aug. 17, Oct. 19, and Dec. 14.

The patients would receive lunch along with the program making it a one stop day. These dates also rotate with Petoskey's Look Good Feel Better Program in July, September, and November so that whatever area of Northern Michigan a patient lives in, they can conveniently attend this great program.

Anyone interested in more information can visit the Charlevoix Area Hospital website at cah.org or call the Infusion Center at the Charlevoix Area Hospital at (231) 547-8571. Women with a cancer recurrence who are going through treatment again are welcome to bring a kit they have used in the past for a refresher course.

Men who would like to learn what they can do to feel confident with their appearance during treatment are welcomed to visit the website for an online tutorial at www.lookgoodfeelbetter.org.

Charlevoix hospital revamps support group for patients fighting cancer

BY EMILY PADGETT
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — The oncology department at Charlevoix Area Hospital has consolidated the program they call Support for the Journey from a six week program into a single two hour session. Support for the Journey is meant as an overview of resources available for any person diagnosed with, living with or surviving from cancer.

Attendants hear from a variety of departments offering help with emotional wellness, nutrition, stress management and it includes a presentation by a hospital financial expert to help patients with concerns they might have with copays, treatments and prescriptions. Sometimes patients in need can benefit from free drug programs or receive assistance from the Circle of Strength support group affiliated with the hospital. Patients receive cards from each department. A patient can use these cards to set up appointments with someone who can help as they accumulate concerns or questions regarding their experience with cancer.

Another topic patients learn about in this program is exercise. Compared to the past, more and more people are surviving occurrences of cancer. With this change, a need arose to teach patients how to care for themselves post-cancer, so that they can enjoy life without disability, said Karen Hadley, chemotherapy-infusion center director.

Hadley remarked how important exercise is for long-term patient outcomes.

"Engaging in exercise is something that we really want to encourage," Hadley said.

Many survivors of cancer attend these monthly meetings to tell their story and take current patients to lunch in the cafeteria in order to offer a nine-on-nine discussion.

"This program recognizes that for patients, (cancer) is a big ordeal," Hadley said. "It really does take a village, and we don't want patients out there without assistance. We don't want them to worry needlessly." The program takes place from 10 a.m.-noon on the third Tuesday of each month in classroom B of the hospital.

For more information or to register, visit cah.org under Services-Oncology, or call (231) 547-8571.

What happened to civility among neighbors?

Editor:
The Kraff family has long adored this town as we have spent every summer — with the exception of two — since 1963, enjoying the natural beauty of Charlevoix. As young parents, then living in Chicago, we rented a cabin from Dr. Howard Messmore on the lake. Our three daughters learned to swim there and we relished our excursions to Kilwins, the Parkside and Argonne. In 1970, we purchased a cabin from Dr. Messmore and lovingly decorated it with treasures from the art and craft fairs. As the girls grew up, their husbands and children also looked forward to memorable times in Charlevoix. Last year, due to the challenges of aging, we sold our cabin to our younger neighbors and were happy to see their flock of little ones enjoying the place we so loved. Now, we have been wonderfully blessed as our youngest daughter, Liz, and husband, Michael Seitz, decided they want to sustain the family connection to this magical place. They have bought several properties to restore, to rent out and to enjoy as a family. They purchased Applecore for themselves and shortly thereafter the Earl Young house on Park Avenue. I went with them to view the house before they bought it and was appalled to see that once stately home in deplorable condition. The house looked like it had been neglected for decades. Every room was in need of repair and renovation. The non-working toilets and clutter were only the tip of a very problematic structure. Indeed, this house was an eyesore and a blight on a most charming street. Michael and Liz bought this property, next door garage and stone house behind it. We are currently occupying the stone house. Michael a PhD engineer from South Africa, has used his enormous gifts of creativity and his deep appreciation of the area to retain the original Earl Young unique stone work. He has as added an undulating and charming thatched roof. This method of roofing, long used in Europe, is both environmentally sound and extraordinarily resilient. The sloping shape — soon to turn gray — resembles a bed of natural mushrooms. Our family is deeply saddened by some ... luckily only a few ... who have made life most difficult for Michael and Liz. The very slight overhang into a neighbors embankment has been corrected, but complaints continue. We want residents of Charlevoix to know how favorable tourist interest as well as tangible investment has been generated by the renovation of this Park Avenue place. It will be an architectural work of art and a stunning, well kept house for visitors to enjoy. We hope that this project will now continue with enthusiasm and excitement it so deserves.

Tap Room curbs indigent, transient populations

Editor:
I support the owners and staff at Bridge Street Tap Room and Lake Charlevoix Brewing. I appreciate all the business and enjoyment they bring to our community. My brothers, nephews, and their wives who visited during Venetian Festival were impressed with the brewers' hospitality and Michigan-made business practice and wished their own cities (Madison, Wis.; Princeton, N.C.; Clearwater, Fla.; Minneapolis, Minn.) would be so locally innovative. And though I would agree that my brothers are an interesting bunch of guys, there is not a hobo among them, nor did they attend any convention. This leads me to my second point: name-calling, questioning individuals just to embarrass them, and abusing a position of power are inexcusable behaviors by council member Jeffrey Porter. Disputes occur, but individuals work through them in a civil manner. For instance, the issue of using public property for private purposes can be done in such a fashion that both parties win. Many communities and the federal government already engage in this sort of partnership. In fact, I believe it's just such a partnership that must occur with Charlevoix businesses and our public schools to help train and create a middle class workforce for Charlevoix's future. We need year-round, good paying jobs to curb our indigent and transient populations. Personal battles like the one being waged against Bridge Street Tap Room and Lake Charlevoix Brewing are toxic. We should be focusing on job creation.

Sincerely,
Annemarie Conway
Ellsworth

Jeff Porter: Guilty of doing his job

Editor:
I'm surprised at the negative comments directed at Jeff Porter. Jeff is always looking forward and doing positive things in the community. As a councilman, he has to pass on complaints from his ward. That is his job. Council should always look for new business, but not at the expense of existing businesses. Jeff Porter has done a great job of protecting the city in the past. In the present, and, hopefully, in the future.

Sincerely,
Gabe Campbell, Mayor of Charlevoix

LOOKING BACK...

Earl Young house was artist's retreat

Around 1930, a man named Herman Panama commissioned a house from Earl Young in Boulder Park at the intersection of Lakeshore Drive and Western Avenue. It was to become a one-story L-shaped structure faced with thousands of small multi-toned stones gathered from the immediate Charlevoix area and beautifully placed together as only Young knew how to do. This photo shows the house just before completion with no windows yet installed. Herman Panama had a son named Norman, who at that time was on his way to becoming one of Hollywood's leading producers, writers and directors. Norman Panama wrote and produced "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House" starring Cary Grant and Myrna Loy; was nominated for an Oscar for the script to "Road to Utopia" with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope; was commissioned by Crosby to write the script for the classic "White Christmas," worked with Danny Kaye on "Knock Wood;" and wrote the book for the stage musical "Li'l Abner." It is believed that he worked on many of his projects while vacationing at this house during the many summers he spent here. A very gregarious man, Norman Panama hosted big parties on the lawn and became very well known and liked in Charlevoix. But he gave up the vacation house when he retired in California. Today, the structure appears with the later additions of a second story on the east wing and a lower apse-like extension from that wing toward Western Avenue that houses the master bedroom's bathroom. A new 50-minute documentary on the life and influence of Earl Young titled "The Wizard of Boulder Park," produced in partnership with the Charlevoix Historical Society, premiered at Cinema III on June 8, to a sell-out house. It will be repeated by popular demand at 11:30 a.m. on Friday, Aug. 14, and Saturday, Aug. 15, at Cinema III, 107 Antrim Street. Tickets are $15 per person, available at the box office at time of showing or through reservation by emailing marykurtz@live.com. Ticket proceeds go toward support of the Historical Society. Charlevoix Area Hospital welcomes new surgeon

Gregory McBride

CHARLEVOIX — A new general surgeon joins the growing medical staff at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Gregory J. McBride, D.O., was officially welcomed by his fellow physicians at a special breakfast held in his honor at the hospital in June. A graduate of Hope College and Michigan State College of Osteopathic Medicine, Dr. McBride completed his internship and residency at McLaren Greater Lansing.

Together with his wife, Kristy and their 11-month old son, Brantley, they made the move to the area in June and are excited to be living in a place with so much to offer.

"We are so happy to be in Charlevoix, both personally and professionally," McBride said. "We interviewed at a number of places and Charlevoix Area Hospital just felt like 'home' to us. We love the area and felt that it would be a great fit for our family."

Dr. McBride and his wife hit the ground running, literally, both taking part in the Charlevoix Marathon back on June 27. With each of them loving the outdoors and sports, Northern Michigan was an ideal place for them to settle down. Dr. McBride vacationed in the area as a boy and has fond memories.

The third operating room and major renovation of the surgical suite is a continuation of Phase 1 of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Master Facilities Plan, initiated by the creation of the Sarah M. Foster Chemotherapy-Infusion Center earlier this year and followed by the expansion of Boyne Area Medical Center.

"One of the most rapidly growing services for Charlevoix Area Hospital is surgery — increasing at a rate of 10 percent per year," said Lyn Jenks, Chief Executive Officer. "It is a driver of patient need, satisfaction and a very important part of our 'care, close to home' mission. We are so pleased to have Dr. McBride join (the surgical team) and will soon have a brand new, state-of-the-art surgery suite to welcome him and a growing number of area patients."

Excited about joining an already thriving team of excellent surgeons at Charlevoix Area Hospital, Dr. McBride is looking forward to serving the community.

"It's clear that the staff here has a passion for the community and its patients," McBride said. "I look forward to being part of that team."

Placeshifting Fair will help make homes safer and smarter

CHARLEVOIX — Placeshifting is a new phrase that has entered the vocabulary as many live in more than one place throughout the year. It is defined as the activities needed to safely, efficiently and cost effectively manage your home. The Charlevoix Public Library brings to town a Placeshifting Fair from 4:30-6:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Aug. 18.

The Charlevoix community offers many resources and services to help homeowners monitor their house on smart devices which will save money and protect home safety. Representatives from the city, mobile device companies and utility companies will share their knowledge on ways to prepare and monitor your house whether in town or at a distance. Attendees will have an opportunity to talk to many different vendors about how they can secure their homes and learning different techniques to help make their home safer.

The fair vendors will concentrate on ways to prepare homes for winter including ways to monitor homes from afar. The vendors also will share techniques to save money on cable and telephone services and share how to secure important documents and access them remotely. Whether you are a year-round or summer resident of Charlevoix there are new methods and devices that can make your house safer and "smarter."

For more information about this or other offerings at the library, visit them at charlevoixlibrary.org.

Annual Senior Picnic and Health Expo scheduled for August 18

EAST JORDAN — The 36th annual Senior Picnic and Health Expo will be from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 18, at the Harvest Barn Church, 210 Lake St., East Jordan. The picnic and expo is sponsored by the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging.

The picnic/expo gives seniors, their families and prospective buyers an opportunity to view available goods and services from area businesses and organizations that they may not have been previously aware of before the gathering.

Along with the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging there is an extensive list of vendors who will attend the expo. Vendors such as Tender Care of Gaylord, Cumfurf Keepers, Hospice of Northwest Michigan, Jordan Balkema Elder Law Service, True North Community Services and many others will be on hand to answer questions and display products for attendees.

Jason Allen will pay tribute to U.S. veterans and door prizes will be awarded at 10 a.m.

Tickets are $8 for non-seniors and $5 for seniors and are on sale at area senior centers and at the Commission on Aging office.

For more information, call (231) 237-0103.

Charlevoix Library now offers 3D printing

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Library now offers 3D printing to its patrons. The goal is to give patrons access to the most up to date technology possible and encourage creativity by bringing custom designs to life. Three dimensional printing has grown from something reserved for wealthy do-it-yourselfers to a field that has many affordable options. The printers offer library patrons a chance to use a technology that is soon becoming mainstream.

Two 3D printers and a 3D scanner were purchased. The Ultimaker 2 features a top resolution of .0007 inches and a massive build plate of 9x9x8 inches. It is known for its reliability. The Makerbot Replicator 2X has two nozzles so it can print in two colors. The Makerbot Digitizer is a 3D scanner that will scan parts up to 8x8 inches and is accurate to .076 inches. This allows post scan editing with ease and has options to export to print. The charge for any print under 10 grams will be $1. One printer is currently being housed in the Michigan Room display case and will be printing daily in the afternoons.

To learn more about 3D printing, attend a demonstration or upcoming class. The introductory program will give an overview of the printing process, what is possible, how it works and how to find and send print files.

Classes are scheduled for the following dates:

— From 2-3 p.m. on Aug. 25

— From 6:30-7:30 p.m. on Sept. 9

— From 3:30-4:30 p.m. on Oct. 7

— From 3:30-4:30 p.m. on Nov. 11

All classes will be in the computer lab. Students under 13 should be accompanied by an adult. Please pre-register online at charlevoixlibrary.org or call (231) 237-7340.

The printers are made available to patrons by a generous donation from the Leo S. Guthman Fund.

For more information, visit charlevoixlibrary.org or call (231) 237-7340.

Phil Pratt organ recital to benefit the Christ Episcopal Church scholarship fund

CHARLEVOIX — Phil Pratt, Christ Episcopal Church minister of music, will present an organ recital at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 20, at Christ Episcopal Church, 200 State St., Charlevoix.

The program will have a mix of music that will give an eclectic touch to the performance. Music ranging from the traditional arrangement of J. Stuart Archer's "Londonderry Air" to Scott Joplin's "Entertainer" to a toccata on "Amazing Grace" will be just a few of the pieces played during the recital. A reception will follow the recital in the parish hall.

Pratt has recorded a new CD of the music he will play at the recital and copies will be available for purchase for $15, which will be donated to the Christ Episcopal Church Scholarship Fund.

Pratt is the organist at Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix, and at Chapel on the Hill in Seminole, Fla. He formerly served 14 years as organist at Heartside Ministry, an outreach ministry to the poor and homeless population of Grand Rapids. Each December during that period, he gave an organ concert commemorating the anniversary of the opening of the Heartside Chapel. He produced several CDs and a DVD featuring some of the favorite selections from his many years of organ concerts.

Pratt received his Ph.D. in mathematics from Michigan State University in 1971. He was on the faculty of Grand Valley State University for 33 years, teaching both mathematics and computer science. Pratt served for eight years as department chair and he has published more than 75 computer science textbooks.

In addition to the Heartside Anniversary concerts, he has given several other concerts over the last 30 years, including dedication recitals on several newly installed organs. His 2015 concert is the 50th organ concert in his career. A frequent performer in the Cyril E. Barker Memorial Music Festival in Grand Rapids, Pratt feels the festival is especially meaningful to him, since "Cy" Barker was one of his organ teachers and also a good friend.

Community note: Paws parties will benefit Charlevoix Area Humane Society

On Saturday, Aug. 29, people from all over Northwest Lower Michigan will host dinner parties, inviting their friends to come to a benefit for the Charlevoix Area Humane Society. The parties can be themed, fancy or just a potluck. A number of area restaurants also will be hosting parties with special dinner rates with a portion of the bill to benefit the Charlevoix Area Humane Society.

Guest should be informed ahead of time that the dinner is a fundraising event, and at some point during the dinner parties, the host will solicit a donation from each guest. Party starting times can be varied; however, at 8 p.m. all participants are invited to a grand afterglow party at the Charlevoix Country Club's historic Shanahan Barn. At the Afterglow, there will be desserts prepared by the best area restaurants and desserteries in Northern Michigan. A tally and celebration of the fundraising results will be conducted at the party with cocktails and dancing to the live swing dance music of the Pine River Jazz Band.

To register your party, call (231) 582-6774.

New fence safeguards students' garden at Charlevoix Elementary

CHARLEVOIX — Second graders at Charlevoix Elementary School no longer need to worry about the deer eating their garden. This summer, thanks to Site Planning's design and work, as well as Charlevoix Area Garden Club's contribution, a new fence was built around the school's two vegetable gardens.

In the spring of each year, second grade students in Krista Jarema's and Nicole Sterret's classes plant vegetable gardens. Teachers, volunteer parents and garden club member Jan McKay tend the garden over the summer. When September comes, the incoming second grade class enjoys harvesting peppers, zucchini, beans, tomatoes, peas, kale and more. They also share the produce with other students in the school cafeteria and the local food pantry.

The garden teaches integrated units which can include science, math, reading, writing, and service learning. Hands-on projects such as this create powerful learning opportunities for the individuals involved.

Poker run to help local vets

The Charlevoix Elks Lodge Post No. 2856 will host the seventh annual V-Twins for Vets Poker Run and Pig Roast on Saturday, Aug. 22. All motorized vehicles are welcome. Scooters will have their own route and other vehicles will make a 5 hour run around the beautiful Torch Lake.

Event registration begins at 10 a.m. at the Charlevoix Elks Lodge, 104 Mason St., in the Beacon Center behind Subway. Costs is $30, which includes poker. There will be one winner for every 9 riders. A pre-event will be held at 11:30 a.m. at Odmark Pavilion, which includes a veteran honor, blessing of the bikes, and the singing of the national anthem by Jessica Dominic. The public is welcome to attend. Bikes leave downtown Charlevoix by police escort at noon and return around 5:30 p.m. for the evening events which include a pig roast, live and silent auction and live music. Non-riders are welcome to attend the evening events including the pig roast, live and silent auctions for $15. All proceeds benefit local veterans including the Northwest Michigan Honor Flight and Northwest Michigan Hospice We Honor Vets program.

St. Mary's senior high youth group present free concert

August is National Immunization Awareness Month

CHARLEVOIX — August's arrival marks the final days of summer vacation and sets the stage for a new school year. August is also National Immunization Awareness Month—a perfect time to catch up on your child's vaccinations to ensure protection in the year ahead.

Keeping up-to-date with vaccinations is vital to the health of the community, said Dr. Joshua Meyerson, Medical Director at the Health Department of Northwest Michigan.

"School-age children are at risk of illness, and they can further spread disease to their families and other community members—including babies who are too young to be fully vaccinated, and people with weakened immune systems," Meyerson said. "Those who don't receive recommended vaccines are vulnerable to vaccine-preventable diseases, which can be severe and life-threatening. Every dose of every vaccine is important to protect your child and others from infectious diseases."

Child care settings and schools are more susceptible to outbreaks of infectious diseases due to close contact of students. Immunizing students against preventable diseases will help keep them healthy and in school. Today's childhood vaccines protect against serious and potentially life-threatening diseases, including polio, measles, pertussis or whooping cough, meningitis, and chickenpox.

Vaccination is a safe and effective way to prevent children from contracting these diseases, and will reduce the prevalence of serious diseases for future generations.

Meyerson also reminds parents and guardians about the recent change in Michigan's school immunization requirements. While medical waivers may be issued by physicians, those who want to claim a non-medical waiver for their child must receive education regarding vaccination and disease through their local health department.

Parents are encouraged to schedule an immunization appointment with their child's physician, or call the Health Department at (800) 432-4121 for both vaccination appointments and waiver education. The Center for Disease Control's recommended vaccination schedule is viewable at cdc.gov/vaccines/schedules, or visit the Immunization Action Coalition at vaccineinformation.org for more information.

To learn more about immunizations and other Health Department services, visit nwhealth.org. The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality healthcare, address health problems of vulnerable populations and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan raffles UM vs. MSU tickets

CHARLEVOIX — Hospice of Northwest Michigan invites the community to participate in a Raffle of the Rivals. The event supports Hospice of Northwest Michigan. The raffle tickets are for two tickets to the University of Michigan vs. Michigan State University game on Saturday, Oct. 17, at the Big House and includes a $500 Visa gift card. The game tickets are for seats located at Sideline 1, Row 4, Seats 9 and 10, right next to the tunnel. Each ticket or chance to win is $50 and only 250 tickets are being sold.

Raffle hopefuls can grab a friend and even split the ticket price. One person gets the Gift Card and the other the Tickets. There are no real losers as all the proceeds of the ticket sales go to Hospice of Northwest Michigan. So buyers can feel good about buying a ticket as it will make a difference.

The winning ticket drawing will take place on Sept. 17, at 1 p.m. at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. Raffle purchasers do not need to be present to win. Contact Amy Wieland, Executive Director of Hospice of Northwest Michigan at (231) 547-7659 for more information or if you are interested in purchasing a ticket.... just don't wait too long to be a part of this fun opportunity to support a local nonprofit organization that directly impacts our local community, Wieland said.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, community based hospice, serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. For more information, call (800) 551-4140.

Irish Boat Shop links up with Charlevoix bike share program

CHARLEVOIX — Irish Boat Shop in Charlevoix recently began hosting a bicycle depot as part of the Bike Share Charlevoix program.

"We thought it was really a great idea," said Jack Hodge, vice president of Irish Boat Shop. "When (Bike Share Charlevoix director) Michelle Rick-Biddick explained the program and asked us to become a host depot, we were happy to be a part of this program. The bikes are wonderful and available to our customers and the community on a daily basis. We are really excited."

Irish Boat Shop, with a Charlevoix location at 13000 Stover Road, also went one step further and became the first "Gear Shifter" sponsor for the Bike Share Charlevoix program.

"They have kindly purchased an additional new Revolution bike for the program," Rick-Biddick said.

Hodge added, "We just thought it was the right thing to do and hope more people will contribute to this fantastic program."

Bike Share Charlevoix offers bicycles for free use on a daily basis with a valid credit card and driver's license. Along with Irish Boat Shop, locations offering bicycles include the Charlevoix City Marina and Charlevoix Municipal Airport.

"You can become a 'Gear Shifter,' 'Spokesperson' or even a 'Big Wheel' by donating to the city of Charlevoix Bike Share Program. We need funds to help keep the program sustainable and continue to make this program free to the public," Rick-Biddick said.

The program has a website at www.bikesharecharlevoix.com bikes on our Facebook page and check out the free bikes throughout the season," Rick-Biddick said.

Charlevoix Cinema III opens smoothie window

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - allen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — A new smoothie stop in downtown is offering a juicy, healthy alternative to moviegoers and pedestrian traffic.

Cinema Smoothie, which opened in mid-June, is the newest venture by Luther and Mary Kurtz, and offers a variety of smoothies through a walk-up window at the movie theater.

The concept for the smoothie stop didn't require a major renovation because the movie theater already had the space and window to operate the business.

"We had the window and space, the only challenge was deciding what to do with the it," Mary said.

Originally they thought of offering ice cream, but the Kurtz's said there are already plenty of ice cream options in Charlevoix, but there are less smoothie options.

"Most of our ideas come from things we like and feel we need in the area," Luther said. "I like smoothies, and wanted to add that healthy option. We decided it is something we can do."

It's not just Kurtz's who like having the healthier option. Moviegoers seem to enjoy having smoothies as an option over carbonated beverages, said Terry Osterhout, manager of Charlevoix Cinema III.

"People coming to the movies like our smoothie option," Osterhout said. "People are interested and smoothie sales are slowly growing."

The smoothie window is open daily from 11 a.m.-9 p.m. and customers get a choice of fruit, liquid and sweetener when creating their personal smoothie.

Osterhout said they hope offering smoothies will attract more of the passing pedestrians and cyclists in downtown.

"We hope our smoothie window will bring more people who utilize the area biking and walking trails to the downtown," he said. "Smoothies are a healthy change when you're out and about enjoying the day."

Belvedere head pro to play 100 holes in a single day

Marty Joy to play 100 holes of golf in one day to raise money for the local junior golf program.

CHARLEVOIX — Belvedere head pro, Marty Joy, is set to shoot 100 holes in a single day to raise funds for the Charlevoix County junior golf program. This will be the 10th time Marty has dusted off his niblick, mashie and blade putter hickory clubs from decades ago and played in this fundraiser.

Supporters of youngsters learning golf, pledge funds for each hole Joy completes and each dollar is crucial to the success of the popular local junior golf program, said Dean Davenport, program director.

Money brought in from the event goes into the junior golf operating funds and enables the program to send selected youth to the week long golf camp at Ferris State University. There has been 120 young golfers who have received these scholarships over the years. The money also helps purchase season passes at the "Munie Course" for selected youth, Davenport added.

"Marty really is extraordinary," Davenport said. "His efforts are important. The funds that are contributed to the program because of this event changes lives. Golf teaches honesty, integrity and responsibility. These attributes are important for life and are implemented through the individual's game. Nobody is judging. Nobody is watching. It is all up to the player."

Joy will start his marathon at 6:30 a.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 17, and is expected to finish around 4 p.m.

"I'm hoping to shoot somewhere in the 70s for each 18 holes" Joy said, who has shot as low as 74 with hickory clubs during competition and has finished once as a champion and several times as runner-up in national events.

"I will be wearing 1920s era garb and only hope it isn't too hot. If it is, that might be the biggest challenge. I will be motivated by the thought that the game I love will continue to be made available to young people in the Charlevoix area," Joy added.

Spectators are welcome to watch Joy take on the 100 hole challenge. Those wishing to make a tax-deductible pledge for junior golf can call Joy at (231) 547-2611 or Dean Davenport at (231) 547-6433.

Local foundations accepting grant applications

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation invite area nonprofit organizations, educational institutions and municipalities to submit grant requests to put local charitable dollars to work in our area.

Grant applications to support arts and culture, education, the environment, community and economic development, health and human services, recreation and youth are available by calling a local community foundation office. All applicants must call to discuss their proposals in advance. Eligible nonprofit organizations must serve residents of Charlevoix County or Emmet County and work to enrich or improve life for local residents. The deadline for submission is Thursday, Oct. 1. Applications will be reviewed by community members and the youth advisory committee members and recommendations will be reviewed by the respective Boards of Trustees.

The community foundations accept contributions from donors and then use a portion of the income earned from the investment of these gifts to help foster positive change in the area. In this way, donors' contributions meet community needs.

To apply for a grant or for more information, call or email your local community foundation program officer. In Charlevoix County, call Maureen Radke at (231) 536-2440, maureen@c3f.org. In Emmet County, call Sara Ward at (231) 348-5820, sward@phsacf.org.

World class jazz flautist to perform in Charlevoix

Ali Ryerson

CHARLEVOIX — A world class jazz flautist is coming to Northern Michigan in August. Ali Ryerson, will perform on area stages from Tuesday, Aug. 18, through Sunday, Aug. 23. She also will offer a master flute class to some local musicians.

On Aug. 18, Ryerson and young local musicians will gather at 3 p.m. at the Christ Episcopal Church on State Street, in Charlevoix, for her class. She also will perform with the Northern Michigan Flute Choir at 7:30 p.m. during the final performance of the Charlevoix City Band's summer concert series. Ryerson also will offer a flute master class in Boyne City for Brandon Ivie and his flute players from the Boyne City area. She will perform at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 19, at the Gazebo in Boyne City. From 12:30-1:30 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 20, she will perform with her trio at the Bidwell Plaza in Petoskey. Ryerson also will be offer another flute master class in the upper level of the Carnegie building for area flute players from 2-3 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 20.

On Thursday evening, Ryerson will join with a new progressive jazz happening on the third level of the East Park Tavern. Ryerson will be the headline performer in Pennsylvania Park after a week of jazz has taken place throughout Petoskey area venues. The Pine River Jazz Band will play at 6 p.m. to open her 7:30 p.m. performance on Friday, Aug. 21.

Ryerson will close out her whirlwind tour of Northern Michigan at 10 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 23, by performing at the Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix during its 10 a.m. service and then she will finish up her tour with a performance at 6:30 p.m. at Odmark Pavilion in East Park, in Charlevoix, followed by a reception at the Charlevoix Circle of the Arts on Clinton Street.

ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Erber recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with family and friends.

Erbers celebrate 50 years of marriage

Tom and Sue (Battin) Erber of Charlevoix were united in marriage May 1, 1965, in San Francisco, Calif., and celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Thursday, July 30, 2015, at Castle Farms in Charlevoix. The 4 p.m. event was hosted by the couple's children: Ray and Jacque Hahn of Toledo, Ohio; Jeff and Lenore Morgridge of Moraga, Calif.; Karl and Shana Erber of Davidson, N.C. and John Paul and Amy Erber of Bend, Ore., and was attended by family and friends. The Erbers, both retired, have nine grandchildren.

Beaver Island Half Marathon to benefit Beaver Island Rural Health Center

The Beaver Island Half Marathon, 10K and 5K will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 5, during Labor Day weekend. Proceeds will benefit the Beaver Island Rural Health Center.

"Runners tell us this is one of the most beautiful runs most will ever do," said event organizer Tommy McDonough. "The course offers a wonderful variety, good shade, excellent surfaces, and only a few gentle hills. The course will be well staffed with plenty of water stops and support. This will be a run to remember."

Bring your pet with you on the 5K. There will be a prize for the best pet time. Plus, new shirts this year will be performance fabric and a 10K route has been added.

Beaver Island is a popular family vacation destination so runners are encouraged to bring friends and family for a relaxing long weekend.

To learn about transportation, lodging and to plan a Beaver Island visit for the run see the Chamber of Commerce Visitors guide. For more information, visit beaverisland.org.

keep it moving in a positive direction."

For his part, Spencer said he believes Bay

View's mission as a community is in line with his own interests, and that his experiences in city government will lend themselves well to administrative duties for the seasonal community.

"It was just a really good fit both personally and professionally," he said.

As he moves into his new position, Spencer figures he'll spend a fair amount of time learning about the Bay View community's priorities.

"Really my first goal is to get some input from the members and the staff and the board of trustees on where they think the organization should be going," he said.

Once Spencer begins work at Bay View, Docking expects that Stakoe will remain involved with the operation for at least a few weeks to aid in the leadership transition.

Spencer and his family currently reside in Charlevoix, but he expects they'll be relocating to the Petoskey area within the next year or so.

FARM

on the farm, online and at local farmers markets. Before the new items were released, there was the testing period, which involved a lot of tasting, Phillip said.

"It took about six months to develop the recipes," Phillip said. Then the family had to try and taste the products. They gave me feedback from there I was back in the kitchen making the adjustments to what we have today."

The testing has paid off. Demand for their new products has increased online sales and sales at the local farmers market. Keeping up on supply has caused Phillip to turn away some private catering jobs to keep up with orders.

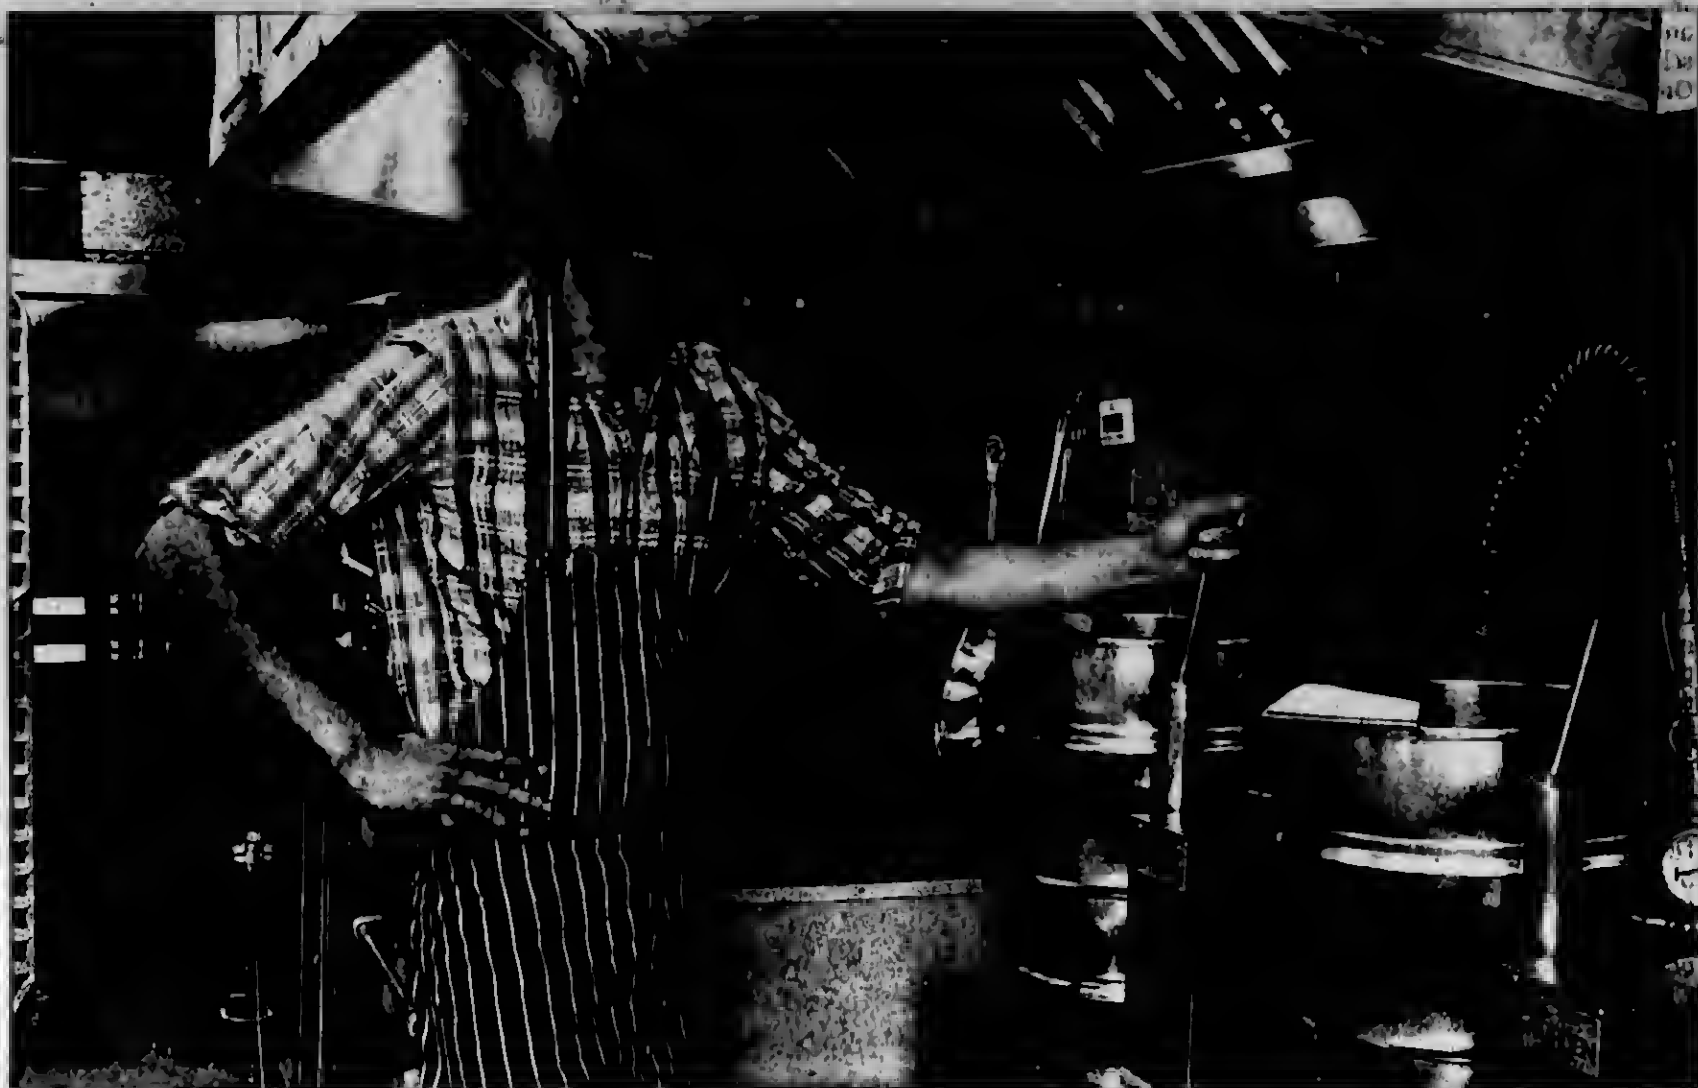

"Overall everything is moving," Phillip said. "As sales increase more people turn for more product and that keeps us busy."

Phillip's Australian meat pies are one of the products the couple always sells out at area farmers markets, and his Australian recipes combined with locally sourced ingredients make their farmers market booth a popular stop in Charlevoix, Petoskey and Boyne City. From selling their bread at local farmers markets to teaming up with local farms, and adding a point of sale location on the farm the Munday's are looking forward to even more in the future.

"Our goal is to make the farm an agri-tourism stop in Charlevoix, where can offer tours and dining," Amber said. "We want to build our relationship and business within our local community."

Artists North Art Center is one of the local groups who has utilized Parsons Farms in their events.

"Harwood Gold makes a good partner for our monthly art walks," said Jennifer Carroll, local artist at the center. "They are local artisans themselves, who are dedicated to the buying and working with the local community."

Harwood Gold also will team up with Dhaseler Farms on Aug. 22, for one of the newest and growing pleasures in Michigan during the summer — an extravagant, multi-course, very local, very seasonal dinner, cooked by a talented chef right on the farm.

Sure, people could just go to a local restaurant, but for a real farm fresh food experience paired with a down under flair, the upcoming Four Course Harvest Dinner takes the table to the farm, rather than the other way around.

The menu, which is still being planned because Chef Phillip wants to make sure he has the freshest and most locally sourced food to serve.

"You don't want to lock yourself into a menu and then order in the product because it was not available," Phillip said. "Then it is no longer local, farm to table and you lose that community feel. There are many local farms that have good people with artisan skills in the area that have good products to sell. You just have to look for it and that is what I hope people will see from this dinner."

The four-course dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m. with hors d'oeuvres and 7 p.m. is dinner. There will also be live music and dancing following the meal.

"We hope people will also go to their favorite local vineyard and bring a bottle of wine to pair and share with the meal," Amber said.

"The dinner will be held at the Dhaseler Events Barn, 15794 Paddock Road, in Charlevoix.

Tickets for the dinner are $75 per person and can be purchased online at blackcatconcerts.com.

Features Michigan landscapes.

"Pastels are very versatile and allow me to use bright colors to develop texture and detail in my drawings," Wein said.

Wein said she has been coming to the art fair since 2006 and loves Charlevoix.

"It is so beautiful here," Wein said. "It is such a good show. The people who put this together are very good and really strive to make it a valued experience for artist and visitor."

Art Fair committee members and volunteers spent the day in East Park working to facilitate operations. The many who volunteer do so because they are convinced that the Waterfront Art Fair is important to Charlevoix in attracting visitors to our community for the day and is important to our students all year long, said Mary Ann Chew, treasurer of the Art Fair committee.

"All the money we raise goes to keep Charlevoix students exposed to the arts in school," Chew said.

and the St. Marys Cement brownfield redevelopment plan.

"They were a big help guiding us through that process with them," Center said.

The board also heard from Ken Polakowski about progress of the south side beautification project.

Polakowski said the wild flowers and new trees were looking good, but hoped that in the future the board would consider looking at creating an easement for more plants and trees moving farther south along U.S. 31 toward the township border. The planting easement is only a suggestion because it would take approval from area property owners, Polakowski said.

"I think just a few tweaks along the bicycle path will make the area more welcoming," Polakowski said. "If the board would consider creating a planting easement in the future that could help."

Charlevoix Township Board of Trustees will meet again at 7 p.m. on Sept. 14, at township hall, 12491 Waller Road.

Red Cross upcoming blood drives

PETOSKEY — The American Red Cross urges blood donors to give in the final weeks of summer to help prevent a blood shortage. Blood donations often decline in August as final summer vacations are planned and back-to-school activities ramp up. On average, during the summer months, about two fewer donors give blood at each Red Cross blood drive than what is needed.

Donations are needed now to help ensure blood is available for patients in need. Donors with types AB, O negative, B negative and A negative blood are especially encouraged to donate. Plasma from type AB donors can be transfused to patients of any blood type, as can type O negative blood. Type B negative and A negative blood can be transfused to Rh-positive or negative patients. These are the most in demand blood types and are in constant need.

To make an appointment to give blood, download the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcross-blood.org or call (800) RED CROSS — (800) 733-2767.

Upcoming blood donation opportunities:

— Central Lake: Noon - 4:45 p.m. on Aug. 17, Grace

Community Church, 1817 S. Main St.

— Cheboygan: Noon - 5:45 p.m. on Aug. 18, Knights of Columbus Hall, 7915 S. U.S. 27

— Charlevoix: 10 a.m. - 3:45 p.m., on Aug. 20, Charlevoix Area Hospital, 14700 Lakeshore Drive — Petoskey: 11 a.m. - 3:45 p.m. on Aug. 20, St. Francis Parish Hall, 513 Howard St.

— Pellston: Noon - 5:45 p.m. on Aug. 24, Pellston High School, 172 N. Park St.

— Petoskey: Noon - 5:45 p.m. on Aug. 24, Epsilon United Methodist Church, 8251 E. Mitchell St.

— Boyne City: Noon to 5:45 p.m. on Aug. 31, St. Matthew Catholic Church, 1303 Boyne Ave.

All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver's license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years of age or 16 with parental consent, in some states, weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements.

Charlevoix showcasing skill position speed at fall camp

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-1343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Your eyes aren't deceiving you if you think the Charlevoix football team looks faster at the start of this year's spring camp than they have in years past.

Fresh off a successful 6-4 season and its first playoff appearance since 2009 last year, Charlevoix entered fall camp on Monday looking to build on that momentum with what is one of the most athletically gifted Rayder teams in a while.

That team speed is most evident in the backfield, where Charlevoix will lean on a stable of running backs that includes two all-state sprinters in Ben Boss and Jared McLean, another explosive track athlete in Malcom Williams, and a baseball player known for his quickness on the basepaths, Hunter Cox.

"I really like our speed in the backfield with Jared and Malcom and Ben," Charlevoix coach Ron Bindi said. "Ben came up big time for us last year when (Sam) Hovie went down with an injury, and Malcom and Jared also came up from JV and played well for us in the last few games as well."

"We lost a few guys, but all the guys we have coming back have varsity playing experience, and they all showed the kind of speed and athleticism they have on the track and in other sports. I think we're in really good hands."

There's speed on the outside as well for Charlevoix, as a talented receiving corps led by tight end Austin Putman adds a vertical dimension to the Rayders' inverted veer attack.

"We've got three or four guys who we feel are weapons if we can get the ball in them in space, and a guy in Austin who demands a double-team from most defenses," Bindi said. "That allows us to create matchups that we want, and opens up the defense."

"If we can get people out in space and create those one-on-one matchups, it opens up our entire offense, including the inside running game."

Several Rayders say the increase in team speed already has had an impact on the intensity levels during the season-opening two-a-days.

Charlevoix's Hunter Cox gets the handoff from Forrest Noirot and prepares to hit the hole during the second session of the Rayders' fall camp football practice on Tuesday in Charlevoix.

"It really makes it feel more game-like, because you've got guys like Malcom and Jared who are always going 110 percent and are pushing everyone to keep up," Boss said. "Everyone is really working hard and the quality of our practices is higher because no one wants to be left behind."

That speed and intensity carries over to the defensive side of the ball, where the Rayders' secondary returns intact from last season's unit that held opponents to six points per game in six Rayder wins and came on strong at the end of the season.

"All the speed we've got in the secondary really makes a difference because it frees up the rest of the defense," Charlevoix quarterback and line-backer Forrest Noirot said. "With the secondary flying around the field and moving to the ball so fast, it gives the linebackers and the line more confidence to make plays."

Charlevoix does have several questions to answer coming into the season if it wants to improve on last season's six-win mark.

The Rayders must replace four starting offensive linemen, as well as the talented Hovie and quarterback Nate Moon, who was a strong and steady hand at the rudder of Bindi's veer offense last season.

Charlevoix also needs to get healthy, with Boss and several other players missing the start of practice while still recovering from injuries suffered in the spring and summer.

Most importantly, the Rayders have to avoid complacency coming off a successful campaign last year.

"We've got a lot of people talking about how good this team was last year, and how good we're going to be this year with kids coming up from an 8-1 JV team, but the truth was we only beat two teams with winning records last year," Bindi said. "This team has the potential to be that kind of team, but we've got a lot of work to do to get there."

"It really all comes down to the kids, and the work they've put in this offseason. Are they going to get big-headed and be satisfied with what they've already done, or are they going to keep working hard and keep fighting to improve? The answer to that question is going to say a lot about how we do this season."

Belvedere head pro to shoot 100 holes in a single day to benefit junior golf program

CHARLEVOIX — Belvedere head pro, Marty Joy, is set to shoot 100 holes in a single day to raise funds for the Charlevoix County junior golf program. This will be the tenth year that Joy has dusted off his niblick, mashie and blade putter hickory clubs from decades ago, and played in this fundraiser.

Supporters of youngsters learning golf, pledge funds for each hole Joy completes and the money is crucial to the success of the popular local junior golf program. Money brought in from the event goes into the junior golf operating funds and enables the program to send selected youngsters to the week-long golf camp at Ferris State University. 120 have received these scholarships over the years, and helps purchase season passes at the "Munie Course" for selected youngsters.

"Marty really is extraordinary," said junior golf program director Dean Davenport. "His efforts are important. The funds that are contributed to the program because of this event changes lives. Golf teaches honesty, integrity and responsibility. These attributes are important for life and are implemented through the individual's game. Nobody is judging. Nobody is watching. It is all up to the player."

Joy will start his marathon at 6:30 a.m. on Tuesday Aug. 17, and finish around 4 p.m. that evening. "I'm hoping to shoot somewhere in the 70s for each 18 holes" said Joy, who has shot as low as 74 with hickory clubs during competition and has finished once as a champion and several times as runner-up in national events.

"I will be wearing 1920s era garb and only hope it isn't too hot. If it is, that might be the biggest challenge. I will be motivated by the thought that the game I love will continue to be made available to young people in the Charlevoix area," he added.

Spectators are welcome to watch Joy take on the 100 hole challenge. Those wishing to make a tax-deductible pledge for junior golf make contact Joy at (231) 547-2611 or Davenport at (231) 547-6433.

Belvedere head pro Dennis "Marty" Joy II is preparing to shoot 100 holes of golf in a single day to raise money for junior golf programs in Charlevoix, starting on Aug. 17.

Visitors enjoy evening with local artists

CHARLEVOIX —

About six miles south of Charlevoix on U.S. 31 is Innwood corner where local artists from the area have created a mecca for a variety of the arts. On Aug. 7 and 8, the second of four scheduled Artists North Art Walks were held, which gave visitors a chance to meet with local artists and see their works on display at Artists North Art Center, Bier Art Gallery and Wind Ridge studio.

Art walks showcase a variety of local artists, demos, studio tours, and orchard walks; and allows visitors to walk from gallery to gallery, enjoy music, refreshments and snacks.

Artists North broadens the definition of "art" to include any skill-sets that cultivates and inspires creativity and personal growth — through art-istry, sustainable agriculture, and craftsmanship. This includes; agri-arts, culinary arts, visual, sculpture, gardeners and landscaping, performing, musicians, glass artists, blacksmithing, metal working, wood, textile, photography, talent, film making, dancing and more, said Ray Bier, founder of Bier Art Gallery.

Paintings from artist Glory Wood on display at the Artists North Art Center next to the Bier Art Gallery and Pottery Studio south of Charlevoix on U.S. 31. Wood and many other local artists take part in the Artists North Art Walks throughout the summer.

Ceramic artist Rex Benson, with two of his dragon creations, was one of the artist who gave demonstrations on Aug. 8, at Bier Art Gallery and Pottery Studio. Benson has been creating three dimensional clay cartoons for more than 30 years. His creations have been exhibited and sold in dozens of shops, galleries and at countless artfairs across the country.

Your Child's Well-Being Comes First.

A round of check-ups before school starts

A child who starts the school year in good health has a much better chance of succeeding.

A new school year means big changes for the little ones. Help them cope with these stresses by making sure that your children are healthy and in top shape at this important time of year.

Hearing. A Sense That Should Not Be Neglected

One of the most common birth defects in North America is hearing loss. Three babies out of a thousand are born with permanent hearing loss. These days, tests provide auditory screening for children as well as newborns. Hearing is a truly priceless sense and many learning experiences can be compromised in a child with an auditory deficiency. Indeed, repercussions on speech, language, education, or even social integration have been observed. Early detection and treatment of hearing loss is therefore very important for a child's development.

Beautiful Teeth For Life

Parents play a vital role in the health and hygiene of their children's teeth. Even though prevention should start at home with good eating habits and daily teeth cleaning, regular check-ups at the dentist are nevertheless necessary from a very young age. Remember, healthy gums are equally important as healthy teeth; although cavities are a threat, gingivitis, an inflammation that can lead to periodontitis, can severely affect the gums. Oral health problems can have repercussions on a child's quality of life; therefore, parents must work with the dentist to help care for their children's teeth.

Open Your Eyes!

Visual communication between parents and children is vitally important and begins the moment they are born. Throughout a child's life, more than 80% of his or her education will include the acquisition of knowledge through vision. After nine years of age, the nervous system is no longer malleable enough to develop appropriately and any sight defects can become permanent. This is why healthcare organizations and various professional guidelines recommend that parents have their children's eyes examined by an optometrist according to the following schedule:

1. At six months of age;
2. At three years;
3. Before starting school;
4. Once every year or two, from the age of 6-18, or more often if there is a problem.

Chiropractors Also Care For Children

According to a study regarding chiropractic care of children younger than 18 years of age, musculoskeletal problems are the cause of 40% of consultations, prevention counts for 24%, headaches, 7%, middle ear infections, 5%, and other types of problems such as colic, asthma and bedwetting, 23%. Prevention represents a large number of consultations that involve children under the age of 4, in cases where the treatment of musculoskeletal problems increases with age. Spinal manipulation is by far the most common treatment offered by chiropractors, followed by exercises, soft tissue treatments and posture and nutrition counselling.

Infrastructure improvements?

City council considering its options

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The exact cost to the City of Charlevoix for emergency water main repairs during the past winter still needs to be tallied, but it is expected to be more than $500,000, according to city staff.

"I will be surprised if we are lower than last year," said Department of Public Works Superintendent Pat Elliott.

The aging Infrastructure in Charlevoix is an ongoing discussion with city council and staff about what options they have to prevent further frozen mains during the winter months.

"These are things you have been dealing with the last couple of years," said City Manager Mark Heydlauff to council members. "We've identified roughly 14 blocks of city streets that have the worst issues with frozen water lines."

Under each street identified is 4-inch cast iron pipe, which is expected to be 90 years of age or older and some are only buried 3 to 4 feet deep, Heydlauff said.

The plan to replace the aging water mains also will include upgrades to the storm water, sewer lines, streets and curb and gutters, but Heydlauff said there needs to be a plan to make bond payments for the $6.2 million improvement costs when the city moves forward.

"We need to look at this a few different ways to fund this," Heydlauff said.

Young house rebuilt; original stonework retained

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Park Avenue has its share of Earl Young houses that draw visitors and onlookers to the area, but lately 304 Park Avenue is turning heads.

The home, which has retained Young's original stonework, had the inside almost completely removed and is being remodeled, but the main head turner has been transforming the historic home in Charlevoix with a thatched roof.

Michael and Liz Seitz, who live in Houston and also own Applecore, bought the property and imagined the house with a different roof.

"Everyone agreed the inside of the house needed to be remodeled, but I kept seeing the house in my mind with a different roof on it," Michael Seitz said. "I saw a round, flowing roof. I saw a mushroom house. What I always got out of the mushroom feeling, which is a romantic feeling."

See YOUNG HOUSE, page A9

The former detached garage was turned into a small chalet. A spiral staircase made from natural timber from the area leads from the upper level to the master bedroom in the new chalet-style home.

Marching in a new direction

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix High School Marching Band has already been gearing up for another season. About 20 students spent approximately 24 hours for the past week learning the music and memorizing the steps to their marching formation.

In addition to nine new incoming freshmen, the band also is welcoming its new director, Tom Harder. He is replacing longtime band director Gary Stutzman, who retired in June.

"I'm real excited to be part of the program here in Charlevoix," Harder said. "The students are great to work with and I look forward to the start of the school year."

Harder will focus on growth and development during his first year as the new director, he said.

Spencer: Bay View 'a good fit for me'

(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The City of Charlevoix will be without a city planner after Aug. 28. Mike Spencer, 40, is leaving his job with the city to be executive director of the Bay View Association in Petoskey.

"My education and experience is a good fit for the executive director position," Spencer said.

Bay View is essentially a small city with around 445 homes, 10 commercial properties, utility infrastructure, numerous committees, a governing board of trustees with governing rules and procedures so it is very similar to local government, Spencer added.

"I was looking for a leadership position in Northern Michigan and Bay View has given me that opportunity, which I am very thankful for," Spencer said.

Spencer can be credited with helping complete some major projects during his tenure as city planner in Charlevoix.

Spencer helped draft and adopt a new Land Use Master plan, draft and adopt a new Parks and Recreation Master Plan and helped complete a rewrite of the new zoning ordinance, all of which were out of date when he started with the city in 2007. These accomplishments did not come without challenges, he said.

"The main challenges we faced with land use plans and ordinances were trying to balance property rights and development

East Jordan's oldest living Rotarian

John Smith celebrates landmark 100th birthday

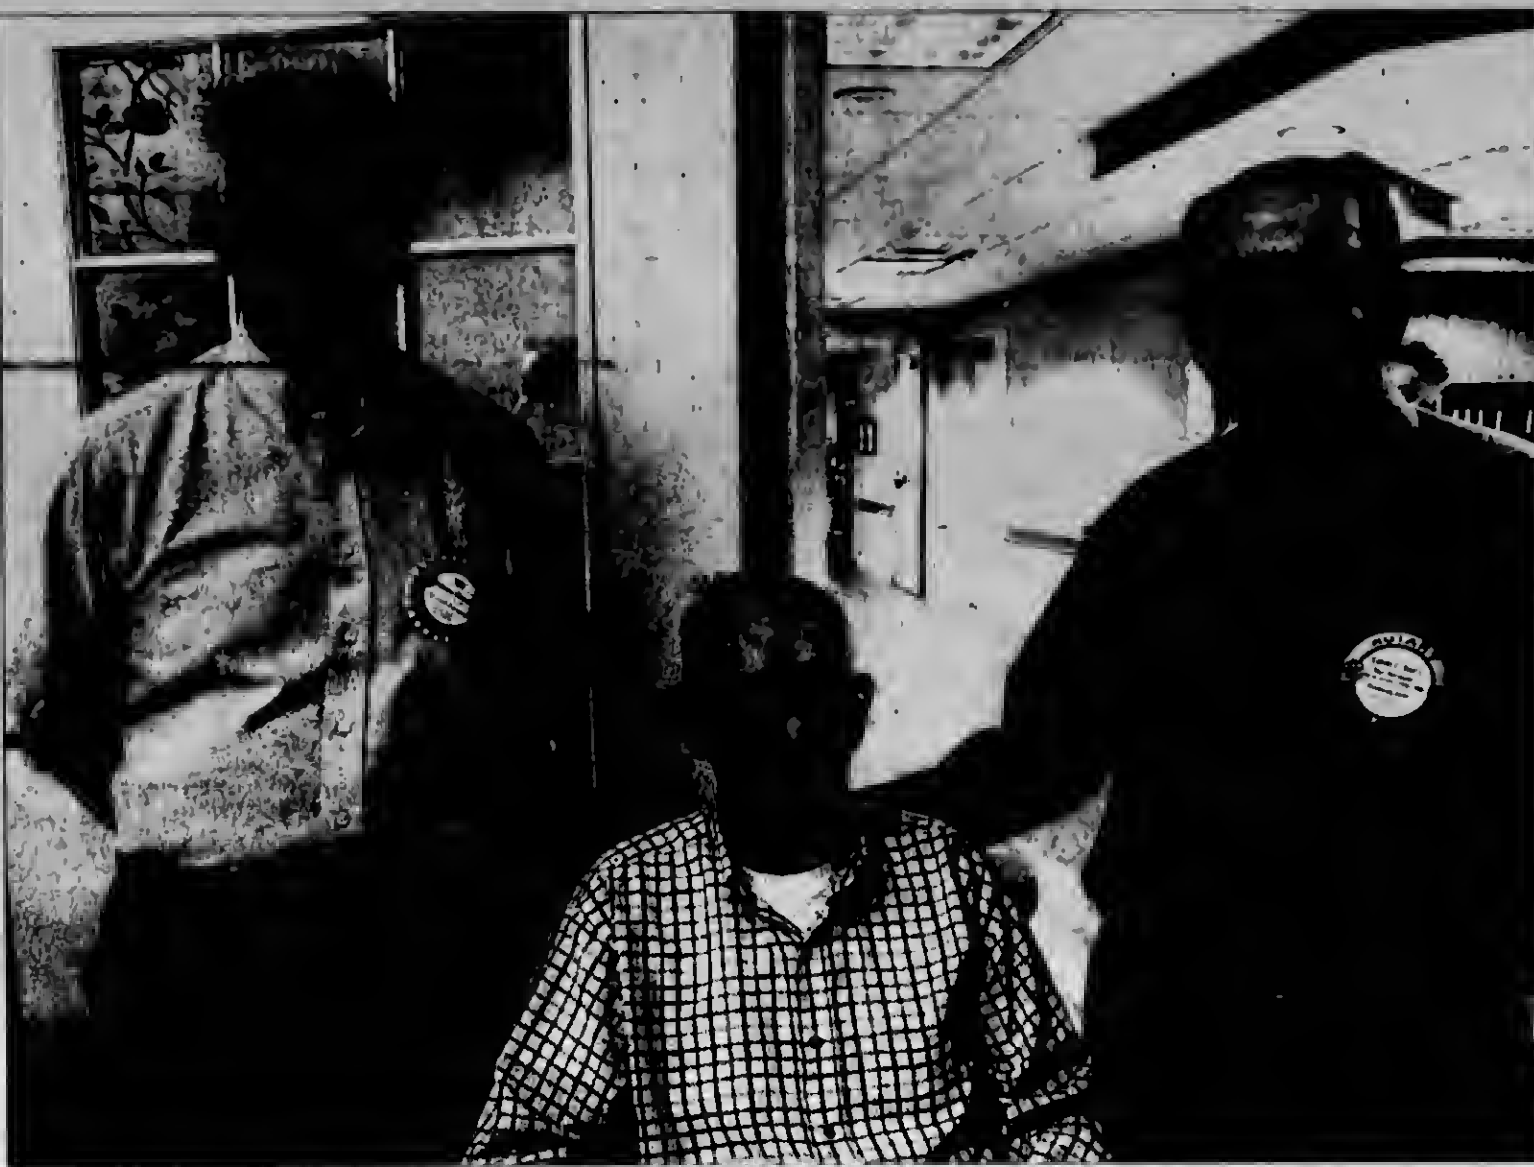

NICOLE SEYMOUR
Special to the Courier

EAST JORDAN —

Lovingly referred to as "the oldest living Rotarian" by fellow club members, The East Jordan Rotary Club celebrated a milestone birthday with fellow member John Smith this past week.

Smith, who turned 100 years old on Aug. 11, was given a celebrity style birthday party at Grandview Medical Care Facility in East Jordan. At the reception Smith greeted guests at the door and posed for pictures as family and friends waited in line to wish him a happy birthday and give thanks for all he has done within the community.

Most noted for his generous spirit and service to education, the luncheon showcased his many medals of honor and pictures taken during his two-years of service in the military during WWII. A dedicated veteran, Smith went overseas with the Third Division to Italy in 1943 and served as a Platoon Leader in the 1st Company until May of 1945 when the war in Europe ended. With his love for education still at the forefront of his life, Smith returned to Michigan after the war where he picked back up where he continued on in his career in education. An educator for 37 years, Smith worked as teacher, principal, guidance counselor, and attendance officer in the Charlotte area and East Jordan. During this time Smith also worked on remodeling homes and selling them, which helped him earn the funds that he used to implement and build several programs geared towards helping kids in need.

One of his most notable works, the East Jordan Rotary Opportunity Scholarship Fund at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, began in 2004 with an initial gift in excess of $500,000. Smith established the fund to support East Jordan High School graduates interested in furthering their education at the collegiate level. Smith's vision for this fund was to not just help those that made top marks in school, but to serve those with financial needs that may not be able to seek a college education otherwise.

"John showed tremendous vision when he established the East Jordan Rotary Opportunity Scholarship Fund more than a decade ago," said Chip Hansen, president of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

Hansen further explained that to date the fund has provided 78 scholarships to 39 students.

"Because the scholarship is a multi-year award it continues to support students throughout their collegiate careers," Hansen said.

The East Jordan Rotary, which celebrates its 76th year this year, is very thankful to Smith as he has helped them and others in the community enrich their lives through the continuation of good works.

"Over his 100 years,

John has demonstrated his service to his family, friends, community, country, and the Rotary," said Rotarian Edwin Drenth. These many works and love for the community were on display at the luncheon, as were many thankful friends and family members to be able to share such a momentous birthday with such a community focused and driven man.

Living on the Farm

Waking up on a farm is often determined by the crow of a rooster. Living on this farm is not the same as living on a large dairy or cattle farm, this is more of a homestead farm, not on a large scale, but big enough for those who live there. I am one of the people who reside here, along with my lovely wife, Rachel, her parents, siblings, and a lot of small livestock. The morning starts with one of four roosters that thinks it is an alarm clock, like the alarm clock in college when you set the time it never sounds at the set time, which is the first rooster. His alarm setting is for 3:30 a.m., and that is not when we get up. The second rooster thinks the alarm is at 4:30 a.m., the third rooster 5:30 a.m., and the fourth rooster 6:30 a.m., his alarm is the closest to the actual time we get up. Unfortunately, unlike an alarm clock, you can't hit snooze with a rooster.

SCOTTY

I think the roosters have worked out a plan amongst themselves on how they can drive me — Scotty — crazy in the shortest amount of time. George, Bob, Bill and Mr. Mayhem — the roosters — I am sure have had a poultry meeting of the minds, and some mornings I can say their plan is working.

We have established the morning wake up call, it is time to get up with enough time to wipe the sleep out of your eyes, get the farm clothes on and get out starting the morning chores.

First the ducks get their water, feed and they seem to thank you with a few quacks. After that, we move on to the chickens, not just one pen of chickens, seven pens, you start by moving the pen the length of the pen to give them fresh ground on the 40 acres to keep them happy. Feed and water, then collect part of the morning breakfast — delicious fresh eggs — not all the chickens lay eggs some are meat chickens, and yes they taste very good, fed with non GMO feed.

No, that is not the end of the chores, there is also two milk goats, eight pigs, eight turkeys, 14 rabbits and two horses to take care of. They all require feed, water and love; even the pigs, which actually are the cleanest of all the animals. There was a steer named Desi but he went in Antrim County Fair for Auction to become, well you know, awesome steaks for the grill. I know that sounds a bit harsh, but this steer raised with love, good feed, will provide several nutritious meals for this family and we know where the meat came from, not some factory farm that is brutal to their animals, and fed with GMO feed and steroids.

Once we've finished with the animals that is the end of the morning chores. Next comes breakfast and then off to work a job for the day, then back in time to maybe get some dinner and start a night project. Projects can involve building more pig pens, chicken pens, working on equipment to keep it maintained or repaired. Then night chores do it all over again and end the night with the satisfaction of a hard day's work where we retire to our beds to wait for the four rooster alarm clock to start the process all over again, tomorrow.

Lessons from Lake Michigan

Lake Michigan is a large and complicated system. A system that is a set of interconnected parts. The larger the number of parts, the more complicated a system is. Large systems are slow to change and difficult to control or predict.

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

The Lake Michigan system consists of thousands of kinds of living things, both plant and animal. Each of the living things are a food source for some other living thing, and each of them has the capacity to reproduce at many times the replacement rate. New kinds of organisms are regularly introduced, both by accident and by design. Every new organism shifts the activities of many or most of the others already there. Such a system is commonly described as "not just more complicated than we think, it is more complicated than we CAN think." The management of Lake Michigan is genuinely an impossible task.

As humans we are usually interested in only one or a few of the parts of such a system. We want fewer Zebra mussels, or we want more salmon or more whitefish. It is important to understand that we cannot change one part without somehow changing all the other parts. And we should not expect change to occur quickly. A large, complicated system changes slowly, however as much as we might want to speed it up, it is like attempting to change the course of a gigantic ship with only a small rudder. Changes that we might cause may not even be obvious in our lifetime. Stocking somewhat more salmon will not change much if all the hundreds of kinds of creatures that the salmon depend on do not change.

I am not suggesting that we should do nothing, because our efforts will be unimportant, but only that we should not expect any rapid changes.

What lessons are to be learned from Lake Michigan? Here is one. We as a society are at the beginning of a serious teacher shortage for our public schools. We can view our society and its institutions as a large and complex system. As a result, it will be slow to change. And, changing one part of it will not solve the problem.

Teaching, especially public school teaching is not a revered or valued activity in our present society. The impending shortage of teachers is a product of societal neglect. It has taken years of that neglect to produce the beginnings of a severe teacher shortage, because so many teachers stay at their job for many years. What can we do to alleviate some of that neglect?

Somehow, we must alter the societal idea that teaching is for those who cannot manage anything more complicated. Respect for the profession is absolutely necessary, and currently lacking. The terrible things that are said about teacher's unions are only one example. Financial compensation for teaching lags well behind other equally essential social tasks. The preparation of teachers with mentoring and exacting educational programs is absolutely required. And public support for teachers throughout a career is necessary. Some mechanism for career advancement also is important.

More than 40 percent of new teachers abandon the profession in less than five years. That by itself, suggests that something is wrong with the way we treat new teachers.

Such change will necessarily be slow. It took decades of neglect to get us here, and it will take decades of repair to correct it.

That is one lesson from Lake Michigan. We had better get busy, because without robust public education we are pretty much doomed. On-line education will not save us.

One additional lesson from the natural world. If your Norway maple trees are beginning to prematurely lose their leaves, do not be alarmed. It is not the product of drought and watering trees won't make any difference. The culprit is the black spot disease of Norway maple leaves. It harms the tree not at all, it just results in the early loss of leaves. Do not worry. It is quite natural and nearly harmless except for appearance.

Charity golf tournament raises $1,240 for Hospice of Northwest Michigan

Editor:

The board of directors and staff of Hospice of Northwest Michigan wish to thank everyone who participated in or otherwise supported the 2015 Petoskey-Bay View Country Club 18 hole ladies league charity golf tournament on Tuesday, Aug. 4. Jodi Step organized this great group of ladies and collectively they chose Hospice of Northwest Michigan as their charity of choice. Their giving spirit and generosity raised more than $1,240, with all of the funds going to Hospice of Northwest Michigan's unfunded patient needs.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan not only provides physical, spiritual and emotional support for patients and their families during and following life-limiting illnesses they also support the entire community by offering their grief and loss support free of charge for any type of loss. Thank you for supporting us and making life moments happen. Your generosity is much appreciated!

Environmentalist offers insight on library presentation

Editor:

More than 100 people attended a presentation by Dr. Ed Timm titled "Oil Spill in the Great Lakes? How Safe Are the Pipelines?" at the Charlevoix Public Library on Aug. 4.

Dr. Timm, a retired Consultant to Dow Chemical's Environmental Operations Business and senior scientist, recently prepared an engineering opinion for the lawyers at FLOW (For Love of Water) on corrosion and structural issues with Line 5 pipeline.

Line 5 pipeline runs 645 miles from a pipeline hub in Superior, Wis., through the Upper Peninsula, under the Mackinac Straits where it splits into two pipelines, down lower Michigan then crosses the St. Clair River in its final destination at a refinery in Sarnia, Ontario. The pipeline crosses at least 45 waterways and 23 counties.

Dr. Timm explained that while the pipelines were well-built using state of the art technology in 1953, 62 years of corrosion, stress from "buffeting effects of strong currents in the Mackinac Straits, loss of protective covering, structural impacts from zebra and quagga mussels on the pipeline exterior, have taken their toll. The flow of oil through the pipelines has been increased 80 percent from its original recommended carrying capacity, further stressing the aging pipes. And while Enbridge, Inc., owner of the pipelines states the lines are safe and in excellent condition, they are under no obligation to release results of their inspections to Michigan regulatory agencies or the public. Enbridge's 40-year-old Line 6B pipeline ruptured in 2010, spewing over a million gallons of oil into the Kalamazoo River watershed. The fatal flaw in Line 6B was known to Enbridge management for five years without triggering their repair process, and once the line ruptured, they continued to pump oil through the broken line for 17 hours, assuming they were receiving false alarms on the drop in pressure. Dr. Timm concluded that the Mackinac Straits pipeline poses an unacceptable risk to our Great Lakes and that risk increases exponentially with each passing day.

The presentation was sponsored by Friends of the Jordan River Watershed WATCH, Inc. (Water Air Team Charlevoix), NMEAC (Northem Michigan Environmental Action Council), FLOW, Oil and Water Don't Mix, Don't Frack Michigan and Friends of the Boyne River. Jordan River Arts Center displays Plein Air exhibit

On Sunday, Aug. 9, the opening of the Plein Air painters exhibit, "An Up North State of Mind," opened in East Jordan.

A crowd of artists and friends enjoyed viewing creative works conveying the theme of the exhibit. Over one hundred works in oil, acrylics, watercolor, pastels, and drawings in the gallery by artists who have taken the challenge and recorded the beauty of "Up North."

For the first time prizes were awarded by the generous donations of Lynne and Mason Rosenthal. Trish Morgan was awarded the Best of Show for an oil, "Little Traverse Lookout."

"My approach to painting is a quest to take the ordinary subject matter and render it memorable," Morgan said.

The Best Interpretation of the Theme for an oil, "Cherry Season" was awarded to Paula Cordes.

"Painting has caught me to see beauty everywhere," Cordes said. "Creating has enhanced my powers of observation. This artistic journey fills me up and makes me happy."

Honorable mentions went to Margaret Bachman-Moran, Prudence Barber, Jan Colman, Mike Colman, Roddy Dammeyer, Joan Genigk, Karen Kimmell. Other artist participating are: Linda Boss, Ann Carolan, Beverly Eby, Margie Guyot, Judy Heiniwski, Cindi Jackson, Sheldon Johnson, Mary McClellan-Koaches, Trish Morgan, Jeannie Putman, Ron Theisen, and Beatrice Wollan.

Jurors for the exhibit were Nancy Carey and Carol Ross.

"Walking through this exhibit is like driving up and down all of our roads in Antrim and Charlevoix counties... I found many beautiful snap shots of our world we have chosen to live in," Ross said.

Concurrently a sister exhibit is being held at the Charlevoix Circle of Arts. The Jordan River Art Center exhibit will run through Sept. 13. The art center is open from 1-4 pm. Tuesday through Sunday. Other times can be arranged by contacting Margaret Moran at marg@gomoran.com.

Peter "Madcat" Ruth

SummerFolk Concert Series continues with Peter 'Madcat' Ruth

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library continues the SummerFolk Concert Series that runs from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on the last Monday of each month.

Peter "Madcat" Ruth, whose Grammy-winning repertoire of styles include blues, American roots music, folk, jazz and world music will be the featured performer on Aug. 31. He also sings and plays ukelele, guitar, high-hat, jaw-harp, penny-whistle, kalimba, banjo and other folk instruments from around the world.

Lee Murdoch will round out the series on Sept. 28. Murdoch's music is grounded in the work song tradition from the rugged days of lumberjacks and wooden sailing schooners.

SummerFolk celebrates local folk artists with an evening of music. The featured performer kicks off the evening with a 45 minute concert, which is followed by an open mic session; an opportunity for the public to share talents.

Open mic sign-up begins at 6 p.m. the night of the concert, and is limited to five performers. For more information, call (231) 547-2651.

Lady Eagles to give second reading of by-law change

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Fraternal Order of Eagles club 1583 located in Boyne City will hold the second reading of the proposed by-law change at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 24, at the Boyne City Eagles club. The By-Law change was voted on by the Grand Aerie at their last convention and reads:

The Board of Trustees has approved a change to Section 2.2 of the Ladies Auxiliary rules and regulations. This change takes effect immediately and requires a change in all Auxiliary by-laws. It reads: "All dues shall be paid to the Local Auxiliary annually, in advance as prescribed by Auxiliary by-laws. They shall become due and payable on May 31, of each year."

This issue will be discussed at the next meeting. Any comments or questions regarding this action may be presented at the meeting.

Keweenaw Excursions offering fall color tour

CHARLEVOIX — Keweenaw Excursions is offering a three-day fall color tour excursion that will take passengers up the St. Mary's River, through the Soo Locks and into Lake Superior, aboard its 110-foot Keweenaw Star.

The trip runs Monday, Sept. 28 through Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The trip begins Saturday morning at the State Docks in the village of DeTour, in the eastern Upper Peninsula. From there, the Star will travel north to explore the hundreds of tree-filled islands of Potagannissing Bay, through the North Channel of Georgian Bay and over to the Canadian town of Bruce Mines, to view the lighthouse at McKay Point. From there, it is west, past Sister Rock Lighthouse and through the narrows of the Wilson Channel, then over to the north side of St. Joseph Island, which should be ablaze in fall colors. Just past the Shoal Island Lighthouse, the Star enters the St. Mary's River in the Middle Neebish Channel and heads north toward Sault Ste. Marie. The evening concludes with a trip through the Soo Locks and out into Lake Superior, before returning to Sault Ste. Marie for the night.

The trip runs Monday, Sept. 28 through Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Sunday offers options for passengers. The first is to board a bus for trip to the Great Lakes Shipwreck Museum at Whitefish Point in the town of Paradise, including a stop at Tahquamenon Falls State Park. The bus tour option is an added $62 per person and includes transportation, admission to the museum and state park, as well as lunch. Space is limited to the first 57 passengers.

Or, those wishing to stay and explore Sault Ste. Marie can take in attractions such as the Museum Ship Valley Camp, Tower of History and the viewing platform for the Soo Locks, for up-closing viewing of the transiting freighters.

On Monday, the Star begins her voyage south down the St. Mary's River, with passage through the famed Rock Cut and back to the dock in DeTour.

Cost for the excursion is $475 per person, based on double occupancy ($550 per person, single occupancy) and includes transportation, two night's accommodations at the Kewadin Casino in Sault Ste. Marie as well as a gaming package, and most meals. Space is limited and reservations are required by calling (231) 237-9365.

The Keweenaw Star offers a full cash bar with snacks, as well as a climate-controlled main cabin, full dining room, walk-around main deck and open-air top deck.

Operating since 2000 Keweenaw Excursions is owned and operated by brothers Jason and Kraig Funky. The company originated in Houghton, in Michigan's Upper Peninsula and moved to Charlevoix in 2009. With a capacity of 130 passengers, the Keweenaw Star offers a range of cruises from mid-May through mid-October, including sunset tours, sightseeing trips and multi-day light-house and ship-watching cruises. The boat is also available for private charters, for events such as corporate outings, weddings, rehearsal dinners and reunions.

A block of rooms has been set up at the Cedarville Lodge in the town of Cedarville 20 minutes from the State Dock in DeTour, for $79 for Friday and Monday evenings, for those needing additional accommodations. Be sure to ask for the Keweenaw Excursion block when making reservations.

Good Samaritan celebrates 25 years of service

ELLSWORTH — Good Samaritan services in Ellsworth will celebrate its 25th anniversary of service on Friday, Aug. 21 and Saturday, Aug. 22.

The anniversary celebration will be from 6-9 p.m. on Friday at Tapawingo in Ellsworth. There will be a wine and cheese reception that includes domestic and international wines, and select domestic and international cheeses. The evening is a fund raiser with silent auctions and drawings and offe-and iced tea also will be served. There will be live music all evening with Rustic Heart and Stephen Guthrie. The evening will be catered by A Matter of Taste.

On Saturday afternoon, the public is invited to a free picnic from 1-4 p.m. in the Ellsworth Park. The picnic is to thank the communities for their support of Good Samaritan since its founding in 1990. Afternoon activities include: A Picnic at the Pavilion — burgers, hot dogs, salads, beverages, ice cream; live music with 45 North — original folk and soft rock — and karaoke; kid's activities — bounce house, yard games, horse shoes. There is no charge but donations are gratefully accepted.

Good Samaritan offers an extensive number of programs and services as well as a large collaborative network of governmental agencies, not for profit organizations and charitable institutions. Their flagship service is the Food Pantry and Resale Shop. But there have been several additions such as Sammy's Shoes and the Moms and Tot Center. There is also a baby closet which offers maternity clothes, baby clothes, diapers and other baby items and an Earn While you Learn program that teaches parenting and life skills.

All proceeds will benefit families in need through Good Samaritan Family Services. For more information, visit the goodsam.org.

The steel goes down in 1892

CHARLEVOIX
HISTORICAL SOCIETY
Bridging our past with our future

In the spring of 1892, the Chicago and West Michigan Railway began the final phase of constructing the railroad into Charlevoix from the south. The line from Charlevoix to Petoskey had been completed in December the previous year. In late May, the railroad began to lay tracks along an elevated rail bed that had been built the length of Ferry Avenue in front of the Belvedere Club. The club had been forced to cede a narrow strip of this lakefront land as right of way. The resorters grumbled, but there wasn't much they could do about it.

Shown here, the Charlevoix and West Michigan Railway is using what was called a swing derrick that picked up a rail from the flatcar at right, then swung it around 180 degrees, where workmen guided it down onto waiting wood ties spaced along the ground at left. Almost completed rails on ties appear silhouetted beneath the derrick in the middle of the photo. Gradually the apparatus advanced toward the upper channel, and the last rails were laid by the end of the month. "THE STEEL ALL DOWN!" crowed the Charlevoix Sentinel newspaper on June 1. "The Iron Horse Creeps In From The South Saturday! A continuous line of steel now connects Charlevoix with the rest of the world!" And so it did for the next nine full decades.

Not too long after the last train departed for good in 1982, the Belvedere Club went to court to fight a heated battle to get its land back, and succeeded. The rails are long gone, but the rail bed has never been removed. Today it can be glimpsed through the hedges that now line the road on the left as one heads south along Ferry Avenue.

National Day of Service and Remembrance needs volunteers

PETOSKEY — In observance of the National Day of Service and Remembrance, the public is invited to join the Em United Way's Day of Caring on Friday, Sept. 11. Hundreds of local volunteers along with thousands of other groups statewide and millions of people nationwide plan to pay tribute as part of the single-largest charitable service effort in the U.S.

The goal of the National Day of Service and Remembrance is to bring Americans together in the same spirit of compassion, unity, and service that existed after the 9/11 attacks. Day of Caring for Charlevoix and Emmet counties focus is local nonprofit organizations and senior citizens. Day of Caring is an opportunity for people in the community to get involved and volunteer.

Volunteer registration is now open for Day of Caring projects. Volunteer teams will complete various tasks for nonprofit organizations, schools and government agencies as well as home maintenance for senior individuals. Projects might incorporate painting a hallway, building shelves, organizing a pantry, weeding a garden, raking leaves and more.

This year, the need is great in the Charlevoix area for senior individuals struggling to stay independent in their homes. Project requests received via the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging include painting, minor home repairs, cleaning and window washing, weeding and tree trimming and much more.

Available projects are listed online through Char-Em United Way's Volunteer Connections at charemunitedway.org.

Volunteers can search keyword "Day of Caring" to find a project that fits their time, skills and passion. Click on "Respond to Need" and volunteers will be contacted by United Way staff with details to complete the volunteer's match. Or register as a volunteer by calling (231) 487-1006.

Reach to Recovery: personalized support at Charlevoix hospital

EMILY PADGETT
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — A volunteer-based outreach group has retrained volunteers at Charlevoix Area Hospital in order to help breast cancer patients from diagnosis through recovery. The American Cancer Society's Reach to Recovery program prepares breast cancer survivors to help support current patients in various ways.

According to the American Cancer Society's webpage dedicated to the Reach to Recovery program, people enduring the emotional tolls of a cancer diagnosis could benefit from personal contact with someone who has been through the experience themselves. While they do not provide medical advice, volunteers can help provide up-to-date information, provide encouragement and help patients through obstacles during their treatment.

Karen Hadley, director of chemotherapy-infusion center at Charlevoix Area Hospital said the process of matching a volunteer with a patient is very confidential. A patient may express interest to their surgeon, nurse or the infusion center staff member. Next the coordinator would be informed of the patient's interest. The coordinator then matches the patient up with a suitable volunteer. The volunteer and patient then form a schedule to meet for 4-6 sessions together.

Hadley also mentioned that right now they have about 4-5 volunteers available and that is a pretty good number for the program. However, anyone interested in becoming a volunteer for this program can visit the American Cancer Society's website. On the website is a gray box with a link for more information.

Hadley praises the program because of the healing that can take place for each person involved.

"(A survivor) can continue their own healing by giving help back. It can be very therapeutic," Hadley said.

For information on the Reach to Recovery program, visit cah.org or call the Infusion Center at (231) 547-851. Also visit the American Cancer Society's website at cancer.org, and choose "Find Support and Treatment."

INFRASTRUCTURE

Heydlauff presented council members with some options to pay for infrastructure improvements. Options included a water rate study, use of infrastructure millage, road millage and an additional millage.

"Some options are better than others and a mixture of options is probably best," Heyd-lauff said.

Improvements could begin in the spring of 2016 once paying back the bonds is in place.

Mayor Gabe Campbell believes residents will approve a ballot initiative.

"If we have another winter like the last two, I think people would run to the polls to raise the millage to pay for this," Campbell said.

Councilwoman Shirley Gibson echoed this statement Wednesday. "I'm open to (something) maybe the voters can weigh in on at some point."

She said they need to set a long-term goal and they have just begun to discuss the payment options. There has been no definitive decision made yet.

"I think before we do other projects in the city we need to focus on infrastructure," she said.

Approximately 20 students took part in a weeklong band camp at Charlevoix High School. The camp was organized by new band director Tom Harder, who took over in June for retiring director Gary Stutzman.

"I'm looking to grow the program with a re-introduction of the jazz bands, while developing the students' abilities in marching and concert seasons," Harder said.

Before landing the new gig in Charlevoix, Harder taught band at Concord Academy Boyne. The 23-year-old instructor, is a high school graduate of West Ottawa High School in Holland, and holds a bachelor degree in music education from Central Michigan University.

"Tom comes up through a fine high school and college program," Stutzman said. "He has the background and vision that will carry Charlevoix's band program well into the future."

A successful band tradition dates back to the 1940s with Max Smith, who also created the City Band; and continued on with Clarence Odmark. The reputation for excellence in Charlevoix can be seen in the multiple plaques and trophies on the walls of the former middle school. Stutzman sees that tradition continue and expects it to grow with Harder as the director.

"Under Tom's leadership I see the band program growing stronger," Stutzman said.

Harder is looking forward to his time in Charlevoix and he wrapped up his first band camp with the Rayders on Aug. 14.

"We have good student leadership, which I hope to build from," Harder said. "I am very proud of the band's work ethic this week. Many of their peers spent those hours sitting on a couch binge-watching something on Netflix, but this very dedicated core of students showed up and made something of value together that the Charlevoix community will be very proud of."

YOUNG HOUSE

was everything flowed and there weren't any straight or strange lines. It all flowed and was rounded and that is how I saw this house when I bought it."

Seitz may have wanted a flowing, round, smooth, mushroom to top for the house, but there was one dilemma — a square foundation.

"The main problem was the house was a square building," Seitz said. "This essentially was a square box and the question was how do you put a round peg into a square hole?"

Seitz, who has an engineering background, worked with Way Builders to come up with different length eaves, attached to the main frame of the house, to build his round, thatched roof.

"The eaves are where the roll comes from around the roof line," Seitz said. "Everything rolls around and it flows like the top of a mushroom. The entire curve comes from the eave design."

Jake Peters, of Way Building Contractors, helped construct the roof line with Seitz's direction. Seitz would use a random length board to judge the hang of the eave as builders constructed the eaves.

"Michael would stand with his stick and tell us to go a little more up or little more down to measure what he wanted, because we had no idea what he wanted," Peters said. "There was no concept of this roof. We were not used to this."

Inside the house a complete remodel, which has opened up the home with an old world, castle-feel interior. He also has added new stonework, which adds Young's use of natural material. Seitz has used rocks buried on the property from the original build in 1918 to build a stone staircase leading to the upper level of the house. Seitz said he is not trying to imitate Young's work, but only build on it.

"We're in synchronizing mode here," Seitz said. "We are letting the natural, local materials and local skill sets work together to complete the house. You kind of end up with what Young ended up with, because he was sensitive to the environment around him as we are also doing here."

The original detached garage which was falling apart also was re-imagined as a little chalet, with the basic idea being a romantic get away, said Liz Seitz.

"Our idea was to make this a cozy bungalow for a couple," Liz said. "The bedroom is cozy and intimate."

The slabs of timber stacked, with each little wedge cut to fit just right make the spiral staircase leading to the master bedroom rustic and old world. Seitz said the rustic look was accomplished by rubbing dirt from the property into the timber, then staining it. The former garage now has a full kitchen, full bath, living room space, which also includes a loft for extra sleep space.

"This could be a place for a couple to have everything they need in one place, but on an intimate scale," Liz said. "We think it is a special place people can enjoy year-round because every season in Charlevoix is magical."

They have worked hard to keep the spirit of Young's home alive during the construction. The couple hopes the community will accept their vision for the home once it is complete.

"A tremendous amount of passion and love has gone into this and we pray that people will embrace it, love it and be inspired by it as much as we are," Liz said.

The Seitz's also have heard concerns from people who feel the house no longer retains Young's vision. The main concern deals with the roof.

"Some don't like the yellow color of the roof, but this will all gray and blend in to match the color of the stone," Seitz said. "The roof will flow together once the thatch turns gray. After it grays the roof will seem to disappear into the stone."

Officials at the Charlevoix Historical Society have remained neutral during the house reconstruction. Officials said they also hear from people who love the look of the house and those who do not.

Preservation and making a house livable is a hard thing to do, said Jacob Thomas, new curator for the Charlevoix Historical Society. One of the biggest criticisms the he has heard also has to deal with the thatched roof.

"What we are hearing is people think the look of the roof is too big for the house," Thomas said.

Thomas who personally likes the house believes some of the interior stone additions that were made inside the home are tribute to Young's design.

"Using original stone found buried on the property to construct the interior staircase to me represents the spirit of Earl Young," Thomas said.

with community values, responsible development and small town character," Spencer said. "Many residents have different ideas of what type of development should be allowed and where."

To overcome those challenges Spencer and others took surveys and involved the public in each step of the process he said.

"We took a lot of time and thought into updating the plans and ordinances," Spencer said. "We have a very forward thinking and intelligent planning commission, who really listened to residents and tried to offer solutions to their concerns."

The new zoning ordinance promotes infill development, gives flexibility in parking requirements, promotes better landscaping, includes a more streamlined review process and promotes mixed use developments, Spencer said.

"The new zoning ordinance allows more flexibility with development, but does not change the small town character and charm of Charlevoix," Spencer said.

The setback and lot size requirements were reduced to allow people

Spencer credited with helping complete major projects in Charlevoix to renovate and expand historic homes. Also the ordinance allows for large lots to be subdivided and subsequently developed, he added.

"We are seeing numerous projects that take advantage of these new requirements so houses are being renovated to improve neighborhoods and new homes are being built to improve our tax base," Spencer said.

Spencer also was also involved in the planning and fundraising of the Lake to Lake Trail and currently is implementing the changes to the nuisance ordinance, which addresses community blight and substandard property maintenance.

"This is a work in progress, but we are seeing results," he said.

Spencer also helped create the Citizens Guide to Charlevoix to update residents on completed and upcoming projects, introduce new staff and provide other information. He helped design and administer the new city website to be user friendly, provide important updates, communicate with staff and submit applications online, all of which he has enjoyed doing for the community.

"I have had a great experience in Charlevoix and this is truly an amazing community," Spencer said. "I plan to stay active as a volunteer and will help train my replacement when they are hired."

City manager Mark Heydlauff is pleased that Spencer has offered to help the city as he assumes his role with Bay View.

"Mike is committed to his community and I certainly appreciate his willingness to help," Heydlauff said.

Heydlauff also is planning to look more broadly at the city planner's position and its responsibilities before seeking a replacement for Spencer. Heydlauff is suggesting a department approach to planning and zoning, economic development and grant administration.

"Since we have the vacancy let's take a step back and look at every aspect before we post this position," Heydlauff said.

Team from Charlevoix hospital to participate in Relay for Life

EMILY PADGETT

Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Participating this year in Relay for Life is Cancer Action Heroes from the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Charlevoix County will host Relay for Life, a longtime fundraiser for the American Cancer Society, on Saturday Aug. 22, at Veterans Park in Boyne City. The kickoff for the event begins at 10 a.m.

Relay for Life is a 24-hour event that is open to the public. Every county in the state hosts a Relay for Life event. Groups from around the county form teams. These teams ask for sponsors and donations from friends, colleagues, and family members. Goodies and crafts are sold as well to raise funds. The teams participate by taking turns walking a track while also encountering events planned throughout the 24 hours. According to the Relay for Life website, people have helped raise almost $5 billion since it was started in 1985.

As part of the Cancer Action Heroes group, Karen Hadley, chemotherapy-infusion center director, said that it will be a huge event, which will help raise funds for more research and that it is the first time Relay for Life will be held in Boyne City right on the water.

"The money raised for research is to find a cure for cancer in our lifetime," Hadley said, displaying the willingness to raise money for the American Cancer Society. They provide literature and programs back into the community, as well.

Some of the most memorable parts of the event are the ceremonies. For instance, at 5:30 p.m. is a survivor ceremony. People can walk a lap on behalf of a family member or friend who survived cancer. Also, at dusk is a Lumina ceremony to honor and remember individuals who lost their battle with cancer. Participants purchase a paper bag to decorate and place a candle into. Those bags are placed around the track and give a glow for the silent walk that takes place in memory of loved ones who have passed.

Participating this year is one particular group, Cancer Action Heroes from the Charlevoix Area Hospital. As part of this group, Karen Hadley, a registered nurse in the oncology department, said that it will be a huge event, and that it is the first time Relay for Life will be held in Boyne City right on the water. Hadley acknowledges, "the money raised for research is to find a cure for cancer in our lifetime," displaying the willingness to raise money for the American Cancer Society. They provide literature and programs back into the community, as well.

Pick them yourself

Picking your own berries is a great family activity. Filling large containers in the farm is lots of fun, but in addition to the necessary sampling of the strawberries, raspberries or blueberries, you're picking. It's a good thing to pick customers aren't weighed before and after their visit to the fields, because it would make all the difference when it came time to pay.

U PICK REVISITED

Why settle for a quick visit to stock up on berries when you can take advantage of this busy time in the countryside to spend a more relaxing day in the great outdoors?

Have fun picking berries then take a break to enjoy a delicious picnic, including, of course, a dessert composed of the fruits of your labor. Local berry producers usually scatter picnic tables here and there around their properties for the benefit of their customers. Others have swings to entertain young children.

If the country setting includes friends or members of your extended family, ask everyone to bring their best berry recipes available to all. It's a fun contest to see who wins this year's prize from Mother Nature.

SOME HAPPINESS TO GO

At the end of your day in the fresh air, don't go home without buying some locally produced goods. Strawberries and rhubarb pie, raspberry jam or chocolate-coated blueberries are a good way to have a hard time choosing.

Pick berries are a great excuse for a family outing in the great outdoors.

Fresh for the pickin'

Closer = fresher!

All chefs will tell you the same thing: nothing is more important than cooking with really fresh produce. And where can you find freshly harvested fruits and vegetables? In public markets, of course.

Market gardeners are up before dawn to provide their customers with fresh products as soon as markets open. Crunchy radishes, bright red strawberries, firm peppers and lots of other treats spread their irresistible charms across market stalls.

Their added flavor is undeniable, whether you eat them raw or cooked, in a salad, as a side dish or in a dessert. So eat as many as you can throughout the summer and stock up your freezer while they're at their peak of freshness. Furthermore, since they're picked when they're perfectly ripe, locally grown fruits and vegetables contain more vitamins than their counterparts, which ripen as best they can during long hours of traveling between the field and the customer. That's why freshness is a big plus for those who care about their health.

Sold directly and without the transportation costs of their distant competitors, local fruits and vegetables are offered at a very affordable price by gardeners who are passionate about their work and who are well worth getting to know about their work and who are well worth getting to know about their work and who are well worth getting to know about their work.

Returning talent has Charlevoix soccer team hopeful for a strong season

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 347-2544
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX -- The Charlevoix boys soccer team has been a consistent presence near the top of the LMC standings for years now, thanks to a strong program starting at the youth levels.

But even by the strong standards set by the program's past accomplishments, 2015 is shaping up to be a notable campaign for the Rayders.

Charlevoix returns all but three players off a team that finished with 18 wins and a share of the LMC championship, and while all three of those graduated players were quality starters, first-year coach Anton Matye has plenty of weapons to work with as the Rayders' season-opening game approaches on Saturday.

"We've got a strong junior and sophomore class that got a lot of experience last season as sophomores and freshmen, and that experience is really going to help that group this year," Matye said. "When you add that large group to the senior core we have, it's a pretty strong mix of players."

Charlevoix has veteran talent all over the field, but the strength of the team is its defense, which grew into one of Northern Michigan's most potent backlines over the course of last season and returns intact with the exception of graduated senior Ryan Joy.

The linchpin of the defense is junior Kevin Pearl, who earned first-team all-area honors last season as a sophomore, but equally as important to last season's strong performance was rising sophomore Danny Nesburg, who worked his way into the starting lineup as a freshman and provided consistent play for Charlevoix.

"Kevin and Danny are similar in that they're both strong and fast, and they have great game sense so they can use their athleticism effectively on the field," Matye said. "They're both great players for us, and we've got a large group of young defenders that saw playing time last year behind them who are ready to step up as well."

Up front, the Rayders lose midfielder/forward Davis LaBelle but return their top two goalscorers in senior Walker Drost and junior Christian Matye, who combined for 48 goals and 33 assists last year.

Drost figures to play more up top this year, while Matye will continue in his midfielder role, and with talented juniors Noah Carson and Graham Kroon also in the mix, Charlevoix's offense figures to be potent once again.

"We've always been a possession team, so our midfield will continue to be the key offensively," Coach Matye said. "Our ability to take passes from the defense, work the ball upfield and create good situations for our forwards will dictate a lot about how good we can be."

"We've got a group that's played a lot of minutes together, and if they can stay focused and continue working as a team, I think we can be as good or better than we were last year offensively."

The biggest question mark for the Rayders is in net, where Charlevoix must replace starter J.J. Wachler after his strong senior season.

First in line for the job is sophomore Jacob Harrod, who saw time in goal as a freshman behind Wachler and has worked hard in the offseason to prepare for the starting role.

"He's new as a full-time varsity starter, but Jacob has been in the program for a long time and he's a very motivated player and a hard worker," Coach Matye said. "He spent a lot of summer going to camps and getting coaching to prepare to play in goal, and I think he's going to be a very solid starter in net for us."

Although Matye is entering his first year as a head coach, he's no stranger to the Charlevoix program, having worked for several years as an assistant. Matye also coached several games last year as an interim coach when head coach Jon Boss was absent.

With Boss forced to step away from the head coaching position to attend to family matters, Matye was the natural fit to take over.

"I'm really comfortable in the job, because I've worked with the players for so long and I've been with the program for a long time," Matye said. "Nothing's really Above: After a strong sophomore season, Charlevoix junior Christian Matye hopes to take the next step as a midfielder in the Rayders' high-scoring attack.

Right: A dynamic threat for Charlevoix offensively, senior Walker Drost looks to exceed his 25-goal mark from last season as the Rayders take the field in 2015.

Charlevoix junior Kevin Pearl led a backline that gave up more than two goals only twice last season, and will be counted on to lead the Rayder defense again.

changing as far as the system or the expectations we've got for the players, so it's been very natural for everyone.

"Obviously, we all wish coach Boss the best and hope the situation gets better for him. I know all of our players on the team are glad to see him on the sidelines when he can be there, and they're thinking about him when we're out there playing."

The talent is there for Charlevoix to contend for a league title and make a deep postseason run, but the competition is equally stacked, as league foes Elk Rapids and Harbor Springs both bring back significant portions of their teams as well and will make the LMC race and the district tournament difficult to win.

"We know we've got 18 regular season games and one district game, and after that, nothing else is a given," Matye said. "We can't take anything for granted, because we weren't the only ones working hard this offseason and we're not the only ones with talent on the field."

"It really comes down to the work we put in and the way we approach the games. If we're focused, we have a chance, but we can't get overconfident."

Charlevoix Golf Club hosts Golf the Day Away

As an end of summer thank you to residents and visiting golfers, the Charlevoix Golf Club will be hosting "Golf the Day Away" on Wednesday, Aug. 26. Golfers will receive unlimited golf rounds of golf for only $10. Participants are encouraged to enter a drawing for a chance to win prizes, including merchandise and free rounds of golf.

1340 MISC. ITEMS FOR SALE

BE A WISE SHOPPER
It's always wise to remember that if an offer sounds too good to be true, it probably is. If you are offered merchandise at an unbelievably low price, check it out thoroughly. A call to the Better Business Bureau (serving Eastern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula) will tell you whether other consumers have had problems with the firm that has offered the merchandise. (248)223-9400. But call the Bureau BEFORE you make a purchase. You'll be glad you did.

New DDA committee will examine Bridge Park building

RYAN BENTLEY

(231) 439-9342 - rbentley@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Possible updates to downtown Charlevoix's Robert Bridge Memorial Park building will be an early focus for the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority/Maln Street board's newly formed facilities committee.

The board approved formation of the new standing committee meeting on Monday. DDA/Maln Street director Annie Doyle proposed a committee be formed to take a closer look at possible update needs for the Bridge Park DDA staff have identified some water leakage issues to be corrected at the building, and building tenants have noted concerns that restrooms need updating.

building, where the DDA leases space to Beaver Island Boat Co., Lake Charlevoix Brewing Co. and Keweenaw Excursions.

DDA staff have identified some water leakage issues to be corrected at the building, and building tenants have noted concerns that restrooms need updating.

Doyle noted that the condition of the building, which dates back to the 1990s, had been generating much discussion at the board level. By designating a committee to explore building upkeep needs and provide advice on them, she said it might help the larger board to continue moving ahead with key management and goal-setting needs.

"That makes a lot of sense to me," said board chairman Dan Barron.

When Barron sought volunteers from the board membership to serve on the new committee, members John Yaroch, Fred DiMartino, Kirby Dipert and Rick Wertz agreed to do so. DDA staff

Cruise to remember tragedy near Charlevoix nuclear power plant

CHARLEVOIX — Each summer, hundreds of travelers stop at the Lake Michigan Shores roadside park north of Charlevoix on U.S. 31, pausing to take in the breathtaking scenery, enjoy a picnic at the tables or rest during their journey.

But the postcard-perfect park also has an untold story many travelers might not know if they miss the plaque situated here — the B-52 explosion tragedy of Jan. 7, 1971.

The Charlevoix Historical Society will offer its annual fundraising Sunset Cruise from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 1, aboard the Keweenaw Star.

The cruise will take place along the Lake Michigan shoreline north to Big Rock Point.

Frey sent to prison for sex crimes against minor

CHARLEVOIX — An East Jordan man was sentenced to spend at least the next seven and a half years in prison on sexual assault and other charges on Aug. 21.

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Allen Telgenhof said Zachary Dustin Frey, 22, of East Jordan was sentenced to serve 90 months to 22 and a half years in prison for having sex with a 14-year-old victim earlier this year. Frey was on probation for a similar charge at the time of these offenses. According to an affidavit filed in the case, Frey used a cellphone that he was prohibited from using while on probation to set up various social media accounts to find and entice young victims. On July 24, Frey pleaded guilty to third degree criminal sexual conduct, using a computer to commit a crime, accosting a minor and violation of the Sex Offender Registration Act.

Frey also was sentenced to serve 48 months to 10 and a half years on the computer crime offense; 24 months to six years on the accosting and 24 months to six years on the Sex Offender Registration Act violation. All of the sentences will run concurrently.

"This prosecution was made possible through the joint efforts of Todd Assante, the defendant's probation agent with the Michigan Department of Corrections, the Michigan State Police Internet Crimes Against Children division in Traverse City and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department," Telgenhof said.

Charlevoix County's Relay for Life raises $23,000

EMILY PADGETT
Special to the Courier

BOYNE CITY — From the cloudy beginnings of the first lap to the cool, sunny morning of the final lap, Charlevoix County's Relay for Life was a success.

Boyne City hosted this year's Relay for Life event. The event took place from 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 22, to 9 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 23, in Veteran's Park. Relay for Life events include a walking track for participants to walk for the entire time period, campfires for teams to rest in and offer additional fundraising opportunities like selling refreshments, and a main tent for announcements and ceremonies. Flags line the track to direct walkers.

Stacia Thompson, the event manager, is impressed with this year's results.

"The community support for the Relay For Life of Charlevoix County is awe-inspiring," Thompson said. "The planning committee, teams and participants worked so hard and put on a fun-filled event. The Relay celebrated 55 local cancer survivors, which was the largest turnout in the event's history. The outpouring of financial support was phenomenal, with almost $23,000 raised for the fight against cancer."

Michelle Reid, a participant and coordinator for the event, gave insight to her experience in this year's Relay for Life.

"As a participant of the Relay event I get to walk around the track and see my planning in action," Reid said. "I get to meet new people, new survivors, new caregivers and I feel so proud to be in the position I am in. I love Relay it is my

United Way says thank you for Stuffing the Bus

Editor:
Dozens of volunteers from many local businesses and organizations helped collect school supplies during Char-Em United Way's eighth annual Stuff the Bus, which will benefit students in Charlevoix and Emmet county schools.

Each year during the back-to-school season, Char-Em United Way collects donated school supplies to distribute to children in need in the Char-Em Intermediate School District. On Saturday, Aug. 15, school buses were parked at the Wal-Mart plaza in Petoskey and the Kmart plaza in Charlevoix, and were filled with items donated by the community that will help students succeed in school.

With assistance from volunteers, Char-Em United Way collected nearly 7,000 items this year. All supplies will go to children in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. The number of students that qualify for free or reduced lunch continues to remain high and 38 percent of households in our area are still struggling financially. The community's support of Stuff the Bus provides a huge relief to these households.

Char-Em United Way would like to thank all the volunteers and sponsors that made Stuff the Bus possible, including Petoskey Wal-Mart, Charlevoix Kmart, WTCM and WCCW radio, Retired and Senior Volunteer Program, Charlevoix Public Schools, and Johnson's Buses as well as many local businesses and individuals.

Supplies have been distributed to schools in the Char-Em Intermediate School District. Students in need of school supplies should ask their teachers about Stuff the Bus supplies. We invite you to join us next August for Stuff the Bus 2016. For more information, visit charemunitedway.org or call (231) 487-1006.

Hospice volunteers ... making life moments happen!

Hospice is an end-of-life-care model that focuses on enhancing quality of life when time is perceived to be short. It involves an interdisciplinary team of doctors, nurses, social workers and bereavement counselors all working together to address the medical, physical, social, emotional and spiritual needs of the patient, family and caregivers. But in many ways, the most integral part of the team – and the most often overlooked – are our hospice volunteers.

Volunteers provide the kind of personal care and comfort that neighbors used to provide without even thinking about it. In fact, volunteers are mandated by law. Organizations that receive hospice Medicare benefits from the government must have five percent of their direct services provided by volunteers. Volunteers provide

HOSPICE OF NORTHWEST MICHIGAN

executive director

non-professional services, but are still required to undergo intensive training, interviews and background checks. Volunteer services vary tremendously, just as any relationship varies between people. Services may include support for patients, respite and support for family members, vigil services for an imminent death, bereavement support, or volunteers might even sing, read, talk, share in watching a favorite show or even help the patient with special projects he or she wishes to complete. Volunteers provide the most fundamental of life's needs, a hand to hold or an ear to listen. It's about showing up and being present that day, that minute, that hour – meeting the patient where they are.

You might think it's difficult to be a hospice volunteer, getting to know someone only to have that someone pass away. But for most volunteers, the experience is rewarding, transformative and life-affirming. Volunteers can learn to view death as part of the continuum of life, learn to understand expectations and to maintain personal boundaries. As a volunteer, you know someone needs you, and at that moment of need, you are providing something no one else can.

Providing hospice care can also help volunteers learn to deal with similar situations in their own lives, when a beloved family member or friend is facing death.

If you're someone who wants to help, but the idea of working with patients is intimidating, there are excellent hospice volunteer opportunities for those who feel uncomfortable with direct patient involvement. You can volunteer for essential roles in administrative, program support or fundraising functions too.

Whether you've had a family connection to hospice care and want to give back, or are interested in learning more about how to support and comfort those in their final days, I encourage you to explore this truly rewarding volunteer opportunity. Just like every member of our community, you have a choice in hospice care and in how you support it.

Visit hospicenwm.org for Hospice of Northwest Michigan's volunteer opportunities in your area.

East Park in the early 1960s

LOOKING BACK...

CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY
Reclaiming our past with our future

This aerial photo of the East Park area was taken during one of the very first Waterfront Art Fairs in the early 1960s. At far left, on Bridge Street, the long rectangular building was the Palace movie theater, now the site of Color Wear. To its right stands Earl Young's tiny stone-clad Applecore building, removed in 2003 to make way for the yacht brokerage and condos there today. Clinton Street once ended at the water, now the site of the harbor master's building. Two much-used shuffleboard courts appear in East Park, not removed until the 1990s. The fishpond holds three raised islands, built on pilings and planted with flowers. The pond nudges into the bandstand area. Behind this stands Neff Bros. grocery store on the Mason Street corner. Mason Street also went down the slope to water's edge. On the corner beyond stands the still lamented Parkside Restaurant, renowned for its whitefish dinners and excellent view of Round Lake out the east plate glass window. At the time, the walkway along the lake was merely a cement sidewalk with no protective railings and a dangerous jog in the middle of which tipsy mariners were known to step straight into the drink after dark. Fortunately, no one ever drowned. The small parking lot in the middle of the 300 block replaced some derelict Bridge Street buildings, and is now the site of J Phillips and American Spoon Foods. At extreme bottom left, on Clinton Street, appears the Novotny Plumbing building, and above it, next to the alley, is the red brick Charlevoix Courier building, built in 1941. Opposite the Courier stands the very long and large Erber Auto Ford dealership and garage. This building and the entire area to its right is now the city parking lot.

Armchair Theater begins the fall season with a Neil Simon play

CHARLEVOIX — Armchair Theatre will present "The Good Doctor" by Neil Simon, based on short stories by Anton Chekhov to begin its fall season at the Charlevoix Circle of Arts. The performance is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday Sept. 13, and a $5 donation is suggested.

These short playlets — filled with affectionate portraits and unending fun — are a composite of two great writers — Neil Simon, considered the top of American comedy playwrights — and the great Russian writer Anton Chekhov, who also was a doctor.

Chekhov said, "the profession of medicine is my wife: theater is my mistress."

Director of Performing Arts, Ruth Willis, has assembled a strong experienced cast that includes Tlin Cox, Hugh Hanser, Nancy Kaulens, Cindy Boss and Deslee Kalser.

Cast member, Nancy Kaulens shared some thoughts about her work in theater.

"Who could turn down the chance to try on the persona of outrageous and hilarious Mrs. Schukin in Neil Simon's comedy 'The Good Doctor?'" Kaulens said. "With Ruth Willis's excellent direction and great casting, it promises to be an evening of laughter. I know, I'll enjoy this show..."

Additional fall productions of Armchair Theatre also will include the Pulitzer Prize play, "The Gin Game" on Sept. 27, and "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" by Ambrose Bierce in October.

New workshop to instruct nonprofits in hiring, firing practices

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation are again partnering to provide a capacity building training for area nonprofit organizations. Nonprofit organizations serving Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are invited to attend "HR for Nonprofits: From Application to Termination," a workshop focused on best human resource legal practices in the nonprofit workplace.

Nonprofit leaders will learn tips on hiring and firing; harassment policies for volunteers and employees; and risk management procedures. In the interest of avoiding legal issues, incorporation of good insurance policies including liability waivers for personnel also will be addressed. Nonprofits will learn how to make their organization stronger and an even more desirable place for employees and volunteers. The workshop will take place at the Charlevoix Public Library from 9:30 a.m. to noon on Wednesday, Sept. 9.

The workshop will be led by Laura M. Dinon, a senior attorney with Plunkett Cooney. Dinon graduated from Detroit College of Law — now MSU School of Law — in 1988 and began practicing in Detroit. She transferred to the Petoskey Office in 1990 and for the past 25 years, has concentrated on representing public employers and nonprofits in all aspects of employment law including labor relations and health care law issues. Dinon's expertise includes the areas of: employee hiring and firing; disciplinary actions; leave, wage and hour considerations; compliance issues; administrative investigations and hearings; and all other employment related issues up to and including litigation. She assists clients with drafting of contracts and policies, as well as implementation, training and interpretation. She is a frequent presenter on employment topics and is a past president of the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce and the Northern Michigan Society for Human Resource Management.

The cost is $10 per attendee and the deadline for registration is Friday, Sept. 4, 2015.

To register, go to c3f.org and click on "What's New," then "Workshops Offered." For more information, call (231) 536-2440.

Dry Harbour Marine celebrates end of summer

CHARLEVOIX — Dry Harbour Marine, a boat dealership in Charlevoix, is celebrating the end of summer and its community collaborations from 2-4 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 29, during its "Great Boat Giveaway Party."

The free party will feature Northern Michigan's own Horton Creek Bluegrass Band.

There will be free food, beverages, refreshments, entertainment and door prizes to win.

"We are excited to be able to collaborate with so many wonderful community businesses. It really shows what a community can accomplish when we work together toward a common goal," said Ariel Mokdad, the marketing director at Dry Harbour Marine. "I think this party is a great way to say 'thank you' to the community, we hope that everyone will join us for an afternoon of music and fun."

Boyne Arts Collective hosts showing of student artists

COURTESY IMAGE

BOYNE CITY — The Boyne Arts Collective will have a showing beginning at 6 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 28, at 210 S. Lake St., Boyne City. The show features the students of June Storm who participated in classes at the Boyne Arts Collective this year.

There will be a wide variety of original art. The Boyne Arts Collective also plans to show the orangutans, giraffes, and pets the students painted.

Children and adults who visit the show will have a chance to name the animals.

Refreshments will be served on Friday evening during the show's opening. The show will run through September.

Participating artists are: Chris Brown, Lea Shea, Barb Robinson, Gaelye Gerrie Boss, Elaine Dettmar, Jackie Wollenberg, Sue Bishop, Judy Feldkamp, Nanette Derkat, Su

Bishop, Terrie Niehaus, Helen Truchan, Bedonna Perish, Jackie Penny, Darla DePompolo, Joyce Newville and June Storm.

This is the last show to be held at this address. The Boyne Arts Collective will be moving to a new and as yet unknown address.

For more information, email perennial28@aol.com. For new address suggestions, call June Storm at (231) 582-1745.

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District accepting applications

CHARLEVOIX — The start of school is just around the corner and there is still time to apply for a handful of openings to become a Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District AmeriCorps member and positively impact area elementary students.

AmeriCorps members have the opportunity to make a difference through literacy efforts, community service projects, volunteering with nonprofits, conducting outreach presentations, improving leadership skills, and much more.

As part of the ISD's AmeriCorps program, members are assigned to a local elementary school to serve as a reading tutor. Applicants must have a positive, patient and encouraging manner while working one-on-one with at-risk students.

The full-time positions are a 10 month commitment and require completion of 1,700 hours of service throughout the 2015-2016 school year. Benefits include a living stipend of $12,100, an education award of $5,645, and single-subscriber health insurance for those who qualify. Members must be at least 17 years of age, have a high school diploma or GED, and be free of any criminal convictions.

The Char-Em ISD AmeriCorps program serves 11 school districts within ISD service area of Charlevoix, Emmet, and northern Antrim counties.

To apply or for more information, visit charemsd.org or call (231) 547-9947.

OBITUARY

Alison Rowe: 54

Alison Rowe, 54. Alison lost her final battle with infection in her legs on Saturday, August 22, at the Meadowbrook Medical facility in Bellaire. She is the daughter of George and Betty Rowe of Charlevoix. The immediate family includes sister, Karen Phillips, brother-in-law Emit Phillips, in Traverse City and their daughter Valerie in Buffalo, New York.

This is a close-knit family and there are many caring uncles, aunts and cousins. Alison was born in Detroit when her family lived in Royal Oak and subsequently lived in New Jersey, New York and Miami, Florida. She was confined by a body cast and a body brace much of her young years so was not able to attend normal schools. She was able to earn a high school diploma through home tutoring and while in school, she played clarinet in the high school band. She had tuberculosis as a child and scoliosis that required steel rods in her back and several spinal surgeries. Later in life, she was diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome and diabetes. She lived exactly half of her life in Charlevoix and spent most of them pleasantly at Pine River Place, in her own apartment. She was often seen cruising the sidewalks of Charlevoix on her little red mobility scooter. In spite of her many problems, she was known as intelligent, even gifted in certain areas and appreciated for her sense of humor. A service to remember her will be held at Charlevoix United Methodist Church at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday, August 29th.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix United Methodist Church.

Bellaire to have 17th annual Harvest Festival

BELLAIRE — The Bellaire Chamber of Commerce will present the 17th annual Harvest Festival from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sept. 26, sponsored in part by Short's Brewing Company and 4Front Credit Union.

Highlighting the Harvest Festival on Saturday, Sept. 26, is a "Brew" Tent featuring Short's Brewing Company, Bee-Well Meadery and Torch Lake Cellars. The stage will have music from "The Mother Brothers," a local Antrim County band, who — according to their Facebook — have a "uniquely designed sound that is engineered to make you want to get out of your seat and dance."

Zany Scarecrows take over the streets of Bellaire where local businesses compete to win the "Best Scarecrow" award. Oz participants are urged to get creative as last year's winners, L&R True Value, took scarecrows to new heights featuring a plumbing job gone wrong.

Other activities include the "craft and flea" market, the Boy Scouts pancake breakfast, a cider pressing, kids' bounce houses — including the super slide — and local food vendors. Take a break from the excitement and explore Bellaire's shops, restaurants and parks.

In partnership with this year's Harvest Festival, Bellaire will be hosting RaceITC's SANDSTORM - Glacial Hills Triple Relay. Teams consist of a 10K runner, a 10K mountain biker and a paddler who goes 4.6 miles. Paddlers can kayak, canoe, stand up paddleboarding - SUP — or surf ski. All skill levels are welcome. For more information about the relay, visit raceitc.com

Root vessel invention conserves water, grows better plants

ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

Keith Mahoney, of Charlevoix, just may be on to something big. It's a big idea of reducing water usage throughout the world and it's accomplished by a little, green leaf-shaped invention.

His patented 6-, 12-, or 24-ounce "HydroRoot" root watering vessels have been designed, developed and field tested. They are certified for organic production. They not only promise to save water, but "they assist in growing greater, more plentiful flowers, fruits and vegetables." Mahoney is excited about the prospect of bringing "HydroRoot" to production and distribution.

"My wife and I initially came up with the idea of a root watering system to solve the problem of watering the plants in our own yard and garden about 5 or 6 years ago," Mahoney said. "We discovered that when plants are top-watered, the water usually reaches only an inch to an inch and a half into the soil beneath the surface."

Once the Mahoneys realized how shallow the depth of water went to reach plants roots, they decided to work on a way to better water their plants. There was a lot of brainstorming followed by a prototype made out of tin cans with holes punched on one side and buried next to garden plants. Pleased by initial results, Mahoney sought to develop a more sophisticated version of the tin can. The new prototype was designed, using a 3-D printer to create the die; a flat piece of plastic was placed on a wood mold and shaped with a heat gun. The side holes were then hand-drilled. The root watering system was ready to test, first in their own garden, then with a professional grower in Florida.

"The results were amazing," Mahoney said. "By placing the vessels next to the roots of the plants and watering them once a day, we were able to reduce the amount of water used from 30 gallons a day to 2 1/2 gallons. Sometimes we added a liquid fertilizer to the water. The plants responded beautifully in comparison to similar plants watered in the traditional method."

An additional result was that, because there was no top watering, plants did not develop mold, and weeds did not grow around them. On slopes there was no run-off or erosion. Mahoney was sure that he now had a method that saved time, money and water... lots of it.

"During a growing season an average household uses half of their water consumption outside, up to 25-40 gallons a day," Mahoney said. "Our premise was that if we saved 27 gallons of water each day, watering the 24 plants in our garden, it was mind-boggling to think how much could be saved on a larger scale. In a USDA study, which followed 15 states in 2013, there were over 6 billion plants sold at wholesale. That would calculate to 856 billion gallons of water that could potentially have been saved."

Implications for his product in drought areas could be significant, he added.

"There are 30 states in drought this year," Mahoney said. "The 'Hydro Root' Mission is: to reduce white water usage throughout the world by providing a simple, inexpensive easy to use device for plants designed for outdoor or indoor use. 'HydroRoot' will improve plant growth and yield with measurable outcomes while providing controlled delivery of water and liquid fertilizer to plant root systems assuring maximum results."

The Mahoneys recently attended the Independent Garden Centers of America convention in Chicago. Held on Navy Pier, the event showcased the most current selection of plants and garden-related products. More than 9,000 stores and/or growers attended for the purpose of ordering their spring inventory. Buyers also were able to scope out the new and the innovative and "HydroRoot" was among them. Approximately 50 companies or individuals like the Mahoneys, were located at the end of Navy Pier showcasing their products to buyers and growers in hopes of attracting attention and getting orders.

"It was a busy, busy place," Mahoney said.

The experience was not what they expected, but more than they expected in a way. They thought they would just be writing up orders, but they soon realized that the convention event was to be an exercise in exposure.

"We met hundreds of owners of some high-end gardening centers from all over the world. It was an introduction to the industry for us. And we received favorable feedback about the 'Hydro Root' system from many of them," Mahoney said.

"HydroRoot," surprisingly, was the only water-saving device at the show. Growers from the drought-ridden states like New Mexico and California expressed a lot of interest, Mahoney said.

"We received lots of favorable comments and were open to any creative criticism that came our way," he said. "Many distributors wanted to pick us up; we were asked to be in three different catalogs, as well as the Gardener's Supply Magazine. NPR also approached us about a piece for their show."

"We originally thought we'd just invent, and then sell, 'HydroRoot,'" Mahoney added.

"Now we realize that it is a process that will continue to evolve."

With many distributors wanting to pick them up, hundreds of order forms passed out, connections made, the promise of orders, and offers for reps wanting to become involved, the Mahoneys are confident that "HydroRoot" will become all they envisioned.

Charlevoix bike share program is taking off

The bike share program in Charlevoix is taking off. Another new bike will be joining the no fuel emission program offered by the city. This joins another new bike depot installed at Charlevoix Inn and Suites, 800 Petoskey Ave. This is the fourth new depot installed. The bike share program not only cuts down on emissions, but also promotes healthy lifestyles by providing a source of cardio pulmonary exercise and an opportunity to build healthy lifestyle choices.

New visitors to Charlevoix, Ron Gibson and Dr. Lynda Grant were impressed by the Charlevoix Bike Share program that they ordered another bike from Revolution Bike and Boards to be donated to the program and became the newest "gear shifter" donors.

"We've seen bike share programs in our hometown of Vancouver, British Columbia and were thoroughly impressed by the program here in Charlevoix," Grant said.

Ron Gibson added, "And it's free for anyone to use. Fantastic."

"This is the second bike recently donated to the City of Charlevoix for the Bike Share Program and the fourth bike depot," said Michelle Rick-Biddick, Bike Share Charlevoix program director. "We are so pleased with the enthusiasm and positive feedback we are receiving from the community and our visitors."

Charlevoix Inn and Suites General Manager, Jonathan Pack, said he is excited to become a Bike Share Depot for the North end of town.

"I think this program is a great way to promote Charlevoix and all its wonderful hiking areas," Pack said.

Rick-Biddick said one of the goals of the program is to promote Charlevoix as a biking destination.

"We want people to have an enjoyable zero emission experience to get around town and see all of the great sites in and around Charlevoix."

We are very pleased that Charlevoix Inn and Suites wants to become a partner in this program," said Rick-Biddick.

Donations begin at $25 up to $1,000. All donations should be sent to the City of Charlevoix Bike Share Program at 210 State St., Charlevoix.

Rick Wiles will narrate the story of the B-52 explosion tragedy of Jan. 7, 1971.

Strategic Air Force bombers had been making training, mission-simulated, electronic bombing runs over the Big Rock Point nuclear plant located on the shoreline four miles from Charlevoix for several years during the height of the Cold War. Their target was the plant's more than 200-foot tall emissions stack. On that fateful January day, only eleven flight seconds away from the plant, a B-52 exploded over Little Traverse Bay with the loss of all nine crewmen aboard. The incident made the news worldwide. The cause has never been definitely determined. Wiles has researched the history of the bomber program and this specific flight extensively and will share his knowledge along the way.

Tickets are $25 per person, which includes one non-alcoholic beverage aboard the Star. Cash bar on board with wine, beer and snacks. Boarding is at 6:15 p.m. at the Keweenaw Star dock located next to the Beaver Island Boat Company dock. Tickets are available from noon-4 p.m. at the museum at Harsha House, 103 State St., through Tuesday, Aug. 31, or at the dock prior to boarding.

Baker College offers scholarships for trucking students

CADILLAC — Baker College of Cadillac is offering scholarships to students who wish to enter its truck driving certificate program during the 2015-2016 academic year. Classes for 2015 fall quarter begin Monday, Sept. 28.

The demand for well-trained drivers is great. Demographic trends of existing truck drivers are rapidly approaching an alarming "cliff," according to the American Trucking Associations. There are not enough younger drivers available to replace a driver population rapidly approaching retirement age. The industry will need to recruit an average 100,000 new drivers each year through 2022 to meet demand stemming primarily from industry growth and retirements. American Trucking Association is the largest national trade association for the trucking industry.

The scholarship incentive is meant to spur interest in the 20-week, two-quarter program at Baker College's Center for Transportation Technology in Missaukee County.

"The $3,000 scholarship covers nearly 40 percent the cost of the program," said Kelly Smith, Baker College of Cadillac president. "Students receiving the scholarship would pay approximately $5,000 to earn the truck driving certificate, making it the most affordable drivers' training program in Northern Michigan. It should position students well for entry into a career as a truck driver. In fact, most graduates receive multiple job offers."

The program prepares students for the Michigan Commercial Driver Licensing Class A exam and the knowledge tests for air brakes and all the endorsements, including hazardous materials, double and triple trailers, and tank vehicles. Graduates are qualified for entry-level positions as local or long-distance drivers of commercial motor vehicles, heavy trucks, dump trucks and tankers.

Additional start dates during the 2015-2016 academic year are Jan. 11, April 4, and June 27.

"Baker College's hands-on program provides the information and training necessary for students to become well-trained professionals," Smith said. "This thorough knowledge and understanding of truck driving also helps students to become safe and confident drivers."

Each student completes a minimum of 30 hours of lab time and 58 hours of one-student-one-tractor-and-one-instructor behind-the-wheel driving on the range and over-the-road. Students learn the finer points of the road and safe operating techniques from instructors who are drivers with national carriers in the state. The program also includes: nearly 200 instructional hours, skid pad simulation, driving semi-trucks with two trailers and with a flatbed, load securement, strategies for fatigue management, first aid and CPR.

Individuals interested in learning more about Baker College's truck driving program and scholarships should contact Cheri Sprick in the admissions office at (231) 876-3119, (888) 313-3463 or email cheri.sprick@baker.edu.

DDA

also will have representation on the committee.

Correcting water penetration along the Bridge Park building's east wall is one priority downtown officials see to address in the short term, since water damage and mildew would continue to get worse without it. Committee members are expected to consider potential leak fixes in the coming weeks, in preparation for possible repair work by fall.

A recent estimate put the approximate cost for the leak repairs at about $3,000. With only about $850 remaining in the DDA's building repair budget for 2015-16, Doyle said downtown officials will need to look further at specific funding sources that could be tapped and possible budget amendment needs.

Estimates show other potential updates to the building — including repairs of interior water damage along the east wall, brightening up the building's lobby area and refurbishing restrooms — could cost thousands more.

As the committee looks into possible huddling updates, Doyle said potential roles for other city departments' budgets and resources are one possible topic to consider.

With the budget limits in mind, Doyle noted in a memo that staff see the Bridge Park building's restrooms as fully functioning and their amenities are adequate, even if they're not as appealing as other public restrooms nearby at the city marina. If funds are available, she suggested that repairing interior water damage be the board's next priority at the building after correcting the leakage, even if the other building improvements need to be put on hold until another budget year.

On any given day during the Brown Bag Campaign, readers of Northern Michigan newspapers will find a small brown paper bag printed with a message of heartbreak and hope. The endeavor will focus on foster care or adoptive transitions, which are often frightening and confusing to young people caught up in circumstances beyond their own control. The campaign is intended to raise awareness of the children's situations, encourage volunteerism within the community and to raise money to be allocated to ease the financial burdens these children face.

The Brown Bag Campaign is a program established by Child and Family Services, a private not for profit family service agency, that assists children entering the foster care system or adoptive situations by recognizing their needs for stable, affectionate, disciplined parenting, clothing, school supplies, transportation and for opportunities such as music or dance lessons or summer camp. Small, brown paper bag inserts will be placed in the newspapers with a message and a return address for donations toward the effort. The campaign has raised more than $280,000 for the needs of children.

"The Brown Bag Campaign represents the fact that children often come into foster care very quickly and suddenly, with their personal items stuffed into brown or plastic bags," said Jim Scherrer, Chief Executive Officer of Child and Family Services. "It's also a reminder that we need people who have the room in their hearts and homes to become foster and adoptive parents. We are grateful to everyone who has helped make this effort so successful."

Denise Marlecki, of Petoskey, became involved with Child and Family Services several years ago when she volunteered for respite foster care. Now, a full time foster mother, she is impressed with the organization not only because of the support that is offered to the children but to the individuals who open their hearts and homes to kids from less than ideal situations. She relies on the lessons that she had from her own mother in addition to the strong support group from Child and Family Services offers. The available network lends reinforcement for the challenges that the children face.

"I'm just amazed to see what these kids can recover from," Marlecki said. "The challenges are there but you do get support. But these children keep you young and it is fun. You get everything back that you put in."

Child and Family Services averages about 100 children a day in out-of-home placement, and has served more than 16,000 children in foster care since 1937. Children are placed in foster care because of abuse, neglect or delinquency, and range in age from newly born to 18 years. While foster care is their largest program, Child and Family Services also helps strengthen families and nurture children through adoption, intensive family preservation, supervised visitation and exchange, counseling, parenting education and advocacy.

For more information on the Brown Bag Campaign, or on how to become a licensed foster or adoptive parent, call Child and Family Services at (231) 946-8975 or visit cfsnwmf.org.

Superfan contest winner Richard McDonald stands out for his longevity, dedication

(231) 439-9343 • jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

PETOSKEY — As the Petoskey varsity boys basketball coach for 29 seasons, Dennis Starkey has seen it all.

Of course, the one thing he hasn't seen is a Northmen home game without Richard McDonald in the stands.

"Ever since I got here, I don't remember a time where Richard wasn't around," Starkey said. "He might have missed a game once or twice over the years, but if he did, I don't remember it."

"He's always there for the players, and he's always loud and positive."

By a sizeable margin, McDonald won Northern Prep Review's Superfan contest. Among a field of deserving nominees, the contest saw an impressive voter turnout and strong support for McDonald.

Donald's victory came because of strong support in Petoskey, where his unwavering loyalty and dedication to Northmen athletics, along with his positive attitude and passion, resonated with fans, students and alumni in the community.

"Richard is one of those things that makes it special to play for Petoskey," Starkey said. "You can tell that he doesn't just care about the school or the program. (He cares about) each individual player because he goes out of his way to support each and everyone and to leave messages encouraging them before every game.

"It's a unique part of being a member of the Northmen that I know everyone who has put on a jersey is really grateful to have experienced."

McDonald attends every home game he can and is a constant presence at Northmen events, a fact made even more impressive because he doesn't own a car. He occasionally gets rides to the games from community members, but he mostly gets to the daily sporting events by walking from his home near the former Kmart Plaza.

Despite the distance, McDonald never even misses games during the winter months when he's forced to walk through snowstorms and subzero temperatures.

"When you find out where Richard lives and how far he's going to get to these events, it really is astonishing," said Lisa Kelly, a community member who's known and helped McDonald for Charlevoix's Emily Zabowa (2) goes for a kill against Elk Rapids during the Rayders' home conference quad on Tuesday.

Young Charlevoix squad battles through up and down start, builds for future

JAMES GENSTERBLUM

(231) 439-9343 • jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Lake Michigan Conference volleyball season is going to look a little different this year.

Rather than playing a home and home series against every team on the schedule, LMC teams are instead playing each other only once in single matches, and getting the rest of their league matches in through two quads to cut down on the number of dates used up by the conference schedule.

The new reality for the league was on display for the first time on Tuesday night, as Charlevoix played host to rival Boyne City, Kalkaska and Elk Rapids in the first of two quads.

The Rayders had an up and down night, opening with a tough loss to the Blazers (20-25, 18-25, 16-25) before rebounding with a crucial sweep of Elk Rapids (25-17, 25-20, 25-12) and ending the night with a hard-fought victory over the Ramblers in four sets (25-21, 23-25, 26-24, 25-21) to start conference play with a 2-1 record.

Senior Emily Zabowa led Charlevoix again with 30 kills, eight aces and 22 digs in the three matches, and Becca Moon added 12 kills, six aces and 26 digs.

Beth Veenstra chipped in 11 kills, two aces and 10 digs for the Rayders, and Kenzy O'Leary finished with nine kills, one ace and three digs for Charlevoix, which struggled against a scrappy Blazer back row that kept the Rayders from finding their offensive rhythm, but quickly pulled together and responded with better play as the night wore on.

"It was a big night for the girls, and we showed some good things," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "We were a little slow to respond to Kalkaska's scrappy play defensively and it cost us that match, but we were able to rebound and close out the night with two solid performances."

"We're a young team, and we're still trying to figure out our roles

BOYNE CITY — It's still very early in the year for the Charlevoix boys soccer team.

But if the Rayders can finish the way they've started, this season could be one to remember.

Charlevoix followed up a strong performance at this weekend's Boyton Invite in Leland with a dominant showing against host Boyne City in its Lake Michigan Conference opener, beating the Ramblers 8-0 in a game it controlled from beginning to end.

The Rayders got off to a quick start, scoring five times in the first 20 minutes. Senior Walker Drost finished the first two goals, the first off a rebound and the second on a header from inside the box.

Noah Carson, Christian Matye and Wes Crandell all followed with first half goals of their own for the Rayders, and Danny Nesburg and Matye each added a goal in the second half as well.

Charlevoix girls take home title at season opening

CENTRAL LAKE — The Charlevoix boys and girls cross country teams are coming into the season with a lot of uncertainty, with several notable graduation losses and a new coach in Doug Drenth replacing longtime head coaches Ken and Mary Plude.

But at Saturday's season-opening Ryan Shay Memorial Invitational at Jean Burns Farm in Central Lake, the Rayders served notice that despite the changes, they were going to be as competitive as ever this season. In the Division 2 and 3 race, Charlevoix's girls team proved it could still have success even with the graduation of standout Amber Way, besting a six-team field to take the title with 36 points.

Sophomore Michelle Bollini led Charlevoix with a third-place finish (13:48.8). Rachel Nesburg took fifth in 14:19.4 and Kelsey Engstrom was ninth in 15:03.9. Kylee Scholten took 11th in 15:17.7, and Kaitlin Schwenke finished 13th in 15:24.9 to round out Charlevoix's scoring finishers.

Luke Buday

On the boys' side, replacing four seniors from last year's squad, including strong runners in Noah Jeakle, Lucas Von Lau and Nicholas Plude, figured to be a challenge for the Rayders.

Despite the attrition, a young Charlevoix team was able to take third behind champion Grant and runner-up Grand Traverse Academy, led by Luke Buday's fourth place finish (11:16.2).

Jonathan Pischner finished eighth (12:00.2) for the Rayders, Ryan Erskine took 15th (12:23.9) and Ben Peterson finished 19th (12:31.3).

Freshman Braeden Richards rounded out Charlevoix's scoring runners with a 39th place finish (14:05.7).

The Rayders are off until next Wednesday, Sept. 2, when they will compete in the East Jordan Invitational.

Belvedere pro Marty Joy plays 100 holes in single day to raise money for youth golf

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343

CHARLEVOIX — Anyone who's met Dennis "Marty" Joy II knows how much the Belvedere Golf Club's head pro loves to play golf.

After what Joy did this past weekend, even he might feel the need to take a little break.

For the eighth straight year, Joy played 100 holes of golf in a single day to raise money and awareness for the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association.

Dressed in 1920s attire and playing the challenging Belvedere Course with his trusty set of vintage hickory clubs, Joy started his day at 6:15 a.m. and finished eight hours later, having shot nine over par for the 100 hole circuit.

Joy shot 18 hole scores of 71, 75, 75, 72 and 76 before finishing the final 10 holes at even par, using the same ball for the entire odyssey.

"I enjoyed the challenge, and I could have had better scores but many putts rimmed the cup and didn't drop," Joy said.

Joy also thanked his cart drivers for the rounds, George Plackner, Stuart Goldblatt, Bruce Herbert, Jim Grant, Charley Kohls and Rick Brandt, as well as the many individuals who pledged money to the association as a part of the

Dean Davenport, Program Director

Golf Club.

"Marty's scores are amazing considering that he averaged just less than five minutes a hole," Program Director Dean Davenport said. "His effort allows these unique features to be a constant part of our program, and we applaud his great contribution, along with the contributions of all those who have made or will make pledges."

Pledges to the Junior Golf Program can still be made by contacting Davenport at 547-6433 or Joy at 547-2611.

about a decade. "But despite the distance, it's really hard to get him to accept a ride because he's so selfless."

"You ask him again and again if you can give him a ride, and all he says is 'I don't want to be a bother to anyone.' He's the type of person who always puts others first, no matter what the circumstance."

Kelly recalled another example over the summer, during softball league play on the Petoskey Waterfront, one of McDonald's other favorite events to attend.

"We saw him walking up to the field, and with all the walking he does he had walked the soles right off his shoes, so they were flopping around," Kelly said. "We ended up taking him out that day to the store to get new shoes, but to me that really sums up Richard. 'He's a person who loves the local teams and wants to support the players so much that he's willing to wear out his shoes to do it, and no matter what he's always humble and gracious."

Despite the challenges he faces to get to Petoskey's games, there's no doubt he's a visible and important presence at the school's sporting events.

That presence includes his trademark rally can that he uses as a noise-maker when games reach their critical moments.

"Back when we were playing in the Central Gym, opposing coaches in the Big North would tell us we were one of the toughest places to play on their schedule," Starkey said. "Richard had a lot to do with that, making noise with his can and helping to lead the cheering section."

"He's a big part of the positive atmosphere we have at games, and that's been true for as long as I've been here."

and how to work together on the court. Once we start developing some consistency, I think we'll be in a really good place."

Ali Jarema led Charlevoix defensively with 26 digs, Julia Doskoch chipped in 20 digs and four aces and Grace Sutherland set up the offense with 23 assists to go with 12 digs for the Rayders (5-4, 2-1 LMC), who host another conference quad with Kalkaska, East Jordan and Grayling next Monday.

"I think the change (to quads) is a positive one for the conference, because it allows us to free up more open dates on the schedule and attend more tournaments," Randall said. "We're going to one more tournament this year than we have in years past, and that means more matches against a wider variety of teams."

"I think that additional tournament date is going to make all of our teams stronger in the long run."

Pellston Invitational. PELLSTON -- Coming off a district championship and a regional final run last year, the Rayders aren't looking to take a step back despite losing five of their top seven rotation players to graduation, and Charlevoix showed both its promise and the work it still has to do with a semifinal run at the season-opening Pellston Invitational on Saturday.

The Rayders went 2-2 in pool play with wins over Harbor Light (25-13, 25-23) and a tight victory over Bay City All Saints (27-25, 25-20) that proved to be critical to making it into the bracket playoff, while suffering a loss to Central Lake in three sets (26-24, 21-25, 12-15) and Onaway (18-25, 22-25).

"We knew after the loss to Central Lake in the first match that the games against All Saints were going to be crucial for us to make it into the bracket, and I thought we really played well," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "Even in the losses to Onaway and Central Lake, we were competitive until the very end, and that's a good sign this early."

Once in the bracket, Charlevoix upset higher seeded host Pellston in the quarterfinal, 27-25, 18-25, 16-14, in a tight match, before falling in the semifinals once again to Onaway in two tight sets, 17-25, 24-26.

One of two returning starters from last year's squad, senior Emily Zabawa, led Charlevoix with 28 kills, eight aces, 26 assists, 18 digs and three blocks, earning all-tournament team honors for her play, while fellow returning starter Hannah Zipp added 13 kills, 18 digs and four aces.

Becca Moon chipped in 14 kills, 19 digs, seven aces and two solo blocks for the Rayders, Kenzy O'Leary added 17 kills, and Beth Veenstra chipped in 14 kills.

Julia Doskoch had 27 digs and Ali Jarema added 24 to lead Charlevoix defensively, and setter Grace Sutherland finished with 55 assists.

"We showed flashes of what we're capable of throughout the day and had some great runs, but we don't have the consistency yet," Randall said. "We just need to get more time on the court together and learn how to work with each other and how to trust each other in the heat of the moment."

"I think we've got a lot of potential if we can stick together and keep improving as a team."

SOCCER

Drost finished off the hat trick less than 10 minutes into the second half to seal the 8-0 victory.

Although Drost and Matye, Charlevoix's top scorers, were on point tonight with five goals, the Rayders showed their versatility by getting goals from Carson, Crandell and Nesburg and generating pressure and scoring chances with a variety of players rotating through the forward and midfield spots.

"When we get to the end of the season, we're going to need all our players to be able to step up and produce, so building that confidence now is important," Charlevoix coach Anton Matye said. "It makes our team more dangerous and it improves our chemistry when everyone is contributing and creating chances."

As impressive as the offensive performance was, it was matched by Charlevoix's defensive efforts as the veteran backline led by Kevin Pearl and Nesburg helped goalkeepers Collin Turkleson and Jacob Harrod keep the scoresheet clean.

"Kevin and Danny are just very strong right now, they read the play in front of them so well and they play their positions very well too," Matye said. "They're very good and the rest of our defense is solid as well."

Charlevoix (2-0-1, 1-0 LMC) travels to Buckley on Wednesday for its next match looking to keep the momentum going.

"We're playing very well right now, but the big key is going to be maintaining that intensity throughout the season, bringing it to every practice and every game," Matye said. "We have to take each game as it comes and not lose focus, which is something we're really focusing on this season."

Boyton Invite

LELAND -- The Charlevoix boys soccer team didn't come away from Saturday's Boyton Invite in Leland with a title, but it had plenty to be encouraged about.

The Rayders finished 1-0-1 at the invite, taking second place after falling to Leland in a shootout that determined first place in the invitational.

The Rayders opened the invitational with a 3-0 win over Manistee, with junior Graham Kroon opening the scoring with a goal off an assist from Christian Matye.

Matye added to Charlevoix's lead not too long after with a goal off a free kick from 25 yards out that slipped past the goalkeeper and gave the Rayders a 2-0 lead, then defender Kevin Pearl clinched the win with a goal off a corner kick by Ludington transfer David Ritter, who recorded his first point as a Rayder on the shot.

Collin Turkleson earned the shut-out win in net for Charlevoix, who advanced to the finals to take on host Leland.

Although the Rayders would fall to Leland in a shootout that lasted seven rounds and fail to take home the title, playing the host Comets, a regional finalist last year who was expected to be highly ranked in Division 4 heading into the season, to a 1-1 standstill in regulation was a strong statement for Charlevoix.

"It's the best game a Charlevoix soccer team has played in the last five years, and I think we really surprised them and ourselves," Charlevoix assistant coach Jon Boss said. "We controlled about 75 percent of the possession, created a bunch of good scoring opportunities and controlled the tempo of the game."

"We've known we had the potential to play like this for a while, but it was really great to see us put it all together and show what we're capable of, even if it didn't result in a win."

Airport advisory committee elects new leader, considers role of group moving forward

LOWNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Airport Advisory Committee in Charlevoix elected a new chairperson and introduced new members Monday at Charlevoix City Hall.

The committee unanimously chose newly appointed member Ken Tough as its committee chair after Charlevoix City Manager Mark Heydlauff opened the meeting by explaining his preference to keep city staff from holding leadership roles and being voting members on various standing committees in the city.

"There are committees the city council have that complete different tasks, for example the planning commission, ZBA and others," Heydlauff said. "Then we have other committees that are designed to advise the council. It is helpful in those cases to not have staff in an advisory role because (city staff) already do that."

During the meeting, assistant airport manager Matt Wyman gave updates about some of the airport improvements, which included the completion of the ramp expansion and upcoming sidewalk removal and runway-resurfacing project.

Discussion also took place about the purpose of the advisory committee and the role it will play. Heydlauff would like airport advisory committee members to review its role and come up with a clear purpose.

Tough agreed with Heydlauff and would like the committee to set a clear mission statement about its function.

One direction Tough would like the committee to take is to consider different ways of conserving energy at the airport.

"We could suggest adding solar panels in the parking area," Tough said.

Solar panels could provide covered parking for vehicles while putting energy back on the electrical grid, Tough commented to members.

Cruise narrates 1971 B-52 crash

(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The warm summer-like evening of Sept. 1 was a perfect for a cruise on Lake Michigan, as a record crowd turned out for the Charlevoix Historical Society annual sunset cruise fundraiser aboard the Keweenaw Star.

"I am told we are near ship capacity for passengers," said Charlevoix Historical Society President Denise Fate. "It is good support for us and we appreciate Keweenaw Excursions as a venue for a historical presentation while enjoying a sunset cruise."

The cruise took the more than 115 passengers on a journey back to the events of Jan. 7, 1971, when the sky over Little Traverse Bay near Charlevoix erupted into bright light that some described "like the rising of the sun in the west."

A Cold War-designed B-52 bomber was lost into the bay with nine U.S. Air Force crewmembers on board. Richard Wiles retired Petoskey professor narrated the journey of the bomber that crashed into Lake Michigan during a training exercise.

"Many people did not know that the Air Force initially made this crash look like pilot error," Wiles

Airport not compliant with own ordinance

(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Municipal Airport is not compliant with its own ordinance, according to city attorney Scott Howard.

"(The City) Code of Ordinances requires an indemnity agreement be signed by each licensee for airport uses," Howard said, on Aug. 3; to council members. "I talked to (Linda Weller) and she was not able to find any indemnification agreements signed by any of the licensees at the airport. That's something that's part of (city) Code of Ordinances and we need to address... that's something that's important that we address that we're conforming with our Code of Ordinances."

Airport Ordinance Section 2.191 — Insurance, states — Each person seeking a license for a Commercial Activity at the Airport shall, prior to the issuance of the license, furnish the City with copies of certificates of insurance providing insurance coverage against loss occasioned by bodily injury or property damage pursuant to the Airport's Schedule of Insurances and shall execute an indemnification agreement with the City against any loss occasioned by bodily injury or property damage associated with the proposed licensee's use of the Airport. The indemnification agreement shall be in such form as shall be prescribed by the City.

The current ordinance and airport minimum standards were amended and adopted in 2012, according to the city's website.

'Little, But Mighty Bridgewalk' to help local arts

ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix's 27th annual "Little, But Mighty Bridge Walk" will be held at 1 p.m., on Labor Day, Sept. 7, rain or shine. Walkers should gather in front of the Town House at 12:30 p.m., where participants will be walking to the North side of the bridge at 12:45 p.m. In front of the Weathervane Restaurant, where the walk will official begin, after the bridge is raised and lowered for boats.

Organized by Charlevoix's Patti Sitzma, the bridge walk has evolved into a community fundraiser, raising thousands of dollars for worthy causes. Some groups that have been the recipients of the proceeds include: Hospice, The Charlevoix Animal Shelter, The Charlevoix Pool, BASES, the victims of the fireworks tragedy, the Charlevoix Food Pantry, and last year, the family of a young cancer patient to help defray the cost of her treatments.

One Charlevoix resident has a long history with Charlevoix's event and bridge walking in general.

Lee Barta has been participating in walks since 1975, when he did the Labor Day crossing of the Mackinac Bridge with his future in-laws, before getting married to his wife, Sue.

Airport advisory committee elects new leader, considers role of group moving forward

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Airport Advisory Committee in Charlevoix elected a new chairperson and introduced new members Monday at Charlevoix City Hall.

The committee unanimously chose newly appointed member Ken Tough as its committee chair after Charlevoix City Manager Mark Heydlauff opened the meeting by explaining his preference to keep city staff from holding leadership roles and being voting members on various standing committees in the city.

"There are committees the city council have that complete different tasks, for example the planning commission, ZBA and others," Heydlauff said. "Then we have other committees that are designed to advise the council. It is helpful in those cases to not have staff in an advisory role because (city staff) already do that."

During the meeting, assistant airport manager Matt Wyman gave updates about some of the airport improvements, which included the completion of the ramp expansion and upcoming sidewalk removal and runway-resurfacing project.

Discussion also took place about the purpose of the advisory committee and the role it will play. Heydlauff would like airport advisory committee members to review its role and come up with a clear purpose.

Tough agreed with Heydlauff and would like the committee to set a clear mission statement about its function.

One direction Tough would like the committee to take is to consider different ways of conserving energy at the airport.

"We could suggest adding solar panels in the parking area," Tough said.

Solar panels could provide covered parking for vehicles while putting energy back on the electrical grid, Tough commented to members.

Cruise narrates 1971 B-52 crash

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The warm summer-like evening of Sept. 1 was a perfect for a cruise on Lake Michigan, as a record crowd turned out for the Charlevoix Historical Society annual sunset cruise fundraiser aboard the Keweenaw Star.

"I am told we are near ship capacity for passengers," said Charlevoix Historical Society President Denise Fate. "It is good support for us and we appreciate Keweenaw Excursions as a venue for a historical presentation while enjoying a sunset cruise."

The cruise took the more than 115 passengers on a journey back to the events of Jan. 7, 1971, when the sky over Little Traverse Bay near Charlevoix erupted into bright light that some described "like the rising of the sun in the west!"

A Cold War-designed B-52 bomber was lost into the bay with nine U.S. Air Force crewmembers on board. Richard Wiles retired Petoskey professor narrated the journey of the bomber that crashed into Lake Michigan during a training exercise.

"Many people did not know that the Air Force initially made this crash look like pilot error," Wiles

Airport not compliant with own ordinance

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Municipal Airport is not compliant with its own ordinance, according to city attorney Scott Howard.

"(The City) Code of Ordinances requires an indemnity agreement be signed by each licensee for airport uses," Howard said, on Aug. 3, to council members. "I talked to (Linda Weller) and she was not able to find any indemnification agreements signed by any of the licensees at the airport. That's something that's part of (city) Code of Ordinances and we need to address... that's something that's important that we address that we're conforming with our Code of Ordinances."

Airport Ordinance Section 2.191 — Insurance, states — Each person seeking a license for a Commercial Activity at the Airport shall, prior to the issuance of the license, furnish the City with copies of certificates of insurance providing insurance coverage against loss occasioned by bodily injury or property damage pursuant to the Airport's Schedule of Insurances and shall execute an indemnification agreement with the City against any loss occasioned by bodily injury or property damage associated with the proposed licensee's use of the Airport. The indemnification agreement shall be in such form as shall be prescribed by the City.

The current ordinance and airport minimum standards were amended and adopted in 2012, according to the city's website.

'Little, But Mighty Bridgewalk' to help local arts

ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix's 27th annual "Little, But Mighty Bridge Walk" will be held at 1 p.m., on Labor Day, Sept. 7, rain or shine. Walkers should gather in front of the Town House at 12:30 p.m., where participants will be walking to the North side of the bridge at 12:45 p.m., in front of the WeatherVane Restaurant, where the walk will official begin, after the bridge is raised and lowered for boats.

Organized by Charlevoix's Patti Sitzma, the bridge walk has evolved into a community fundraiser, raising thousands of dollars for worthy causes. Some groups that have been the recipients of the proceeds include: Hospice, The Charlevoix Animal Shelter, The Charlevoix Pool, BASES, the victims of the fireworks tragedy, the Charlevoix Food Pantry, and last year, the family of a young cancer patient to help defray the cost of her treatments.

One Charlevoix resident has a long history with Charlevoix's event and bridge walking in general.

Lee Barta has been participating in walks since 1975, when he did the Labor Day crossing of the Mackinac Bridge with his future in-laws, before getting married to his wife, Sue.

See BRIDGEWALK, page A9

Walking across the bridge in Alanson. In 2014, Lee Barta walked across 14 Northern Michigan bridges, beginning at 7 a.m. with the Mackinac Bridge, and ending with the Horton Bay crossing at 9 p.m. He hopes to add to the count this year.

Getting acquainted with the new superintendent of Charlevoix schools

DEBBY PADGETT
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Mike Ritter began his post as superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools on July 1, 2015. Before coming to Charlevoix, Ritter spent the last 17 years as elementary principal in Ludington and also taught in Big Rapids before moving to Ludington. Ritter and his wife, Julie, have been married for 24 years and have four children, Matt, 19, who is attending Oakland University, David, 16, who is entering grade 11 at Charlevoix High School, Alan, 13, who is entering grade 8 at Charlevoix Middle School, and Kate, 9, who will be a 4th grade student at Charlevoix Elementary School. Ritter is excited for the school year to start and looks forward to his time in Charlevoix.

Below is an interview conducted by the Charlevoix Courier to familiarize the community with the school district's new leader.

CC: What do you find most appealing about joining Charlevoix Public Schools?

Ritter: I have been impressed with the Charlevoix Public School district for many years. Charlevoix Public Schools are known for providing strong academic, athletic, and fine arts opportunities in a beautiful community. The community support for the school district also made applying here in Charlevoix exciting.

Mike Ritter

CC: What do you see as the major shift or change from principalship into the role of a superintendent?

Ritter: Having been a teacher for 7 years and a principal for 17 years, I would say that the district-wide focus along with the business and finance aspect of the job is the major shift for me. Earning my Ed. Specialist degree helped prepare me, and observing some really talented superintendents during my years in education has helped. My first superintendent was Dr. John Jeffrey, a retired superintendent from Petoskey Public Schools. I was always impressed by his laser like focus on doing what was best for our kids and I strive to do the same.

CC: What do you believe are CPS's most important short and long term needs as you learn more about the schools?

Ritter: I am certainly still in the learning phase and haven't determined all of the focus areas yet. Having said that, I want to help build on the strengths of the district and focus on further vertically aligning our district's curriculum and integrating our technology to fully support our students and staff. I am excited by the fact that everyone I have met is student focused and has a desire to help our students achieve.

CC: What personal qualities or experiences do you believe led you to the position you are in now?

Ritter: I am a people person and have really enjoyed working in schools throughout my career. Having been a principal for the past seventeen years along with completing my educational specialist degree equipped me for this important role. I had a strong desire to be a superintendent early in my career and I devoted my time and energy learning everything I could to be ready when the opportunity arose.

CC: What is your family's impression of the area so far?

Ritter: My wife and children absolutely love it here! Our daughter was highly impressed with Venetian and our boys are enjoying getting to know other students through their sports. We have taken our fishing boat out on Lake Charlevoix a couple of times and we find the area to be beautiful. My wife is really looking forward to meeting other moms and that should happen pretty quickly given the fact that we have three children in the district. Our oldest son attends Oakland University and he really enjoyed running on all of the trails in the area.

CC: What experience or moment from your history as a principal do you believe will guide you as you lead Charlevoix Public Schools?

Ritter: I would have to say that early in my career, I listened and learned a great deal from the veteran teachers and administrators who helped and supported me. As a leader, I believe strongly in surrounding myself with smart and caring individuals. It is important to also remember that the leader in any organization isn't the only person in the room with great ideas.

CC: What is your impression of the school board as you joined the group this summer?

Ritter: Our district is fortunate to have an intelligent, well-informed board of education that has high expectations for our district. Each member of the board brings a unique perspective on issues. I believe that a board of education with a diverse background leads to really good decisions and each member of our team has different gifts to share. I know it probably sounds funny so early in my tenure, but thanks to the warm welcome we have received, I already feel like a Rayder.

Main Street OKs committee work plans

LONNIE ALLEN

(231) 547-6558 - allen@charvoix.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Main Street program in Charlevoix recently had 18 of its initiatives approved by members of the Downtown Development Authority/Main Street Board.

On Aug. 31, during a special meeting board members approved work plans for the promotions committee, which included an event survey/assessment, look at the success of the Bridge Drop during the New Year, a development and implementation of a marketing campaign and assisting with Shadow Fest. At the DDA meeting on Aug. 24 the board approved plans from the other three Main Street Committees — Economic Restructuring, Design and Organization committees.

These approved initiatives show the progress and volunteer support for the Main Street program in Charlevoix, said DDA/Main Street director Annie Doyle.

"These are all volunteer backed initiatives," Doyle said. "Volunteers are the project leaders on all of these. These are projects they have identified as wanting to work as a whole. It's a huge progress and step forward in our community."

Doyle explained the work plans are a way for everyone to see what the backing is from the volunteers. By putting these plans down on paper they can actually see if there is actual community interest, financial support and the people available to move the project forward. By identifying what each committee wants to do they begin the process to move it forward, Doyle said.

"There is a range of various processes that would include public input on projects and other activities for the downtown," Doyle said.

Main Street is seeing strong support both financially and from its volunteers.

"It's pretty exciting to see people part of the process and involved in their city," Doyle said.

DDA board chairman Dan Barron thanked Doyle for her work with the committees and was pleased to see the community support strong for Main Street.

"We are getting good participation from the community members on these committees and that is great to see," Barron said.

Go jump in a lake!

Go jump in a lake. That's what I wanted to do on a more than 90 degree fine, sweltering day in Wilson Township, the chores on the farm were grueling hot and sweat was flowing from my head, chose to chore. Working in the heat on a job with my father-in-law and then back to the farm for some more hot, shiny sun, beaming upon my already baking body was enough. Just stick a fork in me, I think I am done.

SCOTTY

It is one of those days when the neuron-receptors in your brain — like a computer, over heat and no longer compute — every thought system shuts down as the brain melts down. This was most definitely one of those days misery had a lot of company, because everyone had heat madness, which lead to kids, adults and teenagers restraining themselves from relative strangulation. When this major red flag flies it is time to cool some heads off and head to Lake Charlevoix.

The thought of a trip to lake gets everyone in the mood to cool off. Happiness was just down the road in cool, liquid abundance, ready for a Scott and Evans invasion upon and in its waters. The van stops, doors fly open, a tubing tube squeezes by my head as patience doesn't exist with children at a lake 30 feet away, they want their lake items now and ready to be in the water now. As the swarm moves out of the van, down to the lake, I get my water shoes on and toward the lake and wade on in. I get up past my knees, a deep breath of encouragement, dive, dive, dive, I take the plunge!

The plunge, at that moment my core temperature went from 200 degrees to a cool 68 degrees and cooling as the sun was starting to set. The moon just above, floating on my back in a weightless moment of peace and tranquility that ended with multiple splashes hurled at me by my wife, with giggles and shrieks, as the dunking man formed at that moment in the lake to take revenge upon the guilty of splashing.

The favorite activity for the evening was pulling each other around with the tubing, whom can stand on their hands under water, without getting water up your nose. Fun times at the lake with the family, even had my own special moment receiving my first kiss under the moon, the stars, the ripples of the lake made for a romantic moment with my sweet, wife and our on the way child's first swim in momma's belly.

We all enjoyed the lake this evening, cooling off, spending quality family time, getting exercise in a cool way, I mean in a really cool, cold water way. So I mean it when I say "Go Jump In The LAKE!" You might like it.

Believe it or Not

We use the word believe in many ways. At some point in our lives we probably believed in Santa Claus or the tooth fairy. We ask, if one believes in ghosts? And, of course there are the REALLY BIG beliefs. Do you believe in Satan?

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Or, even do you believe in God? Believing is one of the things that humans do. We believe in things. And history suggests that we can believe in almost anything that our imagination might conjure. A causal belief in something is often of little concern, but serious beliefs on which people base actions can be problematic. Can belief be dangerous? And is a powerful belief more dangerous?

Many people might agree that a powerful belief in a single, world-wide governing Caliphate, based on a questionable reading of the Quran, could be dangerous. A sincere belief the world will come to an end next Tuesday might cause such a believer to sell everything and not stock up on groceries. That too, could be dangerous, not just to the affected family, but even to the local grocery store.

It is worth questioning a belief and wondering about what it is based on. The tooth fairy belief is based on what parents tell us, but the basis for other beliefs is often harder to pin down.

As a real and present world belief, let's examine one. There are a significant number of people who believe that vaccination for common infectious diseases can cause seizures and autism in the children vaccinated. Acting on that belief, many parents choose not to have their children vaccinated for such diseases. Is that dangerous? The short answer is "Yes, it is dangerous."

Dangerous not only to the unvaccinated children, but to the other children in society who may for fine reason, like allergies, not be eligible for such vaccination.

What is the basis for such a belief? Primarily it is a single discredited paper published in a science journal that has withdrawn it and proven it to be false. The author of the paper had his medical license withdrawn and had to leave his country. The paper and related false information still reside on the Internet and is available to anyone.

In order to believe that vaccination is related to seizures and/or autism, it is necessary for the believer to ignore a literal mountain of contradictory evidence. Ignoring real and substantial evidence is properly called ignorance. Belief based on ignorance is dangerous.

Use the word "believe" with a certain amount of caution, and always ask "What is the nature of the support for that belief?"

Dr. Roger Postmus resigns from the board at the Community Food Pantry

Editor:

At the August meeting of the Community Food Pantry Board, we were dismayed to learn from Dr. Roger Postmus felt he had to resign from the board due to some personal issues.

Roger has been a stellar member of the board for more years than we can remember — possibly 20 or so — and his work, opinions and expertise have been hugely helpful to our work.

He has served as president and vice-president of the board; has represented us at many events and gatherings; has transported groceries to the pantry each week; and has always offered thoughtful insight and suggestions when we discussed plans for the pantry and improving our service to our clients.

He demonstrates a truly moral compass in making decisions.

We want the community of Charlevoix to know what an asset he has been in the pantry, and we wish Roger well. We will miss his guidance.

Very truly yours,
Community Food Pantry board
Rosemary Horton, board secretary

Editor:

The Keep Charlevoix Beautiful Board of Directors would like to thank the dedicated individuals who came out to help weed the flower beds along U.S. 31 on the two community weeding days over the summer. We would also like to thank the following businesses for their generosity in donating prizes for our weeding raffle: Pizza Hut, Charlevoix Country Club, Belvedere Golf Club, Americinn, Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites, Stafford's Restaurants, Grey Gables, Keweenaw Star and Charlevoix State Bank.

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful is a volunteer non-profit group that fund raises for the petunias planted along the U.S. 31 and M-66 corridors leading into and out of Charlevoix, as well as the hanging baskets in downtown. The group also contributes a great deal of time to organize the planting and weeding of the petunias, as well as the petunia picnic the Thursday after Memorial Day. This project is in its 33rd year and although many cities have tried to follow Charlevoix's lead; we were the first to tackle such a huge undertaking and continue it annually!

We also would like to graciously thank the many businesses and residents who have helped to keep the flowers in front of their property weeded and looking wonderful. Your pride and ownership for your petunias shows.

The support of the entire community is greatly appreciated by the entire Keep Charlevoix Beautiful board.

CHARLEVOIX
HISTORICAL SOCIETY
Bridging our past with our future

The beet factory

In 1902 it was announced that a sugar beet factory would be erected in Charlevoix to the south of the D. M. & Ferry & Co. seed warehouse, now the Foster Boat Works Association condominium, along the Lake Charlevoix shoreline at the intersection of the railroad tracks and Stover Creek. Construction began in August that year and was completed in 1903, one of the largest buildings ever constructed in the Lake Charlevoix basin. The more than 300-foot long, 70-foot tall building spread across a 12,500-square foot factory floor, kiln house, machine shop, offices, boiler house, scale house and 15,000 square feet of sheds capable of holding 8,000 tons of beets. Stover Creek was dammed to direct its waters into the sheds from where the beets were washed into the factory to avoid the expense of having to pump two million gallons of water a day. There was 200 men, who manned the factory for half a year during high production, 50 to 75 in the off season. But there was a problem. None of the regional farmers had been interviewed regarding their willingness to plant sugar beets, a highly labor intensive, thus expensive, agricultural endeavor. It was the "Field of Dreams" syndrome—if you build it, they will come. Many of the farmers didn't, refusing to plant even one acre devoted to beets. A substantial percentage of the beets had to be imported to keep production going. Pleadings from the local newspaper editors and business leaders, several of whom probably had investments tied up in the plant, fell on the farmers' deaf ears. While reports of the plant's activities and production statistics appeared rosy and impressive, underneath there was much reason to worry.

The plant never showed a profit until its last year of operation, just under a decade after it opened, but by then it was too late. The owners pulled up stakes amid rumors and accusations of financial mismanagement and took the operation to Ohio, where later, they reportedly went bankrupt. The emptied building fell into ruin, used later to store ice harvested from Lake Charlevoix, and as a medieval castle playground for the local youth. One spacious room's hardwood floor was utilized as a roller skating rink until the ceiling collapsed onto it. A wrecking ball took the hulking derelict structure out in 1964 to make way for a marina, now the Irish Boat Shop. Remnants of the sugar beet factory's walls can be seen recycled today into Irish's breakwaters and dock foundations.

Robert Wayne Whitbeck is the August 2015 Veteran of the Month

The "Veteran of the Month" for August 2015, is Robert Wayne Whitbeck. Whitbeck was born, on April 24, 1933, in Munising. Whitbeck moved with his family in the late 1940s to Ocala, Fla., while his father looked for employment and later they moved to Elkhart, Ind., where he attended Central Elkhart High School for 2 1/2 years and completed high school while in the Marine Corps.

On Jan. 12, 1953, Whitbeck enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps in Indianapolis, Ind., and following basic training, in July 1953, he attended Drill Instructor School graduating in Aug. 1953. Whitbeck was reassigned to a unit in Korea serving as a fire control man in an Anti-Aircraft Unit during the U.S. Occupation of Korea for one year, one month and 13 days. On July 1, 1955, Whitbeck was promoted to Private First Class and on Jan. 11, 1957, at Camp Lejeune, Whitbeck received an Honorable Discharge having attained the rank of Private First Class and was awarded the following decorations and awards: The National Defense Service Medal, The Korean Service Medal, The United Nations Service Medal and The Good Conduct Medal. Whitbeck was transferred to The 9th Marine Corps Reserve and Recruitment District after completing his military obligation on Jan. 11, 1961.

Returning to Elkhart, Whitbeck married Delores Irene Free Farrell, on July 19, 1958 in South Bend and went to work at Allens Bakery in Elkhart, making breads and wedding cakes while he lived on Eagle Lake in Edwardsberg, a short drive away. Whitbeck then moved his young family to the Flint-Flushing area to be near family and bought a farm in the East Jordan area, and an ancient log cabin on Lake Charlevoix, where he worked at East Jordan Iron Works. He later returned to Elkhart and worked in the mobile home and recreational vehicle industry and then he then became a long haul truck driver and traveled all the lower 48 states. Whitbeck was employed at Holiday Rambler until his retirement in 1990 because of ill health. Whitbeck joined The American Legion Post 227 in East Jordan, while living there and later transferred to The American Legion Post 365 in Edwardsberg. Whitbeck enjoyed bowling and loved to sing, especially blending his "Irish tenor" voice with those of his siblings and other relatives at family gatherings. On May 12, 1991, Robert Wayne Whitbeck answered the final call and is being honored by his daughters Lorraine, Delrea and their extended families.

To honor a veteran, call the program chairman at (231) 588-6067 or on Tuesdays call (231) 582-7811 between 3:30-8:30 p.m. The ceremony may be witnessed at 6:15 p.m., on the first Thursday of each month at The American Legion Post, located on the corner of South Lake and Main streets in Buyn City

Back Porch Events Coffee House starts season

CHARLEVOIX—The eighth season of the Back Porch Events Coffee House series kicks off with Deepest Height. The event opens at 6 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 12, at the Charlevoix Senior Center, 6906 Norwood St., Charlevoix.

The Back Porch Events Coffee House Series planned another season with a wide range of musicians from this region.

The Deepest Height is a collaboration of regional musicians Caroline Barlow, Brad Hersey and Jeff Lange who play acoustic guitar and sing in three-part harmony in the traditions of Peter, Paul and Mary, Crosby, Stills and Nash and Simon and Garfunkel (plus one). Reflecting her North Carolina roots, Caroline's banjo blends a touch of bluegrass into the mix. Brad keeps the rhythm alive using a variety of percussion instruments, while Jeff's harmonica accents their music in the style of Neil Young and Bob Dylan.

Donations at the door are a suggested $5 to $10 and are for the scheduled performers; soups, coffee and cookies available at no extra charge. The dance floor will be open and circle jam begins at 8:30 p.m.

The Charlevoix Senior Center building is fully accessible and is located at the corner of Carpenter and Sheridan streets.

Char-Em annual United Way campaign is under way

PETOSKEY — The official start of this year's annual Char-Em United Way fundraiser is not until Sept. 8, but for a select group of businesses and local organizations, the campaign has already begun.

Pacesetter organizations have begun their United Way campaigns in August and the beginning of September as a way to jump-start the annual event. Michigan Scientific in Charlevoix, Odawa Casino in Petoskey, and Boyne Resorts have all stepped up as community Pacesetters.

"Giving to the United Way is efficient and effective," said Lorraine Manary, executive director of Char-Em United Way. "Gifts to the campaign directly impact several areas of local need, since United Way focuses on the community at large and not just one particular area or one particular need. It's a harsh reality, but the reality is that life is more expensive for people who have less."

Manary said that unless contributions are specifically designated for a group outside the area, all of the proceeds help fund dozens of programs focusing on education, health, financial stability and basic needs in the communities of the two county area.

"I'm a believer that if you go to the average person on the street, they only know the United Way collects money, and does good things with it," said Joel Schraw, Char-Em United Way board president and attorney with Schraw and Associates. "They really don't understand that it's a great way to give one check and benefit many worthwhile organizations that have responded to the great need in our community."

Some of these local organizations provide hot meals, heat and utility assistance in our coldest months, and early childhood education, which Schraw said can stretch a contribution to have lasting effects in the community.

"Research has shown that investing in early education pays off," Schraw said. "For every dollar invested in quality, early-childhood education today, the return on investment is as high as $16 back into the community by way of savings on special education costs, lower crime, increased earnings and taxes paid."

"We are very happy to have Michigan Scientific in Charlevoix, Odawa Casino in Petoskey and Boyne Resorts as Pace-Setters for Char-Em United Way," he added. "Their leadership and support of the community is vital to our overall success as vibrant communities."

The goal for this year's overall campaign is $425,000.

"My favorite part is watching people come together in support of their community and the needs of their community," Schraw said. "With 38 percent of households in the two county area struggling to make ends meet, none of us know when we are going to be on the receiving end of this support. My favorite part is seeing that everybody in the community is so supportive and generous and knowing they want to take care of others' need. Being involved in the Char-Em United Way is very rewarding. We are grateful for these early pacesetters and all of the businesses and individuals who support United Way through the annual campaign."

On Sept. 8, Char-Em United Way will conduct work site fundraising campaigns in a variety of local businesses as well as raising funds from the general public. Contributions are invested in community health and human service programs which meet United Way's mission of improving the lives of people in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Sweet 16 celebration includes a swim across Lake Charlevoix

CHARLEVOIX — Alexis Lefevre turned sweet 16 this past weekend, and to celebrate she swam across Lake Charlevoix. Inspired, challenged and accompanied by her 13-year-old sister, Noel Lefevre, the two sisters ventured across Lake Charlevoix from a beach adjacent to Irish Boat Shop in Charlevoix to the western tip of Oyster Bay, swimming across Raspberry Bay, a total of 1.97 miles.

The two swimmers were flanked by their father, Patrick Lefevre, on a jet ski and Maisey Lefevre, 11, on a kayak to keep the swimmers safe from boating traffic. Their celebratory swim took about an hour and 10 minutes through wavy waters with varying temperatures as low as 65 degrees.

"It was a little freaky not being able to see the bottom like I can in a pool," Alexis said. "But the swim was a lot of fun and I was really excited to finish!"

The Lefevres, who reside in Holt, are a swimming family with the three sisters on the Spartan Swim Club in the Lansing area and mom, Angel Lefevre, teaching swim lessons. The sisters have summer swim practice daily from 6:30-8:30 a.m. and 5-7 p.m., with weekend competition meets. They have had only two weekends off this summer. Alexis also competes on the Holt High School swim team and hopes to get a swimming scholarship to college. The sisters agreed they should make this swim an annual celebration.

Short's Brewing Co. introduces new craft cider line to Michigan

BELLAIRE — Starcut Ciders, a division of Short's Brewing Company that crafts hard cider made with fruit sourced from Michigan, began statewide bottle distribution on Aug. 30. Originally introduced at Short's pub in Bellaire, Starcut Ciders has been available on tap across the state throughout the summer distributed by Imperial Beverage.

Starcut Ciders is excited to now share their craft ciders throughout the mitten state in bottles.

Starcut Ciders begin with two flagship varieties: Octorock, a semi-sweet cider and Pulsar, a semi-dry cider as well as a rotating seasonal release. The first seasonal release, Squishy, a semi-sweet cider made from a late season blend of apples, Malton, and Montmorency cherries, also will be available on store shelves following the flagship release. Starcut Ciders will be packaged in 12-ounce bottles in six-pack carriers.

The label illustrations for both Starcut Ciders flagships and Squishy were completed by artist and designer, Don Pendleton.

and for the album artwork for Pearl Jam's tenth studio album, Lightning Bolt, Pendleton was approached by Starcut this past winter.

"It was important to create a memorable icon for each of these ciders," said Short's art director, Jesse Den Helder. "Don's work is so unique and was a perfect vehicle to express the personality of each cider."

Pendleton said working with Starcut Ciders is reminiscent of his experiences with the skateboarding industry.

"It's exciting to see what is being done with craft cider and to witness this swell of independent companies who are focusing on creativity and injecting their own personal taste and style into the product," Pendleton said. "Having been a part of skateboarding since the 1980s and seeing that industry being driven by smaller brands and unique perspectives, it's very reminiscent of the do it yourself spirit I grew up with. It's always great to see people who are passionate about something doing what they love and putting so much into every detail, whether it's the taste, the quality or the packaging."

Farewell from the Front Desk

Charlevoix will always be home to me, no matter how far I roam. Upon graduating high school in 2013, I was excited to leave Charlevoix. I was looking at out of state colleges and had every intention of leaving our small town.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Carly Thompson, Guest Services Associate

However, my love for close-knit communities kept me in Michigan; incidentally, I've grown to love and miss Charlevoix the more I leave it.

In my first week as the guest services associate at the Charlevoix Area Chamber and Visitors Bureau, I was excited but also daunted by putting my knowledge of Charlevoix to the test. Although I had grown up here, I learned about businesses and activities I never knew existed, and was asked questions about Charlevoix that I couldn't always answer. I realized just how crucial the role is that the Chamber and Visitors Bureau plays, not only for our visitors, but the well-being of our community members and businesses; I considered this position an opportunity to learn and grow as an ambassador for this community.

Our office is most often the first place that people visit or contact for information. I enjoyed meeting visitors from all over the globe, and helping them discover the reasons I love Charlevoix so much. Likewise, I enjoyed meeting several community members and business owners while working in this position; I now have a network of connections, which will benefit my future endeavors.

It has been a pleasure to work with such an assertive, professional, and intuitive group of women. After learning first hand what these women do for the community day in and day out, I am amazed at their strength and ability to tactfully solve problems, and generate creative ideas.

My first impression of Alison Hubbard, Chamber president, was that of Sarah Jessica Parker's character, Kate, in the movie "I Don't Know How She Does It." Like Kate, Alison does well balancing her work and her family. She takes action in the community and office, but I appreciate that she comes alongside those she works with to collaborate, compromise, and allow them to utilize their creativity and ideas. She gave me several projects to tackle in my time here: I've edited and proofread documents, updated the website, and designed a layout for the Leadership Charlevoix County bios. I am grateful for the opportunities and creative liberties I have had in this position.

My coworkers, Mary Chapdelaine and Shelly Ferguson, also have been wonderful to work with. Their dedication to their work and detail-oriented work ethic is impeccable. I gained marketing expertise and creative insight from both Mary and Shelly, by editing the Biz Blasts every week, and designing event flyers.

I also have had the privilege of working for Amanda Wilkin, director of the Convention and Visitors Bureau. Amanda's integrity in her work and creative advertising techniques, have been influential in promoting Charlevoix to a greater number of people and targeting areas where most people visit from. I am grateful for the opportunity to have worked for her organization, as it has greatly benefited the growth of our community.

Very few people can say that they love both their job, as well as the environment of their workplace; at this position, I can say that I love both and consider myself fortunate. While I am sad to say farewell for the summer, I am thankful for this opportunity and look forward to returning to the front desk next year!

General Jerry Cannon announces congressional bid

TRAVERSE CITY — Retired sheriff and U.S. Army Maj. Gen. Jerry Cannon has served his community and country in many capacities, and is ready to serve again.

As a public servant for nearly 50 years, a leader for 40 years and having lived, worked and raised a family in Michigan's First Congressional District, he feels he has a strong connection with what's important to the hard-working people of Northern Michigan and he is ready to bring voice to their concerns. Cannon announced his candidacy for Michigan's First Congressional District on Sunday afternoon in front of a crowd of Grand Traverse County Democrats. Cannon is motivated to continue his legacy of service after hearing the disappointment expressed by voters about the current state of affairs across the district.

"We need someone who will stand up, speak up and shake up the Congressional dysfunction that has accomplished nothing for the nation, or this district," said Cannon, who was joined by his wife, Liz. "Who's on our side? Who's standing up and fighting for working families, our military, seniors, the environment, veterans, rural health care, public education, our infrastructure? Right now... nobody!

Going along to get along serves only one purpose, and it isn't the people of our district."

Cannon and Liz have been married for 45 years; they have four adult children, each married and seven grandchildren. They settled in the same area where family has lived since the late 1800s. They have lived in the Fife Lake Area of Kalkaska County for 39 years. Liz worked for the Kalkaska Public Schools, while Cannon served in law enforcement and the Army National Guard. Cannon currently teaches at Northwestern Michigan College and serves as Garfield Township Police Chief in Kalkaska County.

General Cannon said he has no patience for wasting time, energy or resources on programs that don't have impact to Michigan's First Congressional District; there's just too much to be done. He knows how government can work as he has led at the highest levels of government. He will partner with anyone interested in helping give rural areas a voice on issues such as postal service cuts, broadband internet service and infrastructure repairs, which are just a few of the many areas of concern.

"I will support anything that makes sense for the people of this district. I live here. That's my only priority; I'm beholden to nobody and I promise this vote to no one other than the people of this district," Cannon said.

Charlevoix schools open house hails the end of summer

TWILLA JOHNSON
Charlevoix Courier

CHARLEVOIX — A crush of students and parents invaded the Commons and classrooms in the attempt to fill out registration paperwork, meet new teachers and gather supplies at the Charlevoix Middle/High school open house on Tuesday, Sept. 1. High School kids zipped through with relative ease in the organized chaos set up by administrators. Incoming middle school students weren't quite as lucky as the queues were extensive with first time sign ups.

Tables for clubs, sports and gear registration also vied for attention. But the most notable change this year was that significantly fewer books were lugged through the halls by the influx than in previous years. The distribution of Mac computers this year has helped reduce or even eliminate use of textbooks in most classes.

Great Lakes Energy announces cooperative board election results

BOYNE CITY — Incumbents Paul Byl of Shelby, Mark Carson of Boyne City and Paul Schemanski of Petoskey were re-elected by Great Lakes Energy members in their district to three-year terms on the electric cooperative's board of directors.

Byl and Carson defeated challengers in their district to earn another term on the board. Schemanski ran unopposed. He is from district one — Emmet County — and is a healthcare technology team leader at McLaren Northern Michigan hospital in Petoskey. Byl is a farmer from district seven — Muskegon and Oceana counties — Carson is the Petoskey Gordon Food Service store manager, an adjunct business instructor at Spring Arbor University and resides in district two — Charlevoix and Cheboygan counties.

Great Lakes Energy members in districts one, two and seven received their mail-in ballot in the July/August issue of Michigan Country Lines. Voters had to return their ballots to a private certified public accounting firm by Aug. 20, and winners were announced Aug. 26, at the cooperative's annual business meeting in Boyne City.

Election Results Summary

— District one:
Paul Schemanski, Petoskey - 274
— District two:
Mark Carson, Boyne City - 538
Ken Tough, Charlevoix - 58
— District seven:
Paul Byl, Shelby - 449
Anne Pawli, Montague - 203

Gaelic band from Scotland launches Hebridean Sessions on Beaver Island

BEAVER ISLAND — Dàimh, "Gaelic Super-group" and un-challenged champions of straight-in-the-eye Celtic music, are based around West Lochaber and the Isle of Skye. Formed around the turn of the century and taking the name from the Gaelic word for "kinship" Dàimh — pronounced Dive — have taken their contemporary take of Highland and Gaelic music to more than 20 countries and now they're making their first ever trip to the U.S. to promote their new album, The Hebridean Sessions at 8 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 11, at the Beaver Island Community Center.

The album features traditional Highland and Gaelic material and was recorded, mixed, mastered and designed on the Hebridean Islands of Scotland. Once the band heard their inaugural U.S. tour was going to take them to Beaver Island, they realized at once that they should launch the album there to keep the Island theme going.

"I live on the Isle of Skye and I'm originally from Cape Breton in Nova Scotia," said piper Angus MacKenzie. "That, and my father was from South Uist in the Outer Hebrides, so I guess you could say that I have Island connections. Our fiddler, Gabe McVarish lives on the Isle of Eigg, which has a population of about 100 all year-round. We are always heading off to play on islands at home; we've played on about 25 Scottish Islands to-date. That's why we wanted to record our album live on three different Islands, to get that feel you just don't get on the mainland."

"Most mainland and international artists that perform on Beaver Island aren't accustomed to 'the Island thing'...

that unique audience mindset, tenacity and appreciation which comes from a lifestyle that doesn't include your typical conveniences," said Ann Partridge, director of events at the Beaver Island Community Center. "These guys' desire to launch their new CD from our Lake Michigan Island is an honor to our island community."

Tickets are $25 for adults, $15 for students and are available at the Community Center, or call (231) 448-2022. Travel is available to Beaver Island via ferry or air.

Sponsors for this special island event include the Shamrock Bar & Restaurant, the Beaver Island Boat Company, McDonough's Market, and Dalwhinnie's Bakery & Deli.

B-52 CRASH

said. "One they recovered the wreckage a Boeing engineer was able to determine it was structural failure from over use."

According to the Air Force Accident Board's revised report of July, 1971, the 15-year-old B-52 Model C had suffered catastrophic structural failure of its left wing between the two giant engine pods. This failure, due to metal fatigue, then caused the plane to nose dive into the waters of Lake Michigan. There was not even time for any of the nine crew members on board to issue a cry of alarm. No human remains were ever recovered.

The plane's home base was Westover Air Force base in Massachusetts, according to Wiles. That night, around 6:30 p.m., the B-52 was conducting a simulated bombing by the Bay Shore Strategic Air Command radar station, near the now-decommissioned Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant.

The unarmed plane was flying south at about 360 mph, 500 feet above the lake surface when it lost contact with the United States Air Force Strategic Air Command Detachment 6, 1st Combat Evaluation Group, better known as the Bay Shore RBS (radar bomb scoring) Group, Wiles said.

At exactly the same time that the radar screen in Bay Shore lit up, terrific fireball had erupted on the surface of the bay. The plane's giant jet fuel tanks containing its remaining supply of more than 25,000 gallons of jet fuel had exploded on contact with the cold and deep waters of Lake Michigan. Along with the fireball of light came a deafening sound that many described as a giant sonic boom.

"People in Charlevoix thought the nuclear plant had exploded," Wiles said. "Fire trucks were sent as precaution and others thought a freighter was on fire in the bay."

A salvage operation began at the crash site, some 5 miles directly north of Big Rock Point in Lake Michigan, on Tuesday Jan. 12, 1971, but an arrival of a fierce winter storm on ended phase one of salvage operations until the spring, Wiles said.

Lorraine Burton

Passengers on board the Keweenaw Star enjoyed the narration out to Big Rock Point by Wiles of the events that took place that took place on that cold January day. Marshall Lett, of Ellsworth, said he heard about the historical society's sunset cruise from friends.

"As a group we got tickets for this cruise," Lett said. "I like the historical part added to the sunset cruise."

Lorraine and Fred Burton who have been on other historical cruises said they enjoyed the trip out to Big Rock Point.

"It was something different compared to some of the other cruises," Lorraine said. "It was wonderful to see the Lake Michigan shoreline and to know the nuclear plant is no longer in existence. Scary to know that the crash was so close to it."

Fred, who remembers hearing the news stories about the crash when it happened, said the cruise gave him a better perspective of the crash proximity to Charlevoix and the plant.

"I knew they used the plant for a target, but I didn't realize how close the bombers were to the lake surface, plant and the city," Fred said.

LONNIE ALLEN/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Passengers board the Keweenaw Star in Charlevoix on Sept. 1, for a sunset cruise fundraiser to benefit the Charlevoix Historical Society. The cruise went out to Big Rock Point to recall the tragic events of Jan. 7, 1971, when nine crewmen of a B-52 bomber lost their lives when the bomber crashed into Lake Michigan near the now-decommissioned Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant.

People take photos of the Charlevoix draw bridge opening as the Keweenaw Star navigates out to the big lake. More than 115 passengers were on board the Keweenaw Star on Sept. 1, to take a sunset cruise on Lake Michigan with the Charlevoix Historical Society out to Big Rock Point for their annual fundraiser.

The former site of the Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant has been returned to a natural state after the plant was decommissioned. The plant was used as a practice target for B-52 bombers during the Cold War. On Jan. 7, 1971, a B-52 bomber crashed in Lake Michigan near the plant.

City Manager Mark Heydlauff said there is no list of what "Schedule of Insurances" mean and it is something that is now being addressed. He does not know why the city did not have this completed when the ordinance was enacted, but said the city will fix the issue.

"Apparently this is something that needed to be created when the ordinance was enacted, but never was," Heydlauff said. "This is one of things being reviewed in our current airport talks with our attorney."

Howard discovered the longtime error after looking into the airport standards for operators after city council members questioned skydiving operations in Charlevoix by council member Luther Kurtz.

Kurtz, who represent Charlevoix's Ward 1, also is the owner of Skydive Harbor Springs, which was a discussion topic between some residents and Kurtz during the July and August City Council meetings.

Kurtz said he felt like some members of council were personally attacking his business because they raised questions about his insurance documents.

"We were not attacking, nor were any of us against Luther's skydiving business," said council member Shirley Gibson. "We were simply looking out for the best interest of Charlevoix."

'All things Scott identified in the August meeting that need to be addressed are being worked on with the guidance of the aviation attorney,'

Mark Heydlauff, city manager

Once Howard pointed out the issues at the airport, Gibson recommended an aviation attorney review the airport standards and come up with a protection waiver similar to Kurtz's waiver for jumpers — who are not covered by any type of insurance.

"This needs to be clear to everyone," Gibson said. "There is no insurance that covers a jumper once they leave the plane. That is why we are working with an aviation attorney to make sure the city can have the most liability protection it can have."

City officials signed an engagement letter with Cliff Maine, the chief aviation attorney for Barnes & Thornburgh in Grand Rapids on Aug. 26, Heydlauff said.

"Cliff Maine practices exclusively in aviation law," Heydlauff said. "He and our attorney will be reviewing any needed waivers for skydiving operations and looking at the Airport Minimum Standards."

Heydlauff said Maine and Howard also will work with the Airport Advisory Committee on the draft documents and then refer them on to City Council for final action when they are complete.

"All things Scott identified in the August meeting that need to be addressed are being worked on with the guidance of the aviation attorney," Heydlauff said.

ADVISORY

Reviewing the purpose of the advisory committee is part of a bigger evaluation process for all of the city's standing committees.

Heydlauff's office has compiled list of all the standing committees and council members are expected to review the list at its Sept. 8 meeting, Heydlauff said.

He hopes they can clean up the list of committees and perhaps even dissolve some that have not met for many years.

"We have a list of each committee and who is on them for council members to review," Heydlauff said. "It is my goal that we can determine which committees are necessary and which ones are no longer needed."

"It started out as a fun thing to do and except for a very few years," Barta said. "I have walked every year since. It's become a tradition. When our kids (Scott and Rachel) were born we took them along."

Barta's son, Scott, joined his dad in the endeavor from 1988 when he was one year old, to 2011. In 2000 Barta decided to make the day more interesting by adding a bridge a year.

"Last year I did 14 bridges, starting at 7 a.m. with the Mackinac, and ending with the Horton Bay crossing at 9 p.m. This year maybe it will be 15 or 16," Barta said. "There is a lot of bridges, large and small between the Straits and Charlevoix." He joined the Charlevoix Bridge Walk enthusiasts in 2001, and isn't planning to break the tradition any time soon.

Proceeds this year will benefit the Charlevoix Circle of Arts. T-shirts, in a rainbow of colors with the 2015 Bridge Walk emblem printed on the front, give a nod to the Circle's mission of "inspiring, enriching and educating people in the performing and visual arts."

T-shirts are on sale at the Town House prior to the event and in front of the Town House starting at 11 a.m. the day of the walk.

S, M, L and XL are $15; 2XL are $20. For more information, call Patti Sitzma at (231) 547-5190.

Raided: Big plays by McLean, others help Charlevoix roll to season-opening win

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Every time he touched the ball in Friday's season-opening 53-30 win over Elk Rapids, Charlevoix junior Jared McLean could hardly believe his eyes.

"I just saw grass, wide-open field every time," McLean said. "The guys blocking in front of me and the offensive line just did an amazing job and I had massive holes to run through all night long."

McLean's blockers set him up well, and the junior running back's breakaway speed did the rest on the way to one of the most impressive starting debuts in Charlevoix history.

He finished with 298 yards on just 10 carries and scored six touchdowns, five on the ground and five of more than 40 yards as the Rayder offense ran roughshod over a young Elks squad.

McLean scored five touchdowns on his first six carries, opening the game with a 68-yard touchdown run on Char-levoix's first play from scrimmage, and adding an 85 yard kick return touchdown and rushing touchdowns of 65 and 93 yards over the next two quarters.

A one-yard touchdown run at the end of the first half added another score and sent McLean to the halftime locker room with over 200 yards and a yards per carry average of 46.

"We thought with Jared and our other backs, we had great speed and we could do a lot of good things if our line did its job," Charlevoix coach Ron Bindi said. "We got a good performance in the first half from our line, and when we got Jared with his athleticism in space, we were able to take it to them a little bit."

McLean tacked on one more scoring run for good measure, going 43 yards to the end zone to start the second half and giving the Rayders a 47-10 lead that all but put the game away.

McLean's performance was especially impressive given that fellow backfield starters Ben CHARLEVOIX — In a coaching career with the Charlevoix football team that spanned 30 years, Don Carey established a legacy that endures to this day.

With the addition of a new scoreboard at the Rayders' longtime home at Kipke Field, the Charlevoix athletic department and the Rayder Gridiron Club have come together to honor that legacy in a tangible way.

On Friday night, during halftime of Charlevoix's 2015 season opener against Elk Rapids, the Club, along with the members of Carey's extended family and dozens of former players under the legendary coach, dedicated the new video scoreboard at Kipke Field as the Don Carey Scoreboard in his honor.

"It's an emotional moment for us, because so many of the members of the Gridiron Club and the community at large either played for Coach Carey or had their lives impacted by him in some way," Gridiron Club member Dr. Gil Noirot said. "He had a tremendous amount of success on the field, but his real legacy was the amazing number of young men he helped to prepare for success who've gone on to become doctors, teachers, or coaches in their own right."

"That's the legacy we really wanted to honor with this dedication tonight."

"That's the legacy we really wanted to honor with this dedication tonight."

Carey's achievements as a football coach rank him alongside field namesake Ray Kipke as the greatest coach in Rayder history.

Coaching for 28 seasons from 1955 to 1985, Carey finished with a record of 133 wins, 61 losses and 15 ties at Charlevoix for a .636 winning percentage and presided over three teams that finished the year unbeaten and ranked first in the state, including a 1958 team that didn't give up a single point in nine victories, as well as 9-0 years in 1958 and 1977.

Carey also coached basketball from 1955 to 1970 at Charlevoix, presiding over nine district championships and three regional titles in 15 years.

The new scoreboard came into being a few years ago when a lightning storm damaged the old scoreboard at Kipke Field.

The Charlevoix School Board approached the Gridiron Club about helping to raise funds for a replacement, and while plans for the new board started out

Rayders keep rolling with 8-2 victory

CHARLEVOIX — Sometimes clichés are clichés for a reason.

That's the case for the Charlevoix boys soccer program, where the old platitudes of "one game at a time" and "improve every day" are taken seriously, and the driving force behind a team that improved to 4-0-1 on the season with an 8-2 win over visiting Maple City Glen Lake.

Talk to coach Anton Matye and his assistants and you'll hear both those phrases regularly, but given the performance of a Rayder team that seems to get better with every game and doesn't take any opponent lightly, they're more than just words.

That was especially true against the Lakers, as junior Christian Matye and senior Walker Drost combined to lead a potent Charlevoix attack to an eight-goal performance less than a week after a subpar offensive effort in a 2-0 win over Buckley on the road last Wednesday.

Matye scored four times and Drost added a hat-trick as well, as Coach Matye said a more patient offensive effort led to better results than in the match against the Bears.

"Last week, it felt like we were pressing too much, and trying to force things that weren't there offensively," Coach Matye said. "We really emphasized in practice being patient and waiting for chances to develop, and tonight we displayed that patience."

"We were able to control possession and use that to take our time and break down the defense, and that led to quality scoring chances."

Glen Lake scored a goal in each half, but couldn't keep pace with the Rayder offensive onslaught that included a goal by Wes Crandell and assists from David Ritter and Danny Nesburg.

Charlevoix volleyball squad goes 1-2 at home quad

CHARLEVOIX — Close matches highlighted the Charlevoix volleyball team's night at its own LMC Quad on Monday.

Despite a strong performance throughout the evening, however, the Rayders only came out on top in one of the three matches.

Charlevoix beat East Jordan 22-25, 25-13, 26-24, 25-15, but fell in four sets to Kalkaska (25-15, 24-26, 23-25, 20-25) and Grayling (25-22, 24-26, 17-25, 20-25).

Emily Zabawa was the Rayders' top player on the night, finishing with 29 kills, 55 assists, 22 digs, nine aces and four blocks. Becca Moun Boss and Malcolm Williams sat out the opener with injuries, forcing the junior to shoulder a heavier load than anticipated heading into the season.

"I knew I had to step up (with Ben and Malcolm out)," McLean said. "We've got a lot of talented guys in the backfield, and tonight it was just my turn to do what I could to try and help us win."

Charlevoix's offense as a whole was effective on the night, putting up 420 yards and 53 points on just 40 plays.

Junior Brad Klinger scored a 33-yard rushing touchdown of his own, while quarterback Forrest Noirot was 5 of 9 for 80 yards, connecting with tight end Austin Putman twice for 53 yards and Klinger three times for 27.

The game was also a coming-out party for a young offensive line that returned only one starter from last year's team, Truman Left.

Despite the inexperience, the Rayder line dominated Elk Rapids' defensive front seven for most of the game, creating the big play chances Charle-voix's skill position players took advantage of.

While the Rayders succeeded offensively, their defensive results were more of a mixed bag.

Charlevoix forced four turnovers, including three Brad Klinger interceptions and a 16-yard fumble return for a touchdown by senior Erik Oshaben on a kickoff.

But when the Rayders weren't forcing turnovers, they struggled at times to contain the Elks' dual-threat quarterback, Alec Trautman, who finished with 255 yards and two touchdowns through the air and another 52 yards and a touchdown on the ground.

The struggles were especially pronounced in the third quarter, when Charlevoix allowed the Elks to chip away at their 37-point lead with two quick touchdowns that gave Elk Rapids some life late.

"I don't know whether it was the youth of our team or the lead we had at the half, but we didn't come out focused and ready to play in the second half, and it showed," Bindi said. "We weren't tackling or executing at the level we should be, and because of that we gave up more points than we should have and we let them back in the game.

"It's something we struggled with all last year. Great teams finish games, and until we can play at a consistent level we've got to keep on working to improve."

Overall, the show of offensive firepower bodes well for Charlevoix's showdown with archrival Boyne City at home next Thursday.

The Ramblers are coming off a 38-14 win over Mendon in their season opener and will present a tough challenge after beating the Rayders 42-0 last year, but Charlevoix (1-0) showed it has weapons in the opener tonight and is hopeful that Boss and Williams might be able to suit up with another week of rest.

relatively small, the Club quickly realized the potential to do something unique for the community.

"We decided that if we're going to raise funds to replace the board, let's go big," Club President Patrick Faust said. "Let's build something that will be special for the kids and will be something that the community can really take pride in."

With extensive support from the community through several fundraisers, donations and ad sales, the Club was able to get enough of the board's cost paid off in order for it to be erected in time for the 2014 season.

"We were just overwhelmed by the community support, and they really made it possible for us to do this," Faust said. "We've always said that this really isn't our board, it's the community's board, because it was their generosity that gave us this opportunity."

The board, with its video monitor, has not only added to the gametime atmosphere but also Charlevoix's curriculum as well, as the school now has a full class dedicated to learning video production techniques and operation of the board.

And, when the time came to name the scoreboard, there was only one person on everyone's minds, Faust said.

"With everything he did for Charlevoix and for the community, there really isn't a more deserving person," Faust said. "It was an easy choice, and we're very happy to play a part in getting Coach Carey honored in this way."

While much of the scoreboard has been paid off, some of the balance still remains. If you would like to donate to the scoreboard fund, you can send those donations to the Rayder Gridiron Club at P.O. Box 754, Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

Nicole Hart finished with 13 kills and four blocks for Charlevoix and Beth Veenstra chipped in 13 kills, six aces and nine digs.

Julia Doskoch and Ali Jarema led the Rayder defense with 33 and 28 digs, respectively, and Grace Sutherland finished with 48 assists.

Other notable perfor-

JVs hold on for win in season opener

EVART — It didn't come easily, but Charlevoix's JV football team picked up a season-opening win on the road in dramatic fashion with a 14-8 defeat of host Evart last Thursday.

With the scored tied 8-8 midway through the fourth quarter, Charlevoix drove the field, setting up Cam Musilek to run in the go-ahead touchdown from 13 yards out.

With the lead in hand for the first time all night, the Rayder defense held on, Evart's next possession to secure the victory.

Evart had control of the game early, taking an 8-0 lead on a late first quarter touchdown and two-point conversion, but Charlevoix quarterback Ty Fry answered in the second quarter with a 22-yard touchdown pass to Garrett Seese, and connected with Robbie Morgridge on the two-point conversion to tie the game up.

Charlevoix coach Brian Certa had high praise for both Fry in his first game as a starter and the team's defense.

"Ty showed great lead ership, and I give him much credit for tonight's victory," Certa said. "Defensively the team stepped it up after the first quarter to shut down the Evart offense."

Musilek, Kyle Bauch and Collin Davis were the leading tacklers for a Rayder defense that held Evart scoreless for the final three quarters of the game.

Charlevoix's JV squad travels to Boyne City for a road clash on Wednesday, Sept. 2, starting at 6 p.m., and travel to Coleman on Saturday, Sept. 12 as part of a four game road stand to open the season.

Once again, goalkeepers Jacob Harrod and Collin Turkleson split time in net for Charlevoix, with both playing well.

Coach Matye said that platooning the two players has worked well for the Rayders so far this season.

"The most important thing is that they both like each other, and when one is on the bench, he's rooting for the other guy out there to succeed," Coach Matye said. "They're both talented guys who understand the situation and they work well together, which is all you can ask for."

That unselfishness has been key all over the field for Charlevoix this season, as Charlevoix has maintained good team chemistry despite having to integrate several talented attacking players into one unit.

"It's definitely important, because if you've got guys walking up the field not knowing if their teammates have their backs, it's not going to go well for you," Coach Matye said. "We do our best to keep all our players involved, and we've had different things like trips to the beach and team dinners to help build those bonds."

And, as Charlevoix has learned, unselfish play has positive effects on the field.

"What our players have learned is that unselfish play early really opens things up throughout the game," Charlevoix assistant Glenn Wachler said. "If defenders are having to stop and think about where the ball is going, and respect the pass, it makes it a lot easier to take them one-on-one."

"In general, getting everyone involved really puts a lot of pressure on the defense."

The Rayders (4-0-1, 1-0 LMC) have one more game before Labor Day, a Thursday road clash with Kalkaska that doubles as an LMC league game.

Julie Thompson swims the Straits of Mackinac

ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

Some people walked Charlevoix's bridge on Labor Day. Some walked across the Mighty Mac. But 84 adventurous athletes swam the Straits under the Mackinac Bridge while the thousands of walkers were strolling above. Julie Thompson of Charlevoix was one of them.

Diminutive in stature, Thompson is as competitive and tough as they come. She joined an all-male team of seven, one of 12 teams that started their odyssey on the Lake Huron side of the bridge in St. Ignace and ended it six hours and four miles, as the crow flies, later on the opposite shore beneath Fort Michilimackinac or wherever they first touched the Lower Peninsula. At 5 a.m. there had been heavy rain with some lightning. The swim would have been cancelled if the lightning had not subsided. What Julie and her fellow swimmers did face, was a roiling body of water, fog and light rain, winds out of the south west at 15 to 20 mph and water temperature about 65-66 degrees Fahrenheit.

Thompson heard about the historic event a year ago and started training last October. Working in 1 1/2 hour practice sessions is not easy when you have commitments to a job and family. But Thompson didn't give up her determination to participate and succeed. She trained at the Charlevoix Pool during the winter and didn't start lake practice until July when the water warmed up. Six weeks prior to the race, she attended a Mighty Mac Training at Glen, south of Saugatuck.

"It was a wake-up call for me," she said. "The exertion of swimming for three hours in rolling waves made me sick afterward. I realized I had to get seriously conditioned."

Thompson started going for distance and went out on both Lakes Michigan and Charlevoix in all kinds of weather.

"I swam mainly off Michigan Beach," Thompson said. "I had See THOMPSON, page A10

City Council votes to accept FAA grant

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Municipal Airport will see improvements to its airport runway design in the fall of 2016 after council approved a resolution, on Sept. 8, to accept the Federal Aviation Administration grant.

The $96,000 grant will fund the runway friction and grooving design, runway lighting replacement design and sidewalk removal in the runway protection zone, of runway 27. The FAA will pay $86,400 and the Michigan Department of Transportation will pay $4,800, which is 95 percent of the project, the city will match 5 percent, which is $4,800.

Charlevoix resident Chip Terrell asked the city to look at what it is spending at the airport. As a city taxpayer he is concerned how much money is being spent by the city to keep the airport functioning.

"I would like to know how much money the city has sunk into the airport and if we are getting a return on that investment," Terrell said to council. "I hope city council will take a concerted effort over the next year and look at what's wrong there."

Terrell said at the last airport advisory committee meeting that it is clear there are some things wrong at the airport. He said Councilmember Bill Supernaw may be wondering what's wrong

Tap Room owners claim business being singled out on city ordinances

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 - lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Owners of the Bridge Street Tap Room and the Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company are complaining to city council members that neighboring building owner — Thomas Gualdoni — is harassing them and making false complaints about their business.

Phil Parr, co-owner of the Round Lake Group LLC, which operates the Tap Room and brewery, spoke to city council members on behalf of co-owners Rich Bergmann, Adam Engleman and Aaron Hagen, who is running against Jeff Porter for the Ward 1 council seat in November.

Parr said the city police visited their business three times about code violations during the Labor Day weekend. Parr said he had to violate the "off-street loading requirements ordinance" because passengers from the Beaver Island Boat Company were parked in Tap Room/brewery parking spots.

"The extensive traffic from the Beaver Island Boat Company this weekend had the whole lane blocked off," Parr said. "There were two people parked in our spot. I told the officer I would love to go put the truck in the parking spot we pay for, but we cannot because

'Friends of the Groom' comes to Christ Episcopal Church of Charlevoix

CHARLEVOIX — Friends of the Groom is coming to Christ Episcopal Church of Charlevoix, 200 State St., and the public is invited to participate in a free daylong workshop on drama and storytelling in worship and education from 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 19.

The theater's three actors will present a day-long workshop for all ages. Attendees will be invited to participate in a variety of drama and storytelling activities, including five ways to perform a story in church and using drama in worship and education. The workshop also will include techniques for bringing scripture alive in worship, along with practical information about where to find resources for Christian theater and storytelling.

Friends of the Groom is an interdenominational theater group from Cincinnati committed to proclaiming the Christian message with a blend of humor, story, challenging content and memorable scenes. They rehearse at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Terrace Park, Ohio and are supported by fees, grants, and donations from individuals and churches. They have traveled the world in performance including visits to China, Europe, Canada, South America and throughout the U.S.

This event is underwritten by the Christ Episcopal Church Taylor Family Endowment Fund. Through the generosity of the Taylor family, Christ Episcopal Church is able to provide faith-based programs at no cost to the community.

There will be a complimentary lunch will be served.

City Council OKs two electric department purchases

LONNIE ALLEN

(231) 547-6558 • allen@charvoix.com

CHARLEVOIX — Repairs to the Westenbrook substation and the purchase of cable — to continue the construction of Charlevoix's underground primary electrical system — was presented by Don Swem, electric/water superintendent to City Council members on Sept. 8.

Swem recommended City Council members purchase 5,500-foot of cable from the Kerite Corporation because of its superior quality. The cable will cost the city $2.55 per foot, which comes to $14,025. The price is more than 7 percent cheaper than the same cable they purchased last year from the Kerite Corporation. Other companies offer cheaper cable and Swem presented a quote for comparable cable that was 37 percent less expensive than the Kerite brand, but explained to council the main selling point of the Kerite brand is it has never suffered a failure due to manufacture defects and it is easy to work with even in extreme cold temperatures.

"It's the best cable out there in my opinion," Swem said. "The way I look at it is if we have even one problem underground we are going to spend $5,000 trying to find it and fixing it will cost double that. I just feel Kerite is a good thing to stick with. We have used them for a long time."

Mayor Gabe Campbell appreciated Swem for making it a clear choice for council to make.

"You did a good job of spelling it out and made it understandable for the council," Campbell said.

Swem also asked council members to approve the extra costs to the repairs at the Westenbrook substation. In the spring of 2014, a contractor identified problems with some of the voltage regulators, with one being so bad they recommended the city fix it before powering the station back up to prevent it from possibly exploding, Swem said.

Also bad bushings and a bad pressure relief valve was found on the transformer, he added. A bid from Premier Power Maintenance to do the work was approved by council for $38,841 and they showed up in early August to do the work. To be better prepared for the repair work Swem pre-authorized the purchase of parts ahead of time.

Swem had to purchase the parts from the manufacturer Siemens. The extra cost totaled $22,936 for parts, transformer pressure relief valve, oil disposal and for the company to leave and return because the city was waiting on another part. The new cost for the repair work is $58,577.

"Siemens told us we had to wait on the part and I couldn't have them sitting around for three days," Swem said. "I wish we didn't have to pay for that cost, but the work had to be done. We got all three regulators fixed and we got both sides of the substation back in operation. This whole situation caused us to have only half a substation and if anything would of gone wrong we would of lost (power) to the whole south half of the city."

Duty to their constituents

For the past eight months, I have had the great opportunity to watch Charlevoix city government in action on the first and third Monday of each month. Some of the meetings have been, routine, some very spirited and political, while others have appeared to accomplish nothing, but through it all I believe the political process in Charlevoix might actually be working. I'm pretty sure some of you most likely are questioning my intellectual capabilities at this moment. But what if our elected officials are doing exactly what they're supposed to be doing? What if they are looking out for the people that they represent and passing laws that best embody those interests?

A SCRIBE'S VIEW
Lonnie Allen

The mere suggestion that city council could actually be doing their job is laughable to some in this community, especially after the skydiving debate.

However, I ask you to look past the recent political circus of who is against who and consider the purpose of a representative government.

Isn't the purpose to elect individuals to represent residents in consolidating their different interests into logically connected laws?

If this is true, then a single individual is elected to represent a wide variety of people, ideals and interests, which means that person's job is to best reflect those people, ideals and interests when drafting laws.

I think the biggest disappointment we make in trusting our representatives is to expect them to act against their own self-interest. A council member's self-interest is usually the collective interest of their constituency.

City council has a responsibility to the people of the city and it's perfectly reasonable for Jeff Porter to ask about possible code violations after receiving calls from Ward 1 constituents, who, according to electronic correspondences between city staff, feel the business owner is using intimidating tactics against neighboring tenants to silence their complaints.

It is also reasonable for Shirley Gibson and Mayor

Gabe Campbell to make sure the city and a business have proper liability coverage when operating on city property. No one wants to see a repeat of the fireworks incident in the late 1990s.

Gibson, Porter and Campbell are simply doing what they were elected to do. The problem is, it is a job that only seems to bring division when business disagrees with actions that are taken. We all want economic success, but at what cost? Does the city council add fireplaces in parks and expand marina docks? Does the city council allow behavior from business owners that cause neighboring tenants distress? Does the city council never question safety and liability for fear of being called anti-business? Does this city council forget about each Charlevoix resident — seasonal or year-round — for profit?

I hope not, because when that happens the people and this city will lose.

I may not always like how city council meetings are handled, but the first responsibility for an elected official should be to the voters who put them in office. And from what I know of the last Charlevoix city election, it appears these council members are doing what they were elected to do.

LETTERS POLICY

Readers are encouraged to write letters to the editor addressing pertinent topics of community interest.

The Courier editor reserves the right to edit or reject letters for length, correct grammar, libel and content.

Letters to the editor must be signed by the author, and the name of the author will appear with published letters.

Letters should only have one author, but we will accept up to three separate signatures on a letter. We do not publish unsigned letters.

LETTERS to the editor

Thank you for standing up for Charlevoix the Beautiful

Editor:

I'd like to take a moment and thank the silent majority of Charlevoix. I thank you for your sensibility and for not joining the mob mentality of "us versus them" during this summer's heated city council meetings. However, it's time for you to show your support for Charlevoix and voice your support for those that have the courage to protect the safety and financial well-being of our town: namely mayor Gabe Campbell, councilman Leon Peron, councilwoman Shirley Gibson and councilman Jeff Porter. I thank each of them for their dedication in the midst of some nasty name calling and mud-slinging. If they didn't want to keep Charlevoix better and beautiful, they wouldn't continue to run and win re-election.

I know this community and regardless of your personal financial status or ability to vote in the town in which you pay taxes, you care about Charlevoix being a vibrant, fiscally smart and sound community. It's the experienced members on city council who are continuing to protect our interests. We need new infrastructure for safe and clean drinking water. We need nice streets, a working sewer system and forethought about cleaner and better ways to power our homes. We need great educators. We need businesses that support families. We do not need people rehearsing the fireplace or marina slips, telling us it will bring jobs.

I thank the silent majority — I appreciate how you may not want a client or customer to know your political beliefs. But the time is now to show your support and continue making a difference in Charlevoix. If you pay taxes here, let your voice be heard. Please call your representative. Express your thoughts and wishes for Charlevoix. Let's continue to keep our town safe, financially responsible and beautiful.

A heartfelt thank you for supporting arts

Editor:

As my California friends would say, "to say the least, you are the most." The generosity of the Charlevoix State Bank has enabled the Charlevoix Circle of Arts to bring rewarding experiences to our viewing public this summer, as well as a series of arts appreciation classes for young people that has afforded them to experience the enjoyment that art can bring.

On behalf of the Circle family, its board members, staff, volunteers and friends, our sincere thanks. In part, our efforts are about art, and in part about community and so are you — partner.

As a longtime seasonal resident, I am most impressed with how the Charlevoix State Bank has participated in a wide variety of community affairs over the years. If memory is correct, such legacy is a long time one, going back at least to your former chairman Bob Bridge. Present management has carried it forward in great style. Your support is much appreciated. You help make Charlevoix beautiful.

Very truly yours,
Bob Kline, president

Charlevoix's 1958 winning football season kept the area in suspense

As the 1958 school season progressed, Charlevoix could hardly believe what began to unfold on Kipke Field and in neighboring towns week after week until the suspense became almost unbearable. Would they do it? Could they do it?

The varsity football team was heading for an unprecedented unbeaten season. These seasons had been accomplished before, but never in this manner. One by one the opponents fell like dominoes in ignominious defeat. By season's end, the Charlevoix team was both unbeaten and unscored upon, having amassed a total of 321 points to their opponents' grand total of... zero. This resulted in the team being ranked the number one class C-D team in Michigan by United Press International's panel of coaches. Coach Don Carey, one of the finest in Charlevoix's athletic history, stands at far left in the back row. He was recently honored by the association of his name with the new electronic scoreboard at Kipke Field.

Beaver Island businesses gearing up for fall tourism

BEAVER ISLAND — The island is gearing up for fall tourists by being... well, what it is: remote, pristine and ecologically engaging. Beaver Island is the most remote, inhabited island in the continental U.S. with approximately 35 percent of the island being state forest land with more than 100 miles of scenic roads, two-track trails and beaches to explore during the changing seasons.

The newly developed Beaver Island Birding Trail encompasses more than 12,000 acres of state and township lands, as well as four Little Traverse Conservancy preserves including the 28-acre Little Sandy Bay, 230-acre Miller's Marsh, 28-acre George and Althea Petritz Preserve and the 112-acre Barney's Lake. A vast diversity of habitats can be found around the island, and in all nearly three dozen birding sites have been identified to provide ideal viewing conditions.

September also is an excellent time for pelagic birds — gulls, cormorants and other waterfowl — on the Great Lakes. On Sept. 26 and 27, the Beaver Island Pelagic Birding Tour with Brian Allen and Darrel Lawson offers the potential for viewing fall migrants and perhaps even a western rarity or two. This tour provides ample opportunities to view pelagic birds on Lake Michigan and fall migrants on the island. Participation in the tour is limited to 30 people, and reservations are required by Sept. 12.

While on the island, also be on the lookout for countless butterflies, as well as reptiles and amphibians. During the fall, autumn-colored Monarch butterflies begin their fall migration south from Canada and the Upper Peninsula, with sightings common in the early part of the season. Flora lovers will be on the lookout for a federally-endangered species with a limited distribution on Beaver Island, the Michigan monkey-flower. This plant grows only on the wet banks and in the water of muddy or sandy free-flowing streams.

For those looking to get out on the water, kayaking and stand-up paddle boarding are increasingly popular activities in Paradise Bay, or along the shoreline and coves of Beaver Island. Or perhaps enjoy some fishing as Beaver Island's four inland lakes provide options to catch pan fish, perch, pike and large mouth bass. Beaver Island also is an ideal locale for hunting, specifically whitetail deer and wild turkey.

Thanks to a successful quality deer management program on Beaver Island, the population of whitetail deer continues to increase. In 2011, "three legal points on one side" antler restrictions became the law. Quality deer management principals have created a more balanced herd, with a much improved opportunity to harvest a mature buck. The number of doe tags varies each year, but there are usually plenty to satisfy demand.

Visitors will find two established campgrounds on Beaver Island, both owned and operated by the Island townships and open until the end of November.

There are no reservations at either campground, with the primitive sites available on a first-come, first serve basis. Both campgrounds provide pit toilets and hand pumps; there are no showers at either facility.

For those wishing to bring their own bikes, kayaks and other outdoor gear, the Beaver Island Boat Company offers transport for such things to the island for day trips, weekend getaways and extended seasonal stays.

For information on Beaver Island, including lodging properties, visit BeaverIsland.org.

OBITUARIES

Michael Dawson Miller, 71

Michael Dawson Miller, 71, of East Jordan, passed away Tuesday, September 1, 2015, at Charlevoix Area Hospital. He was born June 8, 1944, in Petoskey to Lawrence Duane and Ann Dawson. He grew up in East Jordan graduating from East Jordan High School in 1962. Michael attended North Central Michigan College before entering the US Army during the Vietnam War. He flew helicopters on two tours of duty and was discharged as a Standardization Instruction Pilot. Following his tours in Vietnam, he served in the National Guard.

He worked for Boyne USA, most recently as Head of Convention Services at The Inn of Bay Harbor. He attended the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix, and was a member of the Charlevoix Area Buffs Flying Club.

On November 24, 1984, he married Alice L. Pletz at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

Michael is survived by his wife, Alice Pletz-Miller; son, Kevin Dawson Miller of Boulder, Colo.; grandsons, Dawson and Wyatt; sister, Melissa Hite of Canton. He was preceded in death by his father, Lawrence Miller; stepfather, Jay M. Hite; and mother, Ann Dawson Miller Hite Bishee.

Memorial service will be 2 p.m. Saturday, September 12, at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix, where visitation will begin at 1 p.m. The Reverend Neil Wilson will officiate.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix Area Buffs Flying Club, P.O. Box 43, Charlevoix, MI 49720; or to the First Congregational Church, 101 State Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Someone will drive home in a 2015 Ford Escape or have an extra $15,000 spending money in their pocket at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce 25th Annual Car Raffle party from 6-9 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 16, at Shanahan's Barn at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce hosting the 25th Annual Car Raffle

In less than two weeks, someone will drive home in a sleek and shiny 2015 Ford Escape or have an extra $15,000 spending money in their pocket.

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce will host its 25th Annual Car Raffle at the raffle drawing party from 6-9 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept.

16, at Shanahan's Barn at the Charlevoix Country Club.

The party will be catered by The Bistro at the Charlevoix Country Club. Tickets are available for $100 each or three for $200. They will be sold up until an hour before the event. Each ticket admits two to the evening's raffle party, which includes front row seats to the action, appetizers, door prizes, live DJ, cash bar and more. You need not be present to win.

While only one lucky winner will drive home with a new car, second place will receive $500 and third place will receive $250.

Those unable to purchase a raffle ticket, may still join the car raffle drawing party. Admission is $30 per person and includes heavy hors d'oeuvres and door prize eligibility.

To purchase a raffle ticket or RSVP to attend the party, call (231) 547-2101, or visit charlevoix.org.

Changes to Harbor Health and Fitness Center

CHARLEVOIX — Harbor Health and Fitness Center has undergone some changes beginning with a new manager, Annette Beer. The center has also added and updated an array of classes.

Beer is an ACE certified personal trainer as well as a fitness instructor. She has been part of the health and fitness industry for more than 25 years. She teaches numerous classes including: gentle fitness, total body conditioning, circuit training, beginner/intermediate boot camp and advanced boot camp, which is her favorite. Beer will soon be adding a Slide and Glide special class, which will be held on occasions beginning in the fall.

Marci Palajac, Brandon Weaver, Amy Speegle, Julie Burgess, Terry Bergmann and Don and Len Jess, all offer classes that include strength training, yoga, martial arts, high intensity interval training, choreographed step classes, and more.

Charlevoix Main Street Program: Seeking public input during research process

The Charlevoix Main Street Program has begun the research process for the possible installation of an ice skating rink located in East Park in downtown Charlevoix. Working with the Michigan Main Street Program, volunteers from the design committee have identified this opportunity as a potential project during the winter months where downtown businesses do not see as many customers throughout the course of a day.

into downtown during these slower winter months; an outdoor ice rink would attract both visitors and area residents to the downtown district while at the same time providing a family friendly activity for everyone to enjoy.

Volunteers are seeking public input regarding this potential project and have begun communicating with local residents and merchants about this possible new addition to downtown. Community members are being asked to respond to an online survey and there will be additional opportunities to comment publicly as the Main Street team discusses this idea with the Recreation Advisory Board, the Planning Commission and Charlevoix City Council.

"Our community greatly values its public space and it is important for everyone to have an opportunity to voice their opinion about this potential Main Street project," said Main Street/DDA director, Annie Doyle.

"This project is in the initial research and design phase and is based heavily on public input. It will be not implemented without public support."

"We are trying to create a gathering space that will be an economic engine to businesses in Charlevoix", said local architect and Charlevoix Main Street project leader, Robert Jess, who has proposed the following design for the consideration of the public. It includes a rectangular space on the top tier of East Park.

"Charlevoix is a tough market in the winter, so we are exploring the option of providing a reason for people to utilize the beautiful park space in the winter. As it is now it feels as if the park is only designed for three seasons," Jess added.

In addition, as part of the Michigan Main Street program, Charlevoix Main Street would be eligible for project grant funding.

"This potential project could provide downtown family entertainment, continued foot traffic during the winter months, and also contribute to the continued beautification of the Charlevoix community," Kirby Dipert, downtown business owner and Main Street/DDA board member.

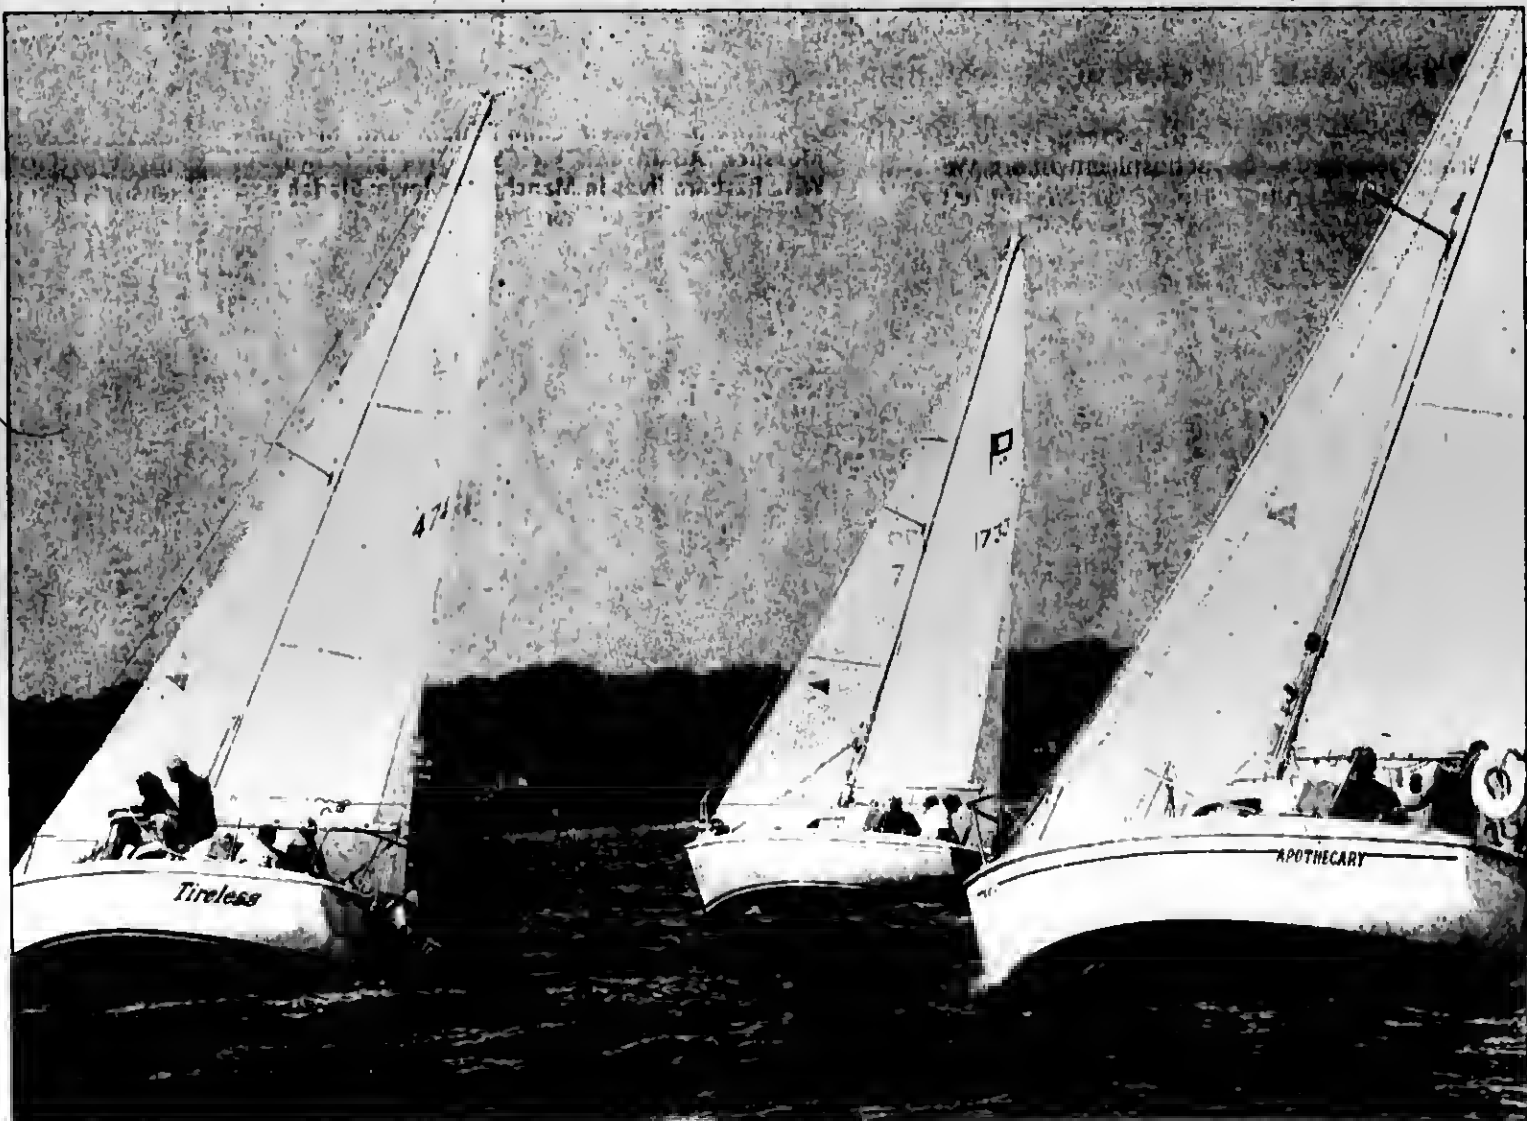

The Charlevoix Main Street program is made up of volunteers throughout the Charlevoix community.

Charlevoix Public Library hosts Artists in Action series

CHARLEVOIX — The lineup for the Artists in Action series, at the Charlevoix Public Library, which highlights local artistic talents is in place. Artists will be in the library's main lobby demonstrating their art and answering questions about their craftsmanship from 3 p.m. on the third Thursday of the month. "The library's goal with the Artist Series is to celebrate local artists and share interesting techniques with our patrons," said Talia Wackner, adult services librarian.

Multimedia artist Edith Pair will be on hand Sept. 17 for painting classes. Pair is the owner of the Ellair Gallery in downtown Charlevoix. She is a graduate of the prestigious School of the Art Institute of Chicago and teaches classes locally. "All my work is original, one-of-a-kind and all hand made," Pair said. "I complete each piece with my signature 'pear on a plate' hidden somewhere in each piece. I absolutely love color and contemporary vibrancy. I am fascinated and inspired by the Pop-Art era." Join Margie Guyot on Oct. 15 for a demonstration of simple still life painting in oils as she explains the basics. Guyot is a local artist who is involved with Charlevoix Circle of Arts. On Nov. 19, librarians Linda Adams and Audrey Shapiro will show patrons how to make their own book wreath. This is a new version of a popular demonstration held in the past using recycled book pages. For more information, visit www.charlevoixlibrary.org.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan offers volunteer training

CHARLEVOIX — Hospice of Northwest Michigan will be conducting volunteer training from 9 a.m. - 1 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 3, and Saturday, Oct. 10, at the Health Department in Charlevoix, which is located at 220 W. Garfield. The training includes an introduction to Hospice, We Honor Veterans Program, bereavement, spiritual care, the role of the medical social worker, advanced directives for end of life decisions, and nursing and palliative care: nutrition and comfort care measures, infection control and blood borne pathogens and emergency procedures. Direct patient and family care volunteers must undergo a TB test, a criminal background check, fingerprinting and pass a drug screen in addition to completing both days of the training. Anyone with at least two hours a month that you would like to donate to Hospice of Northwest Michigan or register for upcoming sessions, call Amy Wieland at (231) 547-7659.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan in partnership with the local Health Department of Northwest Michigan provides comprehensive physical, emotional and spiritual care to individuals and their families during and following life-limiting illness. Hospice of Northwest Michigan supports the philosophy and practice of Hospice Care and serves as a resource for end-of-life care in the community. Hospice of Northwest Michigan welcomes anyone who may want to support their organization by becoming a volunteer, board member or donor to contact them. More information about the We Honor Veterans Program and Hospice of Northwest Michigan may be found at hospicenwm.org, WeHonorVeterans.org, or by calling (800) 551-4140. Hospice of Northwest Michigan is a 501 (C) 3 non-profit community based hospice, located at 220 W. Garfield in Charlevoix, Michigan, serving Antrim, Charlevoix, and Emmet counties.

Little Traverse Youth Choir tryouts begin

PETOSKEY — A new season of choral music performances begins Thursday, Sept. 17, for the Little Traverse Youth Choirs. The Youth Choirs invite young singers from throughout Northern Michigan to join one of the choirs. There are two choirs to choose from: The "Touring Choir" is directed by Owen James and is open to all Northern Michigan young people between the ages of 13 and 19 years. No prior singing experience is necessary. All one needs is a voice and the desire to discover the sense of community that comes naturally from building friendships between and among people from a variety of countries and a variety of cultures, through music. Young people interested in learning more about the "Touring Choir" are invited to attend this season's first open rehearsal from 6:30-8 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 17, at the First Presbyterian Church, 501 East Mitchell St., across from the Petoskey District Library. Questions about the Touring Choir may be directed to ojames@littletraverseyouthchoir.org. Maria Pierpont, new "Treble Choir" director, invites singers between the ages of 7 and 13 to attend this season's first open rehearsal for young singers from 5:30-6:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 17, at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, 1020 East Mitchell St., Petoskey. Questions about the Treble Choir may be directed to mpierpont@littletraverseyouthchoir.org. No prepared audition song is necessary for either open rehearsal. Just come and sing with the group. To learn more about both choirs, see www.littletraverseyouthchoir.org. Application and release forms are available on the website.

Great Lakes Energy People Fund application deadline approaching

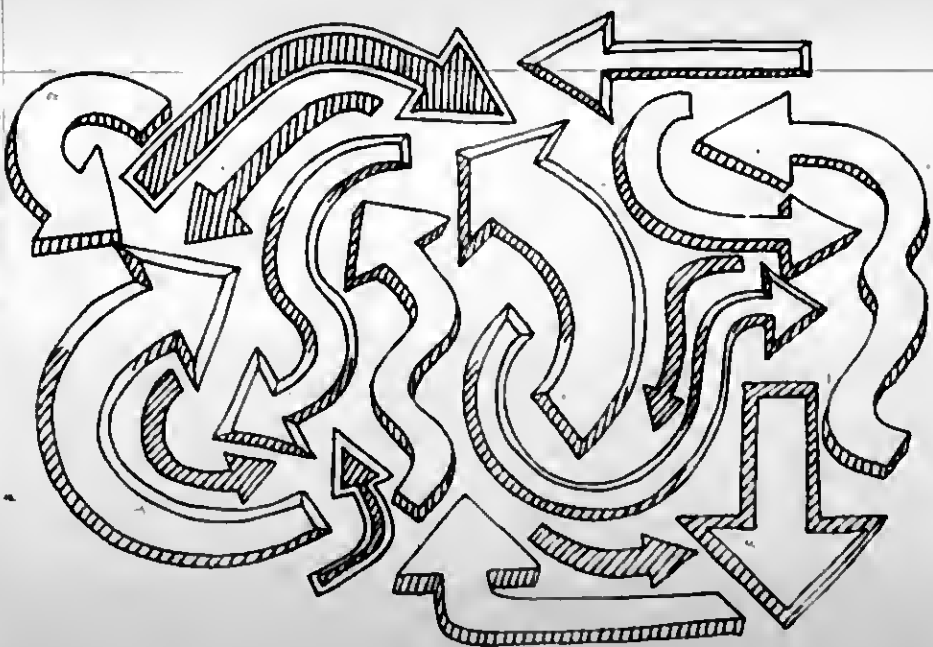

BOYNE CITY — The Great Lakes Energy People Fund is accepting grant applications from nonprofit organizations throughout its local service area. The upcoming grant application deadline is on Thursday, Oct. 1. The People Fund is supported solely by Great Lakes Energy members who allow their electric cooperative to round up their bill each month to the next dollar. Since 1999 more than $2.67 million in grants have been awarded to charitable and community organizations throughout Great Lakes Energy's 26-county service area, which stretches from Kalamazoo to the Mackinac Straits. The People Fund awarded a little more than $168,000 in grants in 2014. Nonprofit organizations that serve communities in the GLE service area are eligible. Program guidelines and a grant request can be found online at glakes.com. More grant opportunities also will be available in 2016.

TAP ROOM

there is two Beaver Island cars that just got off the ferry there."

Parr said police constantly visit the two businesses to respond to noise complaints and claimed the city code allows them to play the music on nights that Gauldoni said violates the city code.

"The fact is there is live music all over the town on Friday nights," Parr said. "Enforcing the code needs to be enforced on everywhere else. There is music in the park and music at the businesses on Sunday nights. The second we something there is a call to the city. We are being singled out."

Police Chief Gerard Doan said the Tap Room and brewery are not being singled out as the owners claim.

Doan provided the list of calls dealing with noise for the month of August. There were nine calls about noise complaints during that month. Only two of those calls were made about the Tap Room, one was for the East Park Tavern and another for a neighbor playing loud music. Other calls included a child screaming, kids being loud, barking dogs, and people talking outside an apartment.

Doan said he welcomes the residents of this city to call his department when there are complaints to make.

Doan also said it is up to the officer to make the determination to write a citation.

"If the officer feels the music is too loud they will issue a citation," Doan said.

Doan explained that noise complaints could be valid complaints when the officer is on scene.

"Just because the officer doesn't make a citation doesn't mean nothing was done or the business was not doing anything wrong," Doan said. "Most likely the individual and or business complied with the officers request to lower the music, no citation needed to be issued."

Charlevoix resident Richard Spring, who told council members that he and his wife have been residents for the last two years and support local businesses including the owners of the Tap Room and brewery.

"(Owners) have brought two very nice eateries to Charlevoix and a great deal of quality music to our community," Spring said. "It's been our pleasure to not leave town to find good food and entertainment from two family friendly pubs."

Spring commended the Round Lake Group on their ability to provide jobs to many servers, bartenders, cooks and other hospitality staff in the area. Spring made claims that the brewery and Tap Room have provided a venue for struggling musicians who otherwise would not have a place to perform.

"There are so many musicians that would be struggling right now if it weren't for these two added venues in Charlevoix," Spring said.

Spring went on to claim — on his visits — the Tap Room and brewery has never had anyone break the rules or cause problems, even though the businesses have had trouble preventing patrons from drinking in the park.

"Not once in the numerous times that we've been at both Bridge Street tap room and Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company have we ever seen anyone misbehave," Spring said. "These businesses respect our town too much to ever let that happen."

Gauldoni, who has brought his complaints about the Tap Room and brewery to the city, is surprised about the claims of no wrong doing by the people who own the Tap Room and brewery. Gauldoni couldn't believe the Round Lake Group LLC owners said they are the targets of harassment.

"I'm surprised the Bridge Street Tap Room is considering themselves victims in this case," Gauldoni said. "We're the landlords to stores on Bridge Street and we have a suite we rent, which suffer from their behavior."

"We also have a lower level apartment we no longer rent out because of the activity of the Tap Room next door," Gauldoni added. "We purchased the building long before they were there and invested a considerable amount of money into the property. We did so because there were ordinances in place to protect us."

Gauldoni explained to council that he tolerated many of the activities for a number of months until it became excessive and he felt he had to protect his investment.

"When they are in violation of the (noise ordinance) you cannot watch TV in the living room," Gauldoni said. "We are asking the city to monitor and take action on the ordinances. We only call to enforce ordinances. They paint a very nice picture of what they are doing and they are an asset, but not at the expense of my guests and myself. All we are asking is that they contain their sound and follow the city ordinances."

City Manager Mark Heydlauff said the city is working with each party involved to find a applicable solution, but believes the harassment claims made by the owners of the Tap Room and brewery is going a bit far.

"I don't see any harassment from the city," Heydlauff said. "I don't see how you can make that claim with never having a citation issued."

friends kayak next to me, or I swam alone with a floating buoy on a line tied around my waist, a safety precaution that Eric — her husband — rigged up for me."

Thompson, donning a wetsuit, swam the course free style the whole way. Each boat pulled a dinghy and a floating "Feeding Buoy." Team swimmers were instructed to swim between the bow of their boat and the dinghy — a 50 yard span — and go to the Feeding Buoy every 30 minutes to take water, Gatorade or Power Gel or any nutrition they chose to bring. Thompson found that the interruption to the rhythm of the swim and the treading water at the buoy caused her to get cold.

Other than that discomfort, she reports not having too much trouble.

"The adrenaline kicks in, I guess," Thompson said.

Only once were swimmers instructed to get into their boats, when a freighter passed through the course.

"I sang a lot of songs to myself," she said. "Six hours is a long time to be out there by yourself."

She used swim fins only in the final 20 minutes of the six hours, although they were acceptable swimming gear.

"I wanted to do it as naturally as I could," she said. Why did she do it?

"I knew it had been seven years since the last swim held in honor of Big Mac's 50th birthday," Thompson said. "I didn't know if it would happen again. And, I have always been in awe of the Mackinac Bridge.

I was up for the challenge."

The swim was not only a celebration of the Big Mac's 58 years, but it was also a fundraiser for the Lakeshore Habitat for Humanity. Each swimmer had to raise $2,800 beyond his/her $200 entry fee.

"I am thankful to my friends and family for being so generous," she said. "It relieved that part of the burden and allowed me to concentrate on training."

Approximately $400,000 was awarded to Habitat for Humanity's Revitalization Tour as a result of the event.

Mother of three, Thompson is competitive by nature. Her husband, Eric, while supportive of her endeavors, is not so much. But daughter Sophia, must have inherited the gene from her mother. You may remember her as the 14-year-old student who advanced to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C. last spring.

She was ready to swim with her mother until she found out that the age limit was 18.

Will she do it again? Emphatically, No! But Thompson is understandably proud of her accomplishment.

with the airport?

"I think there is a lot wrong Councilmember Supernaw," Terrell said. "It's not making money."

Councilmember Shirley Gibson agreed with Terrell.

"We will be looking at (costs) at the committee level," Gibson said. "I believe the city should get out of being the airport FBO — Fixed Based Operator."

Supernaw wanted to know if the city is losing money at the airport. City manager Mark Heydlauff said he does not know if they are actually losing money.

"I think the airport historically has been, break even at best," Heydlauff said. "The airport does at time require a subsidy from the general fund."

Gibson said the airport most likely still owes the electric department $200,000 to purchase fuel when it took over operations in 2011.

"I don't believe we have paid them back," Gibson said.

Gibson also pointed out that approximately another $500,000 has been transferred over from the city budget to the airport during the last four years.

"I don't know what funds," Gibson said.

Councilmember Shane

Cole was around when the airport was taken over by the city and said that the discussion also is a concern of his.

"The airport hasn't evolved out as we hoped, obviously," Cole said. "There is some credence to what we are discussing right now, and that is what the committee needs to address to find out what will be beneficial for us."

Terrell said all he is asking for as a tax payer is for the city get something back on its investment at the airport.

"Make some money," Terrell said. "Get your fair return for what we put into it."

Charlevoix resident Bob Timms said the city makes money on the gasoline it sells at the airport.

"If that is true then show me the muncy," Terrell said. "Show me the money and I will be quiet about the issue."

CHARLEVOIX — The spectacular fall color of the Pictured Rocks area in the Upper Peninsula will be showcased in photographs taken by members of the Charlevoix Photography Club in a presentation at the Charlevoix Public Library.

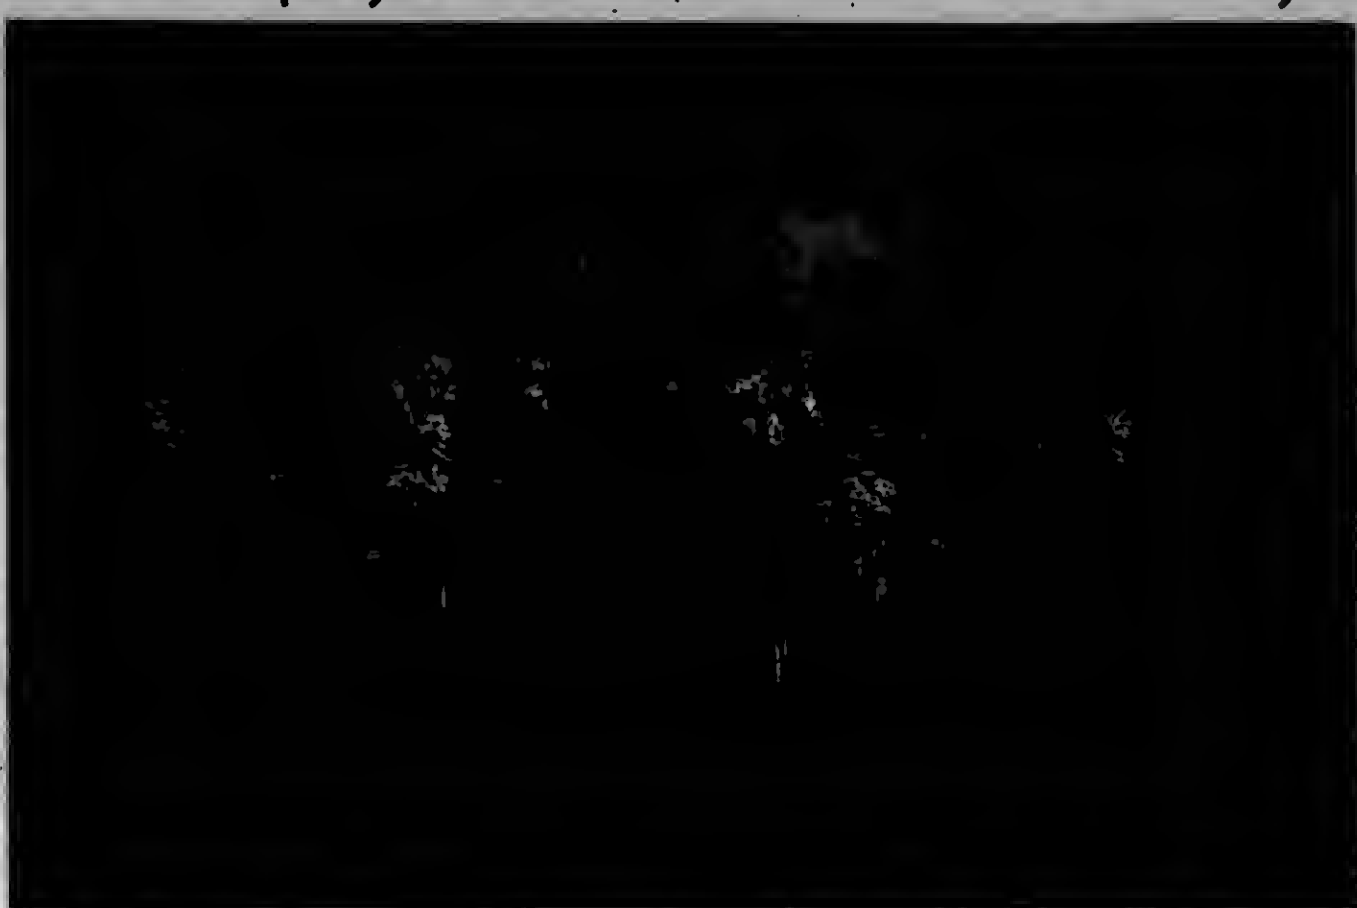

This free event is in honor of the Charlevoix Public Library volunteers to express gratitude for their dedication and enthusiastic support of the library. Mike Schlitt will narrate the slide presentation at 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 15, and it will include images by land and water. Refreshments will be served after the program.

After 18 years of owning an automotive-related company in the Detroit area, Schlitt retired to Charlevoix to pursue his hobby of nature photography. Northern Michigan provides an array of summer and winter photographic treasures, as well as his personal favorite, the spectacular color changes in the fall season. Schlitt has attended several seminars and workshops led by some of the most dedicated instructors in the photographic field. His desire to capture a wide selection of natural wonders has led him to some of the most remote locations in North America, South America, Europe, New Zealand and Africa.

Schlitt is a grand prize winner of the Jordan River Watershed photography contest, second place winner at Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey, and second place winner in the Gaylord photography exhibit. He was a featured artist at the Circle of Arts African exhibit in Charlevoix and has judged three different photography contests in Northern Michigan. Schlitt is the founder of the Charlevoix Photography Club, which is part of the Circle of Arts, a nonprofit organization. Some of his work is on display in Boyne City at Beyond Borders, or visit schlitt.com.

Snyder proclaims September is preparedness month for Michigan

LANISING — Gov. Rick Snyder proclaimed September as Preparedness Month to encourage Michiganders to plan and prepare for natural and human-made emergencies and disasters.

"This is the time of year where we encourage all Michiganders to prepare for emergencies and disasters," Snyder said. "For the last couple of years, many communities have experienced severe weather disasters, with the most recent in Grand Traverse and Leelanau counties. By taking just a few crucial steps this month, Michigan families can be prepared for the worst, just in case."

Throughout September, Michigan is joining federal, state and local governments and private and public organizations in supporting emergency preparedness and encouraging citizens to take action. Agencies nationwide are uniting under the banner "Don't Wait. Communicate." to encourage everyone to create a family communications plan.

"Preparing an emergency communications plan may seem like a big job because many people don't know where to begin," said Col. Kriste Kibbey Etue, State Director of Emergency Management and Homeland Security and Director of the Michigan State Police. "It doesn't have to be a chore. To get started, write a plan that outlines who to call, what to bring and where to go and then, share that plan with your family and friends."

The governor's proclamation also asks citizens to know the hazards that affect their communities, create an emergency communications plan and build a supply kit with enough food and water to last three days per person. Michigan is encouraging citizens to take action by downloading the free Michigan Prepares Emergency Plan App which enables users to quickly create an emergency plan on their mobile device.

"Smartphones are a big part of our daily lives. We keep a lot of important information and tools on our phones that we might need during an emergency," said Nick Lyon, Director of the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services. "The app uses resources already in your phone to make creating and sharing a basic emergency plan easy. The plan can be shared electronically with household members and printed so the entire family can be prepared for an emergency before it happens, even if smartphones aren't available."

Since 2013, Snyder has issued emergency or disaster declarations for incidents involving flooding, extreme cold, a tornado and straight-line winds. Last year, President Barack Obama declared a major disaster for Macomb, Oakland and Wayne Counties after flash flooding damaged thousands of homes and businesses and caused millions of dollars in damages.

The Michigan Prepares Emergency Plan app is available for free and can be downloaded in the App Store for iPhone or the Google Play store for Android.

National Grandparents' Day

Celebrating grandparents

Every year since 1995, on the Sunday following Labour Day, we have celebrated National Grandparents' Day. On September 13, 2015, take a moment to thank those beloved members of the family who carried the responsibilities of parenthood for so long and worked so hard to raise us. And now they are playing a supporting role as grandparents while at the same time facing up to the challenges of old age. These men and women have spent their lives teaching us fundamental values. They were teachers, nurses, confidants... Obviously, they made mistakes during their journey through life, but they learnt from them and this is why they are even more qualified to be role models. With life expectancy increasing, they will have the opportunity of accompanying their grandchildren into adulthood, making the part they play even more important. As we seek their helpful advice, grandparents, because they are figures of authority, are often great mediators between their grandchildren. At some point their health will decline, and they will need to live in a care home or spend time in a hospital. Make an effort to visit them, ask them to tell you about their lives, their joys and their heartbreaks. You will grow from their experience and it will make them feel wanted and loved.

For National Grandparents' Day, thank them for their help, for their knowledge, their wisdom and for their presence. Take them into your arms and hold them. This simple gesture will help them understand their importance in your lives.

EAST JORDAN — With several of the area's top cross country runners heading off to college after the 2014 season, the 2015 campaign was shaping up to be a down year for the area in many minds.

But in what was for many teams their first competitive 5K of the season at the East Jordan Invitational on Wednesday, Sept. 2, the area's four Lake Michigan Conference teams laid that notion to rest with strong performances.

Charlevoix was among those teams that had a strong showing, with third-place finishes on the boys side (65 points) and girls side (99).

"What I'm most happy about is the way we're taking our performances in practice and bringing them to the race," Charlevoix coach Doug Drenth said. "Our athletes are working hard and that work is showing when they take the course, and that's encouraging to see."

Junior David Ritter, a dual-sport athlete who also plays soccer, led the Rayders with a third-place finish overall (17:37.9) and junior Luke Buday was close behind in sixth place (17:58.3).

Junior Noah Carson, another dual-sport soccer athlete for Charlevoix, took 12th in 18:36.5, senior Jonathan Pischner finished 21st (19:12.9) and senior Ryan Erskine was 25th (19:39.5) to round out the Rayder scorers.

Drenth said the aid of dual-sport athletes Ritter and Carson have made the Rayder squad considerably stronger.

"They're splitting their time with us and the soccer team, and we're very grateful to the soccer coaches for allowing them to do that and compete with us when they can," Drenth said. "They bring a lot of strength to the team, and that depth allows us to have pretty strong fourth and fifth runners in Jonathan and Ryan."

"You're only as good as your fourth, fifth and sixth runners in this sport, and right now those guys are progressing really well."

On the girls side, sophomore Michelle Bollini, a transfer from Clarkston to Charlevoix, finished 10th (22:53.5) to lead the Rayders, and teammate Kelsey Engstrom took 18th (24:03.9).

Freshman Kaitlin Schwenki took 25th (25:08.5) as well to earn a medal for the Rayders, sophomore Olivia Jeakle was 32nd (26:20.3) and junior Katie Mousseau was 34th (26:24.7).

"We're struggling with health a little bit on the girls side, but Michelle really put herself out there again and did well," Drenth said. "We're especially happy with our fourth, fifth and sixth runners on the girls side as well, as runners like Olivia made big strides today."

"All you can ask is to keep improving, and it feels like we're building our strength on the girls side."

Charlevoix hosts the annual Mud Run on Saturday, which is always a highlight of the area cross country calendar.

LMC rivals Harbor Springs and East Jordan are expected to be in attendance, as well as several other top Northern Michigan schools.

Rayder defense stands tall but falls to rival Boyne City, 13-0

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — When bitter rivals take the field in high school football, style points are irrelevant.

Surviving and getting the win are all that matters.

Charlevoix did its best to do that on Thursday night against rival Boyne City, but in the end the Ramblers held on for a hard-fought 13-0 win in a game that was long on big hits and physical play and short on highlight-reel offensive performances.

That was due in large part to the play of both defensive units, as both squads dominated their offensive counterparts throughout the night and held each other to roughly 200 yards of total offense.

"We were kind of in survival mode," Boyne City coach Dave Hills said. "We didn't feel like we had our best stuff tonight, and Charlevoix played a whale of a game."

"Their coaches did a heck of a job and showed us a lot of things we weren't ready for. We had to do whatever we could to hang on."

Defensively, the Ramblers were dominant on a night where their offense largely struggled.

Despite spending most of the second half on the field due to multiple three and outs, the Rambler defense held firm, re-buffing two Rayder drives inside the 10 yard line in the fourth quarter to keep the shutout intact.

The key to Boyne City's defensive success was relentless pressure up front from defensive linemen Tanner Kruzel and Carter Wilmot and linebackers Luke Sage and Malik Smith.

Those four players combined for 10 tackles for loss, with Sage finishing with a team high 13 tackles and four for loss to lead the Ramblers.

Kruzel added nine tackles, including one for loss, Wilmot finished with six tackles, and Smith chipped in four tackles for loss.

"Their pressure against our young offensive line concerned us coming into the game, and it really played out that way," Charlevoix coach Ron Bindi said. "When we were able to execute our blocks, I thought we made a few nice plays, but against experienced senior guys who play at a different level of speed, we just weren't able to contain all of them on enough plays to sustain a drive and get it in the end zone."

The Ramblers held explosive Rayder back Jared McLean to 61 yards on 14 carries, and while

JAMES GENSTERBLUM/COURIER

Charlevoix's Austin Putman (6) gets a strip-sack on Boyne City quarterback Mason Gardner during the Rayders' 13-0 loss to the visiting Ramblers on Thursday.

Charlevoix quarterback Brad Klinger, playing in relief of the injured Forrest Noirot, connected with Austin Putman and Erik Oshaben four times for 70 yards, the passing game wasn't enough to sustain crucial drives and put points on the board.

Although the Charlevoix offense had its hands full, the Rayders stayed in the game until the very end thanks to inspired play from its defense, which held the Ramblers scoreless in the second half and forced numerous three-and-outs.

Klinger and McLean each had six tackles to lead the Rayder effort, and Putman added two sacks and a forced fumble as well.

"Charlevoix was showing us a lot of heavy pressure, and our execution just wasn't there tonight," Hills said. "We have the pieces to handle the things they were showing us up front, but they did a good job of executing it and we didn't match that."

"Our technique was a little off and that's something we have to work on."

While the Ramblers didn't significantly outgain the Rayders offensively, they were able to turn two drives into crucial points.

On the second drive of the game, Boyne City took advantage of a short field to get a 10-yard touchdown run from junior Tarin Bell that put the Ramblers up 7-0 early in the first quarter.

Boyne City held that lead until right before the half, when the Ramblers caught Charlevoix off-guard with a trick-play halfback pass.

Sage got behind the defense that was sucked in by Kruzel's jet sweep, and Kruzel pulled up and lofted a pass over the Charlevoix safeties' heads and into Sage's hands for a 61-yard score that sent Boyne City into the locker room and gave them enough separation to hold on for the win.

Malik Smith led the Ramblers with 79 yards rushing on 19 carries, and Bell added 69 yards on 10 carries.

Boyne City, now 2-0, heads to Mancelona next week looking to extend their regular season winning streak to 12 games and move one step closer to locking up a playoff berth.

And while Charlevoix, now 1-1 heads into their next game on the road against Coleman next Saturday with a loss, there are positives for the Rayders to take away.

"In the past, if we'd given up a touchdown like we did right before the half, that would be it, and we'd come back out and get blown out," Bindi said. "Tonight, our kids realized they made a mistake on one play, shook it off, and came out and continued to fight."

"The ability to do that is one of the things that makes Boyne City and any other quality program so tough to beat, and to see us starting to develop that shows that we're making strides as a program. To see that fight is really important and really encouraging."

The sweet steps of fudge making

(231) 547-6558

lallen@schurz.com

This week's Food Focus is Celeste Murdick's Fudge and Candy Shop. Owner Leon Perron and employees were making a batch of turtle fudge when the Charlevoix Courier arrived. The following photographs best illustrate their fudge making process. The Courier will feature a Charlevoix restaurant or business that prepares food for the public each week during our Food Focus series.

1. Chocolate, sugar and other ingredients are combined in a large copper kettle before cooking a batch of fudge at Celeste Murdick's Fudge and Candy Kitchen in Charlevoix. 2. Leon Perron adds milk to the chocolate, sugar and other ingredients inside the copper kettle before turning on the heat to bring the mixture to a boil. 3. Perron stirs and begins to heat the combination of chocolate, sugar, butter, milk and other ingredients. 4. Miranda Stieglitz stirs the boiling fudge mixture while watching the thermometer to make sure the fudge cooks at the proper temperature. 5. Hot, cooked turtle fudge mixture is poured out onto a marble table to cool before mixing and adding the caramel and pecans. 6. Nikki Ciesielczyk mixes the fudge with a large paddle on a marble table. This step is repeated until the fudge reaches a certain thickness. 7. Caramel and chopped pecans are ready to be mixed in with the fudge mixture to make turtle fudge. 8. As the fudge begins to set up chopped pecans are added to make the turtle fudge. 9. The mixture is formed into a long loaf of fudge. 10. Ciesielczyk adds strips of fresh made caramel to the pecan chocolate fudge loaf. 11. Once the caramel strips are placed in the fudge Ciesielczyk folds the fudge over the top of the caramel to form a loaf of turtle fudge. 12. Cooling on slabs of marble the fudge is formed into long loaves before cutting and serving it to customers. 13. Slicing into a loaf of turtle fudge so it can be sold by the slice.

UP, UP AND AWAY WITH SUCCESS: Kurtz makes a name in the community

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — As is the case with most high school graduates, when Luther Kurtz walked across the stage to accept his diploma in 1995, he had no idea what the future had in store — all he knew was that school wasn't his thing, and he had the grades to prove it. But now, 20 years later, he's made a name for himself in the community.

"When I was sitting at commencement ready to grab my high school diploma I had no idea what I was going to do or no idea what I could do," Kurtz said. "I was not a great student. I was not headed off to some great university. I had a 2.5 GPA and an 18 on my ACT. I had a different path than most of my fellow graduates."

In the last 20 years, Kurtz went from a technical school in Michigan where he became journeyman electrician, moved to California and attended community college before transferring to the University of California-San Diego, where he got his aerospace engineering degree at age 28.

While attending college, he connected with a skydiving company out of Hastings. From there he decided to CHARLEVOIX — While many of her former classmates have already departed to begin their college years, Hero Parker-Drost is preparing for a different path after high school that will take her out of the country. She is on path that will take courage, strength and a lot of faith, along with relying on support from family, friends and even strangers.

"I am nervous about the trip," Parker-Drost said. "I am going to be thousands of miles away from my home."

She is leaving on Sept. 29 for a small coastal community on the Northeastern coast of Australia with 20 other students from around the world to begin missionary training with the nonprofit organization — Youth With A Mission or more commonly known as YWAM. Parker-Drost will be attending Discipleship Training School. The course is a full-time program and lasts five or six months and it consists of two parts: lecture and outreach.

"The first three months I will get lectures on the Bible to learn more about God, his world and from community living and practical training," Parker-Drost said. "The following three months deals with outreach missionary work. I don't know where I will be going because that is something we pray about while we

Mayor quizzed on council meeting rules

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Mayor Gabe Campbell is being questioned for ending public comment before everyone had a chance to speak to go into closed session to discuss another matter, during the city council's Sept. 8 regular meeting.

Campbell said council had the information about the topic and he believed the comment session was getting out of hand.

"The discussion was going nowhere after 40 minutes, and the council had finished regular business," Campbell said. "We listened and it was time to move on."

The Bridge Street Tap Room and Lake Charlevoix Brewing Company owners Phil Parr, Aaron Hagen, Adam Engleman and Rich Bergmann all attended the city council meeting on Sept. 8. After the meeting had wrapped up agenda business, Campbell asked the audience for public comment and Parr took the opportunity to speak more than the allotted three minutes to make a presentation, which was not on the agenda.

"I did not know they wanted to make some presentation about their business," Campbell said. "If they want to (make a presentation) they can make a request to be on

Township approves moving trees for property owner

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Some trees on the south side of Charlevoix Township will be relocated after township officials approved a resolution to meet a property owner's request to move the newly planted trees.

The trees were planted as part of the south side beautification project, but property owner Mike Way asked if officials could relocate the trees because of a pending sale of the property.

"It is a good effort on the township to improve the look coming into town from the north and south corridor," Way said.

"We appreciate the work, but we thought the trees were only being planted in front of the Rainbow Shoppe. We never intended to have trees planted on the commercial property we are selling."

Way has a potential buyer for the property and does not want the trees there because they possibly could to deter the sale. The Way property is located on U.S. 31 next to the City of Charlevoix Stump Composting Area.

Charlevoix Township Supervisor Chuck Center said the township was directed by Michigan Department of Transportation to approve the tree relocation because the trees are in the MDOT right-of-way. The permit to plant the trees was issued by MDDT to the township. Center said the board is willing to meet the request from Way.

"It is up to us to move the trees," Center said. "We wouldn't ever force anyone to put trees on their property."

Township officials also approved a resolution to ask MDDT to lower the speed limit from 55 mph to 45 mph from the township/city line to Beils Bay Road. Before the limit can be lowered the Michigan State Police will do a study to determine if 45 mph is acceptable for that stretch of road, said Jim Malewitz, of Performance Engineering.

Malewitz said it would make sense to have it 45 mph with the multiple driveways to businesses in the area along with the new bike path.

"There is about 27 driveways in that area," Malewitz said. "We're thinking it may be safer all through this section if it is 45 mph."

Though they all agree that lowering the speed limit will be good for that stretch of road it might not happen Malewitz said.

"They only do these studies every 10 years," Malewitz said. "In some cases the State Police have done studies and decided to raise the limit. It all depends on their findings."

Golf tourney raises more than $17,000 for Joppa House

LONNIE ALLEN
(231) 547-6558 • lallen@charvoix.com

CHARLEVOIX — On Sept. 12, golfers took to the greens for the second annual Iron Man Golf Tournament at the Charlevoix County Club to raise money for Joppa House in Charlevoix.

The fundraiser began at 7 a.m. and went until dusk. Charlevoix resident Aaron Malewitz played more than 60 holes to help raise more than $5,500 for the transitional living program.

"It's amazing how many people are out there in our community willing to support Joppa House and their mission," Malewitz said. "It's a good program."

The event raised more than $17,000 on Saturday. All the expenses for the golf tournament were covered by donations so everything raised will go directly to Joppa House, said Luann Jackson, fundraiser volunteer.

Jackson said it is young people like Malewitz that show the giving spirit of the entire community.

"It is really amazing to see a young man like him to take it upon himself, to go out raise that much money," Jackson said. "It is people like Aaron that show the caring and giving spirit of our community."

The Joppa House opened in 2014 on the corner of State and Garfield streets and its mission is to serve as a transitional home for homeless women and children, and those facing homeless-

"We opened Joppa House to help women with children escape abusive relationships and take financial control of their lives to better raise their children," Jackson said. "It is like the saying 'give them a fish and you feed them for a day. Teach them how to fish and you feed him for a lifetime.' We are teaching them to fish."

Joppa House is a debt-free entity. The event helps pay operating costs

Sports teams address character goals and behavior definitions

As fall sports gear up, collegiate and high school coaches are tackling important issues with their players such as sexual assault, domestic/ dating abuse and what it means to be a man.

Gail Kloss, Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc. executive director

Open communication, awareness-building and promoting a team culture of respect will impact players, as well as their family, friends and community.

University of Georgia coach Mark Richt goes beyond telling players to treat women properly. Richt and his coaching staff hold frequent team family nights during which they model respect toward women and other behaviors consistent with healthy relationships.

Arkansas coach Bret Bielema makes use of frequent news headlines about sexual and domestic violence in sports during team meetings. Players are asked to think about what they would do in similar situations after discussing the articles in-depth. They are also challenged to assess their own coping skills on everything from an argument with their girlfriend to being on the receiving end of a racial slur. During a similar exercise, University of Nevada coach Tony Sanchez points out these stories could easily take place at their school if they allow it. He's also clear with players about the consequences. "At the end of the day, the only thing people are going to see is that end result. What you did."

Mike Rowe is a high school football coach in Cold Water Springs, Minn. He was motivated by the fact that every year one in three teens experience threats or acts of sexual or physical abuse from a dating partner. He also realizes the Incredible Influence coaches can have on their players. He regularly engages in conversations with players about character-building and life skills.

In a powerful team exercise, players read aloud police reports of actual domestic abuse and sexual assault incidents and then pledge, "This will not be me." Rowe expects players to take responsibility for what happens in school hallways and at parties or dances. He explains that being a man isn't about power, money and sexual conquests. "Your honor defines you as a man, your virtue defines you as a man and your dignity defines you as a man."

Some of the most important goals for the Maine South Portland Red Riots basketball team are off the court. The players pledge that as men they will not be defined by the strength of their physical attributes, but by the strength of their character, attitudes, beliefs and actions. Coach Phil Conley uses the Coaching Boys into Men program as a resource to promote respectful behavior among players and help prevent relationship abuse, harassment and sexual assault.

The Red Riots work hard every day to become better athletes and team mates. They also work to take their team to the next level by modeling integrity, respect and non-violence. They abide by the mantra, "Our wins and losses may matter today, but the lives we lead as students, sons, brothers, friends and in the future as professionals, partners and fathers — these lives will transform our communities for years to come."

It is said that whoever tells the story, defines the culture. The intentional efforts of these coaches and players will help tell the stories differently and help change the culture of violence.

Children grow up so fast

Back to School time is filled with so many different emotions — joy in having some routine back into our lives, sadness that summer is over, and anxiousness for our little ones to be successful in class. This is my youngest child's first year in school, which has brought me to reminisce over my two older kids first days.

Anne O'Connor.

Being a mom

out early on in daycare. For our family at the time, both parents worked. It never even crossed my mind to do anything different as I've been working since I was 14 years old. So we found daycare and continued onward with our lives.

The first day of daycare wasn't a walk in the park, but it was nothing compared to either of my older children's first day of school. I never thought sending them to school would cause as much heartache as it did. I still remember sitting in my car, in the school parking lot, bawling my eyes out. I kept telling myself to get a grip. It's preschool, they are only there a few days per week. As I sit back and look at it now, it wasn't really about them starting school, it was about the time that had passed. Precious time.

As we neared my youngest and last child's first day of school, I was filled with so much anxiety. In my previous marriage we both worked but now my family has been blessed with my husband of nearly five years being able to stay home. This is a complete game changer for me. There are many different types of emotions that come up for me this time — happiness, thankfulness and yes, even a twinge of jealousy. Well, that is until I have a few days off of work in a row and then I'm itching to get back to the office. So my goal this year is to make it to the classroom and back out the door before a tear is shed. In and out with confidence, joy, and pride. Then I'll be able to have a quiet moment with my husband, as I bawl my eyes out yet again — I'm taking bets that he'll cry too.

Time is such a valuable commodity and we don't always realize in the day-to-day hustle and bustle of caring for our children that it truly goes by so quickly. Then the day comes when they start school and our hearts stop because they are no longer the helpless newborns we once tenaciously cared for. They are little people with their own personalities. Being a mom is hard, whether you're a stay at home mom, a working mom, a working mom with a stay at home husband, a single mom, etc, it doesn't matter, plain and simple it's hard. But being a mom gives me the most reward, over any job I'll ever have.

Charlevoix Library is grateful for community support

To the Charlevoix community:

"As another beautiful summer comes to an end, the library would like to share some of the highlights of the season. More than 46,000 people entered the building by walking under the Jot your Joy arches this summer at the main entrance. Patrons checked out 29,656 items and 3,549 people attended 130 library classes, events and concerts. The reference librarians answered 1,178 questions.

More than 2,000 people stopped to jot down what brings them joy in Charlevoix and tied that sentiment to the arches. Results of those more than 2,000 ribbons will be shared with the Charlevoix Main Street Committee.

Thanks to community support for the "Stop the Summer Slide" reading program, more than 400 local Charlevoix elementary students received new, popular books to take home for the summer and to turn in for others throughout the summer break. A reward event will take place on Sept. 25 at the school for all students who participated.

The Jim Gill concert in East Park brought more than 300 children and families downtown to dance and clap and be silly. More than 700 people attended the jazz at the Library Concerts held in the children's garden, and the SummerFolk concerts brought Charlevoix some of the best folk performers in the state. All of these concerts were supported by generous donations and applause.

Michigan Notable Author Kathleen Flinn visited

and shared stories from her book, "Burnt Toast Makes You Sing Good." And the Art Lecture Series took us from the world of film making to the architecture of the world's museums. The Chicago Club was honored with the 2015 Duerr Award.

Technology continues to be important to our patrons as this summer we recorded more than 9,000 logins to the library computers and wireless internet access. The library introduced 3D printing in August and look forward to working with patrons, schools and businesses interested in this newer technology.

On behalf of the staff, we want to thank everyone who visited and supported us

COMMUNITY Highlights

Final screening of 'The Wizard of Boulder Park' set for Sept. 21

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Historical Society and Charlevoix Cinema III present the final screening of the historical documentary, "The Wizard of Boulder Park" at 4 p.m., on Monday, Sept. 21, commemorating the 100th wedding anniversary of Earl Young and Irene Harsha. The film premiered on June 8, at the Charlevoix Cinema III to a sell-out audience. This will mark the fifth of the re-screenings that began Aug. 14, to allow more residents and visitors to see the film. More than 200 people have seen the documentary so far.

Part biography, part artistic journey, "The Wizard of Boulder Park" imparts insights from historians, renowned architects and friends and family who knew Earl Young. Written, directed and produced by the three-time Emmy Award-winning brother and sister team of Anne-Marlowe Belanger and Brian Belanger, this is a documentary of local interest seen best on the big-screen.

Prior to the showing at the Cinema, Charlevoix Historical Society is recognizing this occasion and taking the opportunity to celebrate Earl and Irene, who worked harmoniously together to create more than 30 iconic structures using massive glacial boulders found around Charlevoix. There will be complimentary treats provided by Creative Cupcake and a special display of artifacts from the engagement and marriage of Earl and Irene Young, as well as Irene's maps. Irene was an accomplished artist and left her own legacy in Charlevoix with other works of art including the creation of three unique historic maps of Northern Michigan, said Denise Fate, president of the Charlevoix Historical Society.

"The film presents such a poignant story of the love Earl and Irene had for each other and for their family, we felt it appropriate to remember and honor them on this special day," Fate said. "Our goal is to have 100 movie-guests to go with the 100 cupcakes to mark the 100 years."

The 1930s maps of the Charlevoix/Petoskey area,

Traverse City and Mackinac Island were collaborations between Irene and Earl and updated regularly. Each map indicates significant areas of natural beauty, heritage and local landmarks. The maps are available in the Charlevoix Historical Society's gift shop, as are oak frames sourced locally, which are customized to fit them.

The maps have special meaning to the extended Harsha family, said Jennifer Harsha Carroll, Irene's grand-niece.

"My grandfather, Paul Harsha, was Irene's younger brother, and he was very proud of her work as an artist," Carroll said. "The maps were beautifully displayed in my grandparents' and parent's homes, and today all six siblings in my family have a special place for them."

"The range of information and history is fascinating. I live near Rex Beach Road, and the Charlevoix map shows his boyhood home," she added. "It also highlights excellent trout fishing at Fisherman's Island, cherry and apple orchards, original Belvedere and Chicago Clubs, Loeb Farms."

A brief program about the Youngs by David Miles, Historical Society historian and curator, will follow the film, which has a run time of 48 minutes.

Admission is $15 and tickets will be available at the Charlevoix Cinema III box office. Proceeds from the ticket sales will benefit the Charlevoix Historical Society. A DVD of the documentary is now available for purchase at the Charlevoix Historical Society Museum Gift Shop at 103 State St., or online at chxhistory.com.

Grant funding to support the re-screening is provided by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. For more foundation information, visit c3f.org.

Dr. Michael Sullivan welcomes Dr. Mildred Tinker as the latest addition to the Beacon Dental Center.

Beacon Dental Center welcomes Dr. Mildred Tinker to their team

CHARLEVOIX — Beacon Dental Center of Charlevoix and Gaylord is pleased to announce the addition of Dr. Mildred Tinker to their dental team. Dr. Tinker, a Flint native, has worked in the dental field since she was 13 years old and has completed numerous post-doctorate training programs in dental implants and oral surgery. Tinker received her Bachelor of Science in dental hygiene and her Doctor of Dental Surgery degrees from the University of Michigan and spent the last 32 years working in private practice in the Flint area. She is thrilled to be living and working in Northern Michigan.

"Beacon Dental Center is without a doubt one of the most technologically advanced and comprehensive dental office I've seen," Tinker said. "The ability we have here, through advanced technology and sedation techniques, to serve the needs of the Northern Michigan community and provide all a patient's dental care needs under one roof is both exciting and rewarding."

"With techniques such as laser dentistry — no need for anesthetic — to complete intravenous sedation, comfortably allowing patients to achieve all of their dental needs in just one visit, we can better accomplish mutual goals in both preventive care and the treatment of long-term dental health issues and fears," Tinker added.

Dr. Michael Sullivan, founder and owner of Beacon Dental Center is excited Tinker is joining the Beacon Dental team.

"Dr. Tinker possesses an excellent blend of education, compassion and experience, coupled with a genuine passion for exceptional dental care," Sullivan said. "She brings a level of expertise to our office and the community, and is committed to sharing our mission of service through our annual day of free dentistry — Dentistry from the Heart."

Along with their widely recognized annual day of free care, Beacon Dental Center provides a comprehensive range of dental services from routine dental hygiene to advanced cosmetic, implant, reconstructive and restorative dentistry.

Beacon Dental Center is located at 06483 M-66 North in Charlevoix, across from the Kmart plaza and an office at 1723 M-32 West in Gaylord, next to the Gaylord Cinema.

For more information or to schedule an appointment, please call (231) 547-9141 or visit BeaconDentalCenter.com.

Charlevoix Montessori Academy for the Arts will 'Adopt-a-Beach'

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix Montessori Academy for the Arts is hosting a shoreline cleanup in conjunction with the Alliance for the Great Lakes' annual September Adopt-a-Beach event, part of the International Coastal Cleanup. Thousands of Adopt-a-Beach volunteers turn out each September to pick up trash along Great Lakes beaches and shorelines, record their findings and track environmental conditions that contribute to beach health.

The cleanup will take place from Michigan Beach to Charlevoix Hospital from 9 a.m. - noon on Friday, Sept. 25. The participants hope to enhance the beach by picking up trash and recording their findings in the Alliance for the Great Lakes' online Adopt-a-Beach system. This information is logged into the online system, made accessible to the public and shared with local beach health officials as well as others working toward improvements.

Beach adoption is easy and open to everyone. Volunteers are encouraged to register online for the cleanup at greatlakesadopt.org/.

To find out more about the Alliance's Adopt-a-Beach program, visit greatlakes.org/adoptabeach.

State Rep. Triston Cole, R-Manitoulin, paid tribute to local first responders during a special ceremony at the capitol honoring the victims and heroes of the Sept. 11, 2001, tragedy. "As we reflect upon that infamous day on Sept. 11, 2001, I am humbled to be standing alongside Charlevoix Police and Fire Chief Gerard Doan, and Charlevoix Deputy Sheriff Rob Sholey," Cole said. "These two men epitomize the very definition of a hero and have selflessly served our local community day in and day out and it is a privilege to have them join me as we unite to pay special tribute to the folks who have paid the ultimate price in sacrifice for their country."

DNR requests information on small mouth bass from anglers

LANSING — The Department of Natural Resources request help from anglers in an ongoing study of small mouth bass in northern Lake Michigan.

Central Michigan University and the DNR have been tagging small mouth bass in the Beaver Island Archipelago since 2005, at Wau-goshance Point in Wilderness State Park since 2009, and in parts of Grand Traverse Bays since 2014.

Anglers are asked to report the whereabouts of these tagged small mouth bass by providing information on capture, capture location and tag number to the DNR via michigandnr.com/taggedfish/tags. If anglers release tagged fish, please do not remove the tag and just report the requested information on the website as indicated.

"Northern Lake Michigan is recognized as one of the top bass fishing destinations in the country, and tagging studies help to provide the scientific basis for management of this world-class fishery," said Dave Clapp, Charlevoix Fisheries Research Station manager. "Thanks to the efforts of many contributing anglers who've reported information on captured small mouth bass, we have greatly expanded our knowledge of the northern Lake Michigan fishery."

Since 2005, more than 7,000 small mouth bass have been caught, tagged and released back into Lake Michigan. Each small mouth bass has a unique number on its tag, allowing for the tracking of its individual movement and growth. Returns of tagged small mouth bass have provided insights into movement and nesting habitat within the Great Lakes.

These studies also have demonstrated that small mouth bass have increased in size and number, compared to 20 or 30 years ago. Small mouth bass in northern Lake Michigan are among the fastest-growing of this species in North America. Ongoing support from anglers allows the DNR and Central Michigan University to continue to expand their knowledge of Great Lakes small mouth bass populations and fisheries.

Extend the season with an Alanson River Boat Tour

ANNE KELLY
Special to Courier

Summer has all but wound down, but the Indian summer days we have been experiencing with their warm days and cool nights are just hints of the autumn delights to come. One more way to extend the season of sunny days and warm lake waters is to hop aboard the Alanson River Boat Tour.

The excursion is a delightful and informative tour of Crooked River as it makes its crooked way, including a 180 degree turn aptly named Devil's Elbow, from Alanson to Burt Lake. The tour on the Kewadin Queen pontoon boat takes an hour-and-a-half working its way five miles, from the loading dock by the swing bridge in Alanson on River Street, to Burt Lake and then back again. It's just long enough to enjoy the scenery and to take in some authentic northern Michigan history along the way. The tour is narrated by Capt. Gary Dawson, who started the Sunshine Cruise in Charlevoix for 15 years, and now partners with his friend Emil Muccino, who introduced him to the inland waterway, in this new endeavor, called Northern Michigan River Boat Tours.

The Crooked River is an artesian spring-fed river that does not freeze in the winter, according to Dawson. It boasts 17 varieties of fish, but is not heavily fished; turtles up to 18-inches in diameter, swans and the occasional bald eagle. Sighting of turtles, hawks and bald eagles may be rewarded on the tour. Kids love to scan the shoreline and skies above the foliage in hopes of spotting one for a "prize." The Crooked River shoreline is a combination of state land and private property. The boat ride winds its way through pristine natural wetlands and then intermittently, passengers are treated to an intimate look at a shoreline of residential homes and cottages; the river is narrow and property is tight against the shore. The emergence into Burt Lake may be a pleasant surprise. If you have never ventured off the highway and into the lakes and rivers of the inland waterway.

Dawson is a great story teller on the trip during which he spins a brief history of the Crooked River. The river's lore can be traced back to a time when Native Americans used the Crooked River for fur trade, transporting beaver and otter pelts in their birch bark canoes, along the inland waterway, out to Lake Huron and on to Mackinac Island. There the pelts were shipped to Europe to be made into felt hats, the fashion of the times. An archaeological study out of Michigan State University has identified artifacts of early tribes in the area, dating back 3,000 years. Floating along the Crooked River it is not hard to imagine the smoke signals being sent from lookout points. Later, in the 1800s, during the years when the legendary virgin white pines were literally stripped from the Northern Michigan woodlands, harvested lumber was floated down the river to lumber mills; steamer rafts took the lumber to Indian River, on to Cheboygan and beyond. The lumbering era peaked in 1890 and was all but over by 1910. Towns along the waterway were now open to tourism from the railroads and steamboat companies that in the 1880s created a Northern Michigan travel experience. There might have been as many as 38, 80-foot steamships a day supporting the business in the summer season.

The Alanson Riverboat Tour is just completing its first season. This summer, reservations for the three daily scheduled tours were encouraged but walk-ons are always welcome as the boat can accommodate up to 24 passengers. After Labor Day, the tours will run on weekends through September and by reservation.

Dawson and Muccino are encouraging local businesses to consider the tour for promotional or staff appreciation events or for groups who would like to make a fall color tour. The partners are trying to bolster the local Alanson economy as well, by suggesting that passengers dine in one of the local eateries. Stafford's Crooked River Lodge offers discounted tour packages. The leisurely trip is on a covered 40-foot Coast Guard certified pontoon boat that offers comfortable seating, water, a bathroom and a panoramic view of the river.

Feel free to bring food and drinks, as the tour boat does not offer refreshments other than bottled water. Tour prices are $20 for adults, $16 for seniors and children under age 12. The tour can also handle private charters for groups up to 24, although you may want to call in advance so you can reserve a time slot.

Aartvark Studio longest running family business in Charlevoix

ANNE KELLY
Special to Courier

Aartvark Studio owned by Terry Salmonson and his wife, Lynne, is the oldest family-run business, still operating with the original owners, in downtown Charlevoix. Located on Bridge Street across from East Park's performance pavilion, it has been providing photographic service for 41 years since its opening on Nov. 29, 1974.

The Salmonson's story is one of Terry's professional odyssey: from student, artist, Air Force pilot, real estate agent, and finally, photographer, with Lynne providing customer service and playing the supporting role as bookkeeper and framer. The Salmonson's who met in 1962 and were married in 1964, were originally from the Detroit area. Terry earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from Wayne State University in ceramics and goldsmithing. He graduated in December of 1966 and three days after earning his degree, received a draft notice. Salmonson joined the Air Force for which he piloted an F-4 fighter and was sent to Germany.

Between officer training in the U.S. and his pilot's training in Germany, the Salmonson's visited a relative's cottage in Elk Rapids. During their stay, they drove through Charlevoix on the way to the Argonne Supper Club. "It was sunset, and Charlevoix couldn't have been more beautiful," they recalled.

In 1971, the couple, who already had one young son (Tim) had their second (David), in Germany. "During the time in Germany," he said, "we would lie awake in bed dreaming about what we would do after getting out of the Air Force, and where we would go."

"We thought maybe a pottery shop with a potter's wheel in the window to attract customers," Lynne remembers, "and maybe in a small town like the one we had admired on the way to dinner."

That one encounter of the harbor at sunset made a lasting impression on and perhaps, subconsciously beckoned the Salmonson's to Charlevoix. Salmonson, always artistically curious, got a "really good camera" while in Germany, and got serious about his craft. When they returned to the U.S. in 1972, he decided to get a Master's Degree in photography. Wayne State was impressed by his portfolio and asked him to help write the curriculum for their first Masters of Photography program.

Aartvark Studio owned by Terry Salmonson and his wife, Lynne, is the oldest family-run business, still operating with the original owners, in downtown Charlevoix.

In June of 1973, Salmonson brought his family to northern Michigan to seek employment, packing their belongings and hauling them north in a trailer. They had to find a place to live and Salmonson soon found that he needed a day job, if he was to be able to make enough money to buy a house. He landed a job in a completely different field, real estate, and worked for Ski and Shore Realty first in Petoskey, then in Charlevoix. His success as a realtor allowed the Salmonson's to get a house in Charlevoix and open a photography studio downtown.

"I ran into an old school friend, Tom Merta, at the Chamber, who told me that Charlevoix's noted photographer, Bob Miles had just retired and that there was no other professional photographer in town," Salmonson said.

The timing was right. First, Aartvark was located in the former Market Mall. Later after renovation, the property was renamed Beacon Place which houses eight condominium units; Salmonson bought two and expanded the Aartvark footprint from its original square footage.

Receiving numerous awards for his work over the years, Salmonson is well established in the world of fine photography. He received the Kodak Award and has had his photographs displayed at Epcot Center and in the National Gallery of the Professional Photographers of America. He is a long time participant in the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair. When the photography business entered the digital age, Salmonson was on the cutting edge despite the fact that his studio was outfitted with extensive darkroom, developing and enlarging equipment.

"Today, with everything going digital and people taking pictures on their cell phones," he said, "the market of wedding photography has put a lot of photographers out of business."

Realizing that it is important to stay current, he has all the capabilities of digital photography and reproduction necessary to maintain a healthy business.

"Terry is a master at Photoshop," Lynne said. Aartvark specializes in scenic and family photography as well as offering custom framing.

"Over the past 41 years," Salmonson said, "I have photographed hundreds of families who come back again. More than 60 percent of our business is from repeating customers."

The Aartvark family business operates under the philosophy of "Loving what you do, making the most of what you have, and caring about the people you meet from day to day."

Where does the name, Aartvark come from?

"We wanted to be first in the phone book," Lynn said. "My dad suggested aardvark because it had two a's. We changed it to Aartvark because Terry is an artist."

You can visit the website at aartvarkstudio.com or watch a YouTube video on the business: "Aartvark Studio," which was produced by the Salmonson's son, Tim, an artist in his own right.

Harbor Springs finish line for Little Traverse Half Marathon, 10K run/walk HARBOR SPRINGS — On Saturday, runners from around the country will be standing at the bus stop in Harbor Springs. Sporting race bibs instead of backpacks, they'll be heading to the start line for a point-to-point adventure around Little Traverse Bay. Sept. 19, marks the third annual Little Traverse Half Marathon and 10K run/walk, a unique race experience and premier running event in Northern Michigan.

The race brings hundreds of visitors and locals together every autumn to celebrate Little Traverse Bay, experience small town community and run a fast course. The half marathon, which is USA Track and Field certified and a Pure Michigan Fitness Series event, starts in the Village of Bay Harbor. The 10K Run/Walk starts at the beach in Petoskey State Park and joins the half marathon course near mile marker seven. Both races end at the waterfront park in downtown Harbor Springs, an idyllic setting for the finish line.

But it's not just a school bus ride at sunrise that makes this race unique.

"It's a combination of the water, the course and the finish line that set this race apart," said Emily Skau, a crewmember of The Outfitter, who ran her first half marathon on the course last year. "From start to finish, you can look out across the water and see where you're headed and where you've been. It's really awesome to mark off the miles by the shoreline. You can't help but be in awe of the lake and just smile."

With the addition of a 10K run/walk, even more people are able to experience the fun. Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome.

"The Little Traverse Half Marathon is my favorite running event of the year," said Jeff Towner, who comes 'Up North' from Grand Rapids to participate. "While the views along the course are 'Pure Michigan,' the fact that every step is something new is what I like best."

Runners get a taste of it all — the historic Little Traverse Wheelway passing right along the water, the wooded back-dunes of Petoskey State Park, and centuries-old cottages of Bay View and Wequetonsing.

This year's participants are coming from ten states and range in age from 10-72 years old, making for a multi-generational, all-inclusive event.

"There are so many ways to be a part. You can run, walk, cheer or volunteer," said Molly Ames Baker, race director and co-owner of The Outfitter. "There's something about a point-to-point that makes the energy even better. All these pieces of the community come together to make the race happen, from the policemen stopping traffic in the glass-blower making awards, from the sweep biker to the more than 100 volunteers stationed all around the bay."

Proceeds from this year's race will benefit Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council's Watershed Acad-

Charlevoix Circle of Arts presents D.L. Coburn's 'The Gin Game'

During the fall and winter seasons, the Charlevoix Circle of Arts Armchair Theatre will present Sunday evening performances once a month.

The Pulitzer Prize winning play, "The Gin Game" will showcase Dick Williams and Kay Hull at 6:30 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 27. This drama with comic overtones takes place on a seldom used porch of a retirement home. Two residents meet there to play a running game of gin. Lifetime memories flutter out of the cards. The play written by D.L. Coburn, originally starred Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn.

Williams majored in theater and speech at Michigan State University and received a master's degree in speech. He founded the Torch Theater and led it for 18 years. Hull portrayed Elizabeth Browning in "Letters of Love" and Ann Rutledge in "Spoon River Anthology" in 2014. Hull is a published writer and poet. She has been a lay reader for years, currently

North Country National Scenic Trail Day to be observed with hike, potluck, feature presentation

PETOSKEY — The public is welcome to a series of events sponsored by the Jordan Valley 45 Degree Chapter, North Country Trail Association on Saturday, Sept. 26, in honor of North Country National Scenic Trail Day.

A 3.5 mile group hike will be held at 2 p.m., beginning at the Landslide Overlook of the Jordan River Valley, near Alba. During this hike, which crosses the 45th parallel North latitude, the club will erect a distance sign/register box at the landmark. A shuttle will return hikers to the starting point.

Later, a potluck dinner will be held at 6 p.m. at the Boyne Valley Township Fire Hall in Boyne Falls with the option to bring a side dish to pass. Entrée, beverage and dessert is provided. Following dinner, at 7 p.m., a presentation "Exploring Isle Royale" by wilderness author Jim DuFresne will highlight the chapter meeting. Copies of his books will be available for purchase and signing.

In 2011, Isle Royale in Lake Superior celebrated its 80th anniversary of being designated a National Park by the U.S. Congress. Join Jim DuFresne, author of numerous popular outdoor wilderness guidebooks, including the recently released fourth edition of Isle Royale National Park Foot Trails and Water Routes, as he shares the beauty and adventure of this island park.

DuFresne first explored Isle Royale when he was nine years old and has more than five decades of experience on the island. His new presentation focuses on the intriguing history of the country's first island national park and the most popular ways people explore the back country of this roadless wilderness.

An avid hiker who has trekked around the world, DuFresne has written more than 20 guidebooks, including titles for Alaska and New Zealand. His Michigan titles include 50 Hikes in Michigan, 12 Classic Trout Streams in Michigan, Porcupine Mountains Wilderness State Park as well as Backpacking in Michigan. DuFresne is also the main contributor at MichiganTrailMaps.com.

The North Country National Scenic Trail is a link of the National Park Service and is the longest National Scenic Trail established by the U.S. Congress, spanning 4,600 miles and seven states from New York to North Dakota. Michigan has the most North Country Trail miles, more than 1,150. The North Country Trail Association, headquartered in Lowell, is a volunteer organization which helps build, promote, and protect the North Country Trail. The Jordan Valley 45 degree Chapter maintains the trail between Mancelona and Harbor Springs.

American Red Cross announces upcoming blood drives

LANSING — The American Red Cross encourages eligible donors to help their communities prepare for emergencies by giving blood during National Preparedness Month this September.

Becoming a regular blood donor is one way to help ensure communities are prepared for any emergency, including those where blood transfusions are needed. The Red Cross also encourages the public to get prepared by making a disaster plan for their homes or work places.

A sufficient blood supply is central to ensuring hospitals are prepared to meet patient needs in times of disaster, including the very personal ones that can happen any day. Because blood takes about 48 hours to be tested, processed and made available for patients, it's the blood already on the shelves that can help save the day when emergencies occur.

Every two seconds someone in the U.S. needs blood, and volunteer donors are the only source of blood for patients needing transfusions. The Red Cross needs blood donors of all types — especially those with types AB, O negative, B negative and A negative — to give blood regularly.

To make an appointment to give blood, download the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). For information on planning for emergencies and preparedness training, visit redcross.org/prepare.

Upcoming blood donation opportunities:

Boyne City: From noon to 5:45 p.m. Sept. 16, at the Eagles Lodge FOE 1583, 106 River St.

Petoskey: From noon to 5:45 p.m. Sept. 21, at American Red Cross Petoskey, 2350 Mitchell Park Drive.

Petoskey: from 10 a.m. - 3:45 p.m. Sept. 23, at Odawa Casino Resort, 1760 Leans Road.

To donate, simply call (800) RED CROSS (800) 733-2767 or visit redcrossblood.org to make an appointment. All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver's license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years of age — 16 with parental consent in some states — weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements.

open his own skydiving business, which begins the list of accomplishments that seem to stretch to the sky, where Kurtz is the most comfortable.

Kurtz, 37, is the owner of Skydive Harbor Springs — plus nine other locations including Charlevoix, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Diego, Phoenix, Miami, Fort Myers, Atlanta and Washington D.C. He holds a commercial pilot's license and has completed more than 9,000 parachute jumps. He also holds a world record — with his sister, Angela Bishop — for most tandem jumps in 24 hours. He serves on Charlevoix City Council as a Ward 1 representative. He and his wife, Mary, own the Charlevoix Cinema III and he is a partner with friend Brian Noiro with a 22-unit apartment building — Hillcrest Club — as well as owner of the building that is leased to the owners of the East Park Tavern.

"I always knew if he could just find his niche, he would be amazing," said friend Jan Boss.

Boss was a church youth director and Sunday school teacher when she met Kurtz, who was a fifth-grade student, when he moved to Charlevoix to live with his father, John. As a youth, Kurtz struggled to fit in and sometimes his actions would take him in the wrong direction, Boss said.

"I used to tell him he was his own worst enemy," Boss said. "He had a lot of struggles through junior high and high school and hard time finding his passion."

Though Boss never stopped believing that one day, Kurtz would get it right and he did, she said.

"I remember telling his parents he is going to be great once he finds himself and he did," Boss said. "He is an amazing man."

Charlevoix High School Spanish teacher, Pete Scholten said, as a student and a member of the school ski team, Kurtz was one of those students who wasn't afraid to talk to anybody.

"He always had a real ambitious and enthusiastic personality," Scholten said.

Scholten said when his Spanish students took a trip to Spain Kurtz was eager to use his Spanish and believes Kurtz's enthusiasm is contagious and an attribute to his success.

"That kind of not afraid personality has done well with him in life," Scholten said. "He was never afraid and not afraid to go for it. He was competitive ski racer and I enjoyed having him for two years in school and we have remained in touch over the years."

"We are friends today. It's great to have him in Charlevoix," Scholten added. "Him and Mary are big supporters of the ski team and a big supporter of the area soccer programs. It is wonderful that he shows the World Cup games at the cinema and this year he showed the women's World Cup."

Kurtz and Mary also volunteer serving at the twice-a-week free breakfast at the Community Reformed Church. Kurtz also is part of the Top of Michigan Trails Council and because he isn't quite busy enough, Kurtz has spent the last five years attending Cooley Law School.

"It was a long process, but I completed my final exams in August," Kurtz said. "I will have to complete a semester working with an attorney to finish my degree requirements, but at least the class work portion is done."

Looking back to his high school graduation Kurtz never imagined his life to be what it is today.

"You just don't know where life will take you," Kurtz said.

Kurtz's focus as a teenager in high school was less academic and more party, which was getting him nowhere, he said. When he was 21 he quit drinking after meeting some people who helped him realize you need to put in the work, do the next steps, and do not worry about the result.

"When you focus on the result, you spend too much energy trying to make that result happen," Kurtz said. "Focus on the present and turn the result over to God. Don't stress on what you can't control. Let go and let God handle the uncontrollable. The only thing I have control over is my actions."

Being committed to Charlevoix extends beyond skydiving and volunteering. One of the most difficult roles Kurtz has is his most recent position as a member of city council.

"It's a tough job to be on city council because there are a lot of passionate people in Charlevoix," Kurtz said. "You are trying to do what is best for Charlevoix, but sometimes people get so mad. Sometimes your friends get mad at you for doing something against their interest. I try to listen to all sides of the issue before making a decision. It really helps when you have all the information."

Before a difficult vote or issue comes to the agenda, Kurtz is out talking to the people. He wants to make sure all of his constituents voices are heard even if he doesn't agree.

"Even if I disagree with someone I try to reach out to that person and listen to what they have to say," Kurtz said. "It's important because they may bring up a point I may have never considered."

Like any good leader, Kurtz does not count his success on his own. He owes much of it to the people he employs, the partnerships, family and faith. Without those relationships he believes his life would be chaotic.

"I don't have it all together, just ask Mary," Kurtz said laughing. "My faith helps tremendously. I do have a belief that things will be OK. I also run to clear my mind and relieve stress."

When things seem tough and the road ahead changes things, you may have to modify your path to reach your goals, but don't give up and always remember to "believe in yourself," Kurtz said.

are there, but we are near the area of Southeast Asia and I'm very excited about the possibility of going there on a mission."

Her father, Dan Drost, said her plans after high school were always her own and he always encourages her to do what she believes is best for her life.

"Basically it is her job to find out what God has planned for her life," Drost said. "I always will have my plan for her life and I'm sure her mother has a plan for her life, but I always told her, it is your job to go to a quiet place and hear from God to find out what his plan is for your life."

Drost said he never wanted to be that parent that to discourage his daughter from making a decision that was right for her life.

"I think kids really want to please their parents and I never want it to be something I said or did that would affect her decision making process on what is right for her," he said. "She is really smart and a bright young woman and college is a great idea, but there is also is millions of kids with a college education that have no job in the field they studied for. I didn't discourage college. I just wanted her to make sure she was doing what was right for her."

Making that decision did not come easy. For most her senior year in high school Parker-Drost was not sure what she wanted to do after graduation. In fact, when she was asked from adults what she planned to do after high school, the mere thought overwhelmed her.

"That is a very overwhelming question for a 17 year old and I had no idea what I wanted to do," Parker-Drost said. "I sort of felt ashamed because everybody else had a plan, I really didn't know what I wanted to do. I have tons of passions. I just could not decide what direction I wanted to go — what college and what major I should choose. It was so overwhelming."

She said it all came down to prayer and trusting Jesus, but that was not always the case. Parker-Drost is part of the the Infinity youth group worship band at Family of Faith in Charlevoix. She had always been involved in youth group, but her heart wasn't fully into it until she entered high school and became more committed to her walk with Christ.

"In the beginning it was just fun and games, it was something I would do to hang out with my friends, but later in high school it became more serious to me and I became more dedicated," Parker-Drost said. "I really saw my need for God and my need to be more involved."

That involvement lead her to more prayer and a longing for missions and a longing to be out there and help people. She began to search for mission work on the Internet. She found YWAM and became interested after reading its motto "Knowing God and making him Known." YWAM has 180 locations all over the world and at first she was considering staying close to home.

"I was looking at a base in Wisconsin because its close proximity to Michigan," she said. "I wanted to be close to home, but it didn't feel right to me. There are bases all the world and I am going to choose Wisconsin. That's crazy. I want to see the world."

"I looked more closely and found this base in Australia and the reason I liked this base was because it was called the discovery," she added. "Their logo is discovering God, discovering yourself and discovering a nation. When I heard that it set so well with my spirit because that is what I was craving. I want to discover God. I want to discover what his plan for me is. I knew immediately that this is the one."

She got accepted to the program a few months before she graduated and when everyone was decorating their caps with their college logos she put a little kangaroo symbol on her cap.

"When I was asked what that was for, I said 'I am going to Australia,'" she said.

The costs for her to go is about $9,500. She has spent the summer working as a camp counselor at Mount McSaba to save money for the trip. She held a car wash, sent out support letters and spoke at area churches about her plans.

"This is not a skip year and not six months of fun to sit on the beach," Parker-Drost said. "My heart is in this and I am trusting God will provide a way."

She has raised $2,500 to attend the discipleship training. To help further with the costs there will be a fundraiser from 6-10 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26, at the Charlevoix Elks Lodge, which will feature a silent auction, live entertainment and a taco bar.

The fundraiser is open to the public and it is a donation at the door to get in, she said.

"The Elks have been very helpful with us planning this fundraiser," Dan said. "People's hearts in our community are very impressive. The community support is great."

the agenda. The city has procedures to follow."

Campbell came under fire from audience member Mark Snyder for not allowing him to comment after a debate raged between Tap Room owners and neighbor Thomas Gaudoni about the city's noise ordinance.

After the meeting

Snyder said, he believes Campbell needs to be consistent with following Robert's Rules of Order when conducting the meeting or at least let everyone speak.

Campbell said he apologized to Snyder for ending public comment.

"I know it is frustrating to have your hand up and not be able to speak, but I cannot have a debate during public comment," Campbell said.

Campbell also said the Tap Room claims of harassment are getting old.

"This city is working with them and their neighbor about the noise problem," Campbell said. "I don't see why they can't be neighborly. If the (Tap Room) owners' approach is to work with people, as they claim, then why don't they reach out to their neighbors and come up with a solution reasonable for everyone."

Parr said during the council meeting they could not reach a solution because they have done nothing wrong.

"There have been no ordinance violations," Parr said. "Not one citation has been issued."

Parr's comments caused Gaudoni and others to get up and respond to his claims, which in return led to a long debate.

"We went for 40 minutes and that was enough," Campbell said. "What do they expect council to do? We can't take action during public comment."

"Public Comment" is section at the end of the meeting that allows the public to talk about anything, usually with a time limit, each person gets one comment, and the board may question them, but no further action, debate or discussion is allowed, according to

Robert's Rules of Order.

Campbell said he likes to let people get back up and discuss an issue, but to be fair to everyone, everyone will only be allowed to speak for no more than three minutes and they shall only be allowed to speak one time, so everyone who wants to comment can.

"Each person will get their three minutes, sit down and that's it," Campbell said.

BookTalkers to discuss Steinbeck's 'The Winter of Our Discontent'

CHARLEVOIX — BookTalkers, the Charlevoix Public Library's book discussion group, is reading "The Winter of Our Discontent," and will host a discussion at 6 p.m., Oct. 19, in the Armstrong Conference Room.

In the book, Ethan Allen Hawley is an educated descendant of New England shipping captains. In years past, his family was one of the most important in town. But now times have changed and his father lost most of the family fortune and Ethan works as a clerk in the grocery store that his family once owned. With the decline in their status, his wife is restless and his teenage children are hungry for the tantalizing material comforts he cannot provide. Then one day, in a moment of moral crisis, Ethan decides to take a holiday from his own scrupulous standards. This novel was the last that John Steinbeck completed before his death.

"Just Mercy" by Bryan Stevenson will be the topic of the book discussion at 6 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 16. As a Harvard law student in an internship in Georgia, Bryan Stevenson visited death-row inmates and saw firsthand the injustices suffered by the poor and disadvantaged. The visit made such an impression on him that he started the Equal Justice Institute in Montgomery, Ala. In this book, Stevenson recounts his efforts to defend a man accused of a murder he swears he didn't commit and shares the stories of other men, women and children forced through an American criminal justice system that shows little mercy. It is a must-read for anyone interested in criminal justice, fans of true crime and those wondering why there is so much anger in our country.

BookTalkers is a group of readers who love to read different books that may challenge or delight. They gather monthly for lively discussions. Looking ahead, BookTalkers will discuss "The Thirteenth Tale" by Diane Setterfield on Dec. 21. The BookTalkers meet at 6 p.m. on the third Monday of each month. New members are always welcome.

For discussion questions, visit the book discussion page on the library's website charlevoixlibrary.org/books-movies-music/book-discussions.

The Jordan Valley 45 degree Chapter maintains the trail between Manceluna and Harbor Springs.

American Red Cross announces upcoming blood drives

Becoming a regular blood donor is one way to help ensure communities are prepared for any emergency, including those where blood transfusions are needed. The Red Cross also encourages the public to get prepared by making a disaster plan for their homes or work places.

A sufficient blood supply is central to ensuring hospitals are prepared to meet patient needs in times of disaster, including the very personal ones that can happen any day. Because blood takes about 48 hours to be tested, processed and made available for patients, it's the blood already on the shelves that can help save the day when emergencies occur.

Every two seconds someone in the U.S. needs blood, and volunteer donors are the only source of blood for patients needing transfusions. The Red Cross needs blood donors of all types — especially those with types AB, O negative, B negative and A negative — to give blood regularly.

To make an appointment to give blood, download the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). For information on planning for emergencies and preparedness training, visit redcross.org/prepare.

Upcoming blood donation opportunities:

Boyne City: From noon to 5:45 p.m. Sept. 16, at the Eagles Lodge FOE 1563, 106 River St.

Petoskey: From noon to 5:45 p.m. Sept. 21, at American Red Cross Petoskey, 2350 Mitchell Park Drive.

Petoskey: from 10 a.m. - 3:15 p.m. Sept. 23, at Odawa Casino Resort, 1760 Leans Road.

To donate, simply call (800) RED CROSS (800) 733-2767 or visit redcrossblood.org to make an appointment. All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver's license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years of age — 16 with parental consent in some states — weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements.

open his own skydiving business, which begins the list of accomplishments that seem to stretch to the sky, where Kurtz is the most comfortable.

Kurtz, 37, is the owner of Skydive Harbor Springs — plus nine other locations including Charlevoix, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Diego, Phoenix, Miami, Fort Myers, Atlanta and Washington D.C. He holds a commercial pilot's license and has completed more than 9,000 parachute jumps. He also holds a world record — with his sister, Angela Bishop — for most tandem jumps in 24 hours. He serves on Charlevoix City Council as a Ward 1 representative. He and his wife, Mary, own the Charlevoix Cinema III and he is a partner with friend Brian Noirot with a 22-unit apartment building — Hillcrest Club — as well as owner of the building that is leased to the owners of the East Park Tavern.

"I always knew if he could just find his niche, he would be amazing," said friend Jan Boss.

Boss was a church youth director and Sunday school teacher when she met Kurtz, who was a fifth-grade student, when he moved to Charlevoix to live with his father, John. As a youth, Kurtz struggled to fit in and sometimes his actions would take him in the wrong direction, Boss said.

"I used to tell him he was his own worst enemy," Boss said. "He had a lot of struggles through junior high and high school and hard time finding his passion."

Though Boss never stopped believing that one day, Kurtz would get it right and he did, she said.

"I remember telling his parents he is going to be great once he finds himself and he did," Boss said. "He is an amazing man."

Charlevoix High School Spanish teacher, Pete Scholten said, as a student and a member of the school ski team, Kurtz was one of those students who wasn't afraid to talk to anybody.

"He always had a real ambitious and enthusiastic personality," Scholten said.

Scholten said when his Spanish students took a trip to Spain Kurtz was eager to use his Spanish and believes Kurtz's enthusiasm is contagious and an attribute to his success.

"That kind of not afraid personality has done well with him in life," Scholten said. "I was never afraid and not afraid to go for it. He was competitive ski racer and I enjoyed having him for two years in school and we have remained in touch over the years."

"We are friends today. It's great to have him in Charlevoix," Scholten added. "Him and Mary are big supporters of the ski team and a big supporter of the area soccer programs. It is wonderful that he shows the World Cup games at the cinema and this year he showed the women's World Cup."

Kurtz and Mary also volunteer serving at the twice-a-week free breakfast at the Community Reformed Church. Kurtz also is part of the Top of Michigan Trails Council and because he isn't quite busy enough, Kurtz has spent the last five years attending Cooley Law School.

"It was a long process, but I completed my final exams in August," Kurtz said. "I will have to complete a semester working with an attorney to finish my degree requirements, but at least the class work portion is done."

Looking back to his high school graduation Kurtz never imagined his life to be what it is today.

"You just don't know where life will take you," Kurtz said.

Kurtz's focus as a teenager in high school was less academic and more party, which was getting him nowhere, he said. When he was 21 he quit drinking after meeting some people who helped him realize you need to put in the work, do the next steps, and do not worry about the result.

"When you focus on the result, you spend too much energy trying to make that result happen," Kurtz said. "Focus on the present and turn the result over to God. Don't stress on what you can't control. Let go and let God handle the uncontrollable. The only thing I have control over is my actions."

Being committed to Charlevoix extends beyond skydiving and volunteering. One of the most difficult roles Kurtz has is his most recent position as a member of city council.

"It's a tough job to be on city council because there are a lot of passionate people in Charlevoix," Kurtz said. "You are trying to do what is best for Charlevoix, but sometimes people get so mad. Sometimes your friends get mad at you for doing something against their interest. I try to listen to all sides of the issue before making a decision. It really helps when you have all the information."

Before a difficult vote or issue comes to the agenda, Kurtz is out talking to the people. He wants to make sure all of his constituents' voices are heard even if he doesn't agree.

"Even if I disagree with someone I try to reach out to that person and listen to what they have to say," Kurtz said. "It's important because they may bring up a point I may have never considered."

Like any good leader, Kurtz does not count his success on his own. He owes much of it to the people he employs, the partnerships, family and faith. Without those relationships he believes his life would be chaotic.

"I don't have it all together, just ask Mary," Kurtz said laughing. "My faith helps tremendously. I do have a belief that things will be OK. I also run to clear my mind and relieve stress."

When things seem tough and the road ahead changes things, you may have to modify your path to reach your goals, but don't give up and always remember to "believe in yourself," Kurtz said.

are there, but we are near the area of Southeast Asia and I'm very excited about the possibility of going there on a mission."

Her father, Dan Drost, said her plans after high school were always her own and he always encourages her to do what she believes is best for her life.

"Basically it is her job to find out what God has planned for her life," Drost said. "I always will have my plan for her life and I'm sure her mother has a plan for her life, but I always told her, it is your job to go to a quiet place and hear from God to find out what his plan is for your life."

Drost said he never wanted to be that parent that to discourage his daughter from making a decision that was right for her life.

"I think kids really want to please their parents and I never want it to be something I said or did that would affect her decision making process on what is right for her," he said. "She is really smart and a bright young woman and college is a great idea, but there is also millions of kids with a college education that have no job in the field they studied for. I didn't discourage college. I just wanted her to make sure she was doing what was right for her."

Making that decision did not come easy. For most her senior year in high school Parker-Drost was not sure what she wanted to do after graduation. In fact, when she was asked from adults what she planned to do after high school, the mere thought overwhelmed her.

"That is a very overwhelming question for a 17 year old and I had no idea what I wanted to do," Parker-Drost said. "I sort of felt ashamed because everybody else had a plan, I really didn't know what I wanted to do. I have tons of passions. I just could not decide what direction I wanted to go — what college and what major I should choose. It was so overwhelming."

She said it all came down to prayer and trusting Jesus, but that was not always the case. Parker-Drost is part of the the Infinity youth group worship band at Family of Faith in Charlevoix. She had always been involved in youth group, but her heart wasn't fully into it until she entered high school and became more committed to her walk with Christ.

"In the beginning it was just fun and games, it was something I would do to hang out with my friends, but later in high school it became more serious to me and I became more dedicated," Parker-Drost said. "I really saw my need for God and my need to be more involved."

That involvement led her to more prayer and a longing for missions and a longing to be out there and help people. She began to search for mission work on the Internet. She found YWAM and became interested after reading its motto "Knowing God and making him Known." YWAM has 180 locations all over the world and at first she was considering staying close to home.

"I was looking at a base in Wisconsin because its close proximity to Michigan," she said. "I wanted to be close to home, but it didn't feel right to me. There are bases all the world and I am going to choose Wisconsin. That's crazy. I want to see the world."

"I looked more closely and found this base in Australia and the reason I liked this base was because it was called the discovery," she added. "Their logo is discovering God, discovering yourself and discovering a nation. When I heard that it set so well with my spirit because that is what I was craving. I want to discover God, I want to discover what his plan for me is. I knew immediately that this is the one."

She got accepted to the program a few months before she graduated and when everyone was decorating their caps with their college logos she put a little kangaroo symbol on her cap.

"When I was asked what that was for, I said 'I am going to Australia,'" she said.

The costs for her to go is about $9,500. She has spent the summer working as a camp counselor at Mount McSaba to save money for the trip. She held a car wash, sent out support letters and spoke at area churches about her plans.

"This is not a skip year and not six months of fun to sit on the beach," Parker-Drost said. "My heart is in this and I am trusting God will provide a way."

She has raised $2,500 to attend the discipleship training. To help further with the costs there will be a fundraiser from 6-10 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26, at the Charlevoix Elks lodge, which will feature a silent auction, live entertainment and a taco bar.

The fundraiser is open to the public and it is a donation at the door to get in, she said.

"The Elks have been very helpful with us planning this fundraiser, Dan said. "People's hearts in our community are very impressive. The community support is great."

the agenda. The city has procedures to follow."

Cambell came under fire from audience member Mark Snyder for not allowing him to comment after a debate raged between Tap Room owners and neighbor Thomas Gauldoni about the city's noise ordinance.

After the meeting

Snyder said, he believes Campbell needs to be consistent with following Robert's Rules of Order when conducting the meeting or at least let everyone speak.

Cambell said he apologized to Snyder for ending public comment.

"I know it is frustrating to have your hand up and not be able to speak, but I cannot have a debate during public comment," Campbell said.

Campbell also said the Tap Room claims of harassment are getting old.

"This city is working with them and their neighbor about the noise problem," Campbell said. "I don't see why they can't be neighborly. If the (Tap Room) owners' approach is to work with people, as they claim, then why don't they reach out to their neighbors and come up with a solution reasonable for everyone."

Parr said during the council meeting they could not reach a solution because they have done nothing wrong.

"There have been no ordinance violations," Parr said. "Not one citation has been issued."

Parr's comments caused Gauldoni and others to get up and respond to his claims, which in return led to a long debate.

"We went for 40 minutes and that was enough," Campbell said. "What do they expect council to do? We can't take action during public comment."

"Public Comment" is section at the end of the meeting that allows the public to talk about anything, usually with a time limit, each person gets one comment, and the board may question them, but no further action, debate or discussion is allowed, according to

Robert's Rules of Order.

Cambell said he likes to let people get back up and discuss an issue, but to be fair to everyone, everyone will only be allowed to speak for no more than three minutes and they shall only be allowed to speak one time, so everyone who wants to comment can.

"Each person will get their three minutes, sit down and that's it," Cambell said.

BookTalkers to discuss Steinbeck's 'The Winter of Our Discontent'

CHARLEVOIX — BookTalkers, the Charlevoix Public Library's book discussion group, is reading "The Winter of Our Discontent," and will host a discussion at 6 p.m., Oct. 19, in the Armstrong Conference Room.

In the book, Ethan Allen Hawley is an educated descendant of New England shipping captains. In years past, his family was one of the most important in town. But now times have changed and his father lost most of the family fortune and Ethan works as a clerk in the grocery store that his family once owned. With the decline in their status, his wife is restless and his teenage children are hungry for the tantalizing material comforts he cannot provide. Then one day, in a moment of moral crisis, Ethan decides to take a holiday from his own scrupulous standards. This novel was the last that John Steinbeck completed before his death.

"Just Mercy" by Bryan Stevenson will be the topic of the book discussion at 6 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 16. As a Harvard law student in an internship in Georgia, Bryan Stevenson visited death-row inmates and saw firsthand the injustices suffered by the poor and disadvantaged. The visit made such an impression on him that he started the Equal Justice Institute in Montgomery, Ala. In this book, Stevenson recounts his efforts to defend a man accused of a murder he swears he didn't commit and shares the stories of other men, women and children forced through an American criminal justice system that shows little mercy. It is a must-read for anyone interested in criminal justice, fans of true crime and those wondering why there is so much anger in our country.

BookTalkers is a group of readers who love to read different books that may challenge or delight. They gather monthly for lively discussions. Looking ahead, BookTalkers will discuss "The Thirteenth Tale" by Diane Setterfield on Dec. 21. The BookTalkers meet at 6 p.m. on the third Monday of each month. New members are always welcome.

For discussion questions, visit the book discussion page on the library's website charlevoixlibrary.org/books-movies-music/book-discussions.

Earl and Irene Young on their 50th wedding anniversary, September 21, 1965, in the same canoe he used to court Irene in.

Historical society celebrates 100 year wedding anniversary of Earl Young and Irene Harsha

On Sep. 21, 1915, Charlevoix insurance agent and realtor Earl Young married his high school sweetheart and across the street neighbor — 102 and 103 State St. respectively — Irene Harsha. They had been senior year editor and co-editor of the High School Hustler student newspaper and Earl joked that he married Irene to keep her on the staff. One of their favorite courting places was Old River off Round Lake below the Chicago Club where they spent many a day canoeing and planning their future.

An accomplished artist and art teacher in her own right, Irene became the unsung partner in the design of many of Earl's famous creations in stone, in an era when women were expected to take an unacknowledged back seat to the creations of men. She served as the liaison between Earl's spoken and sketched ideas, which she translated into more concrete lines on paper, and the construction crews so they would better understand what he'd be talking about when he later arrived on site.

The true worth of Irene's influence on and contributions to what has how become an integral part of Charlevoix's identity is a major theme of "The Wizard of Boulder Park," a new documentary on Earl Young that received its world premiere at Charlevoix's Cinema III on June 8. The final opportunity to see this film on the big screen, in surround sound, will take place at 4 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 21, celebrating the 100th anniversary of Earl and Irene's wedding. Tickets are $15 per person. Proceeds go toward support of the Charlevoix Historical Society, a co-producer of the film. They are available at the theater box office during operating hours. One hundred complimentary cupcakes from Creative Cupcakes will be waiting for the first 100 attendees. A short program on the Youngs by the Society's museum curator David L. Miles will follow the showing.

The DVD of "The Wizard of Boulder Park" is now available from noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, at the Historical Society's Museum at the Harsha House, 103 State St. The DVD cost is $20 plus tax.

Boss breaks out in Charlevoix's 47-12 win over Coleman

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 - jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

COLEMAN — Due to injuries, senior tailback Ben Boss has had a slow start to the season for the Charlevoix football team, but he made up for lost time in a big way in Saturday's 47-12 road win over Coleman.

Boss accounted for five touchdowns, including two rushing scores of 52 and 3 yards, two pass receptions for touchdowns of 65 and 51 yards, and an interception return for a touchdown to help the Rayders overcome a slow start and improve to 2-1 on the year.

Boss also led the Rayders in rushing with 65 yards on five carries, and finished with 144 yards on four catches as well.

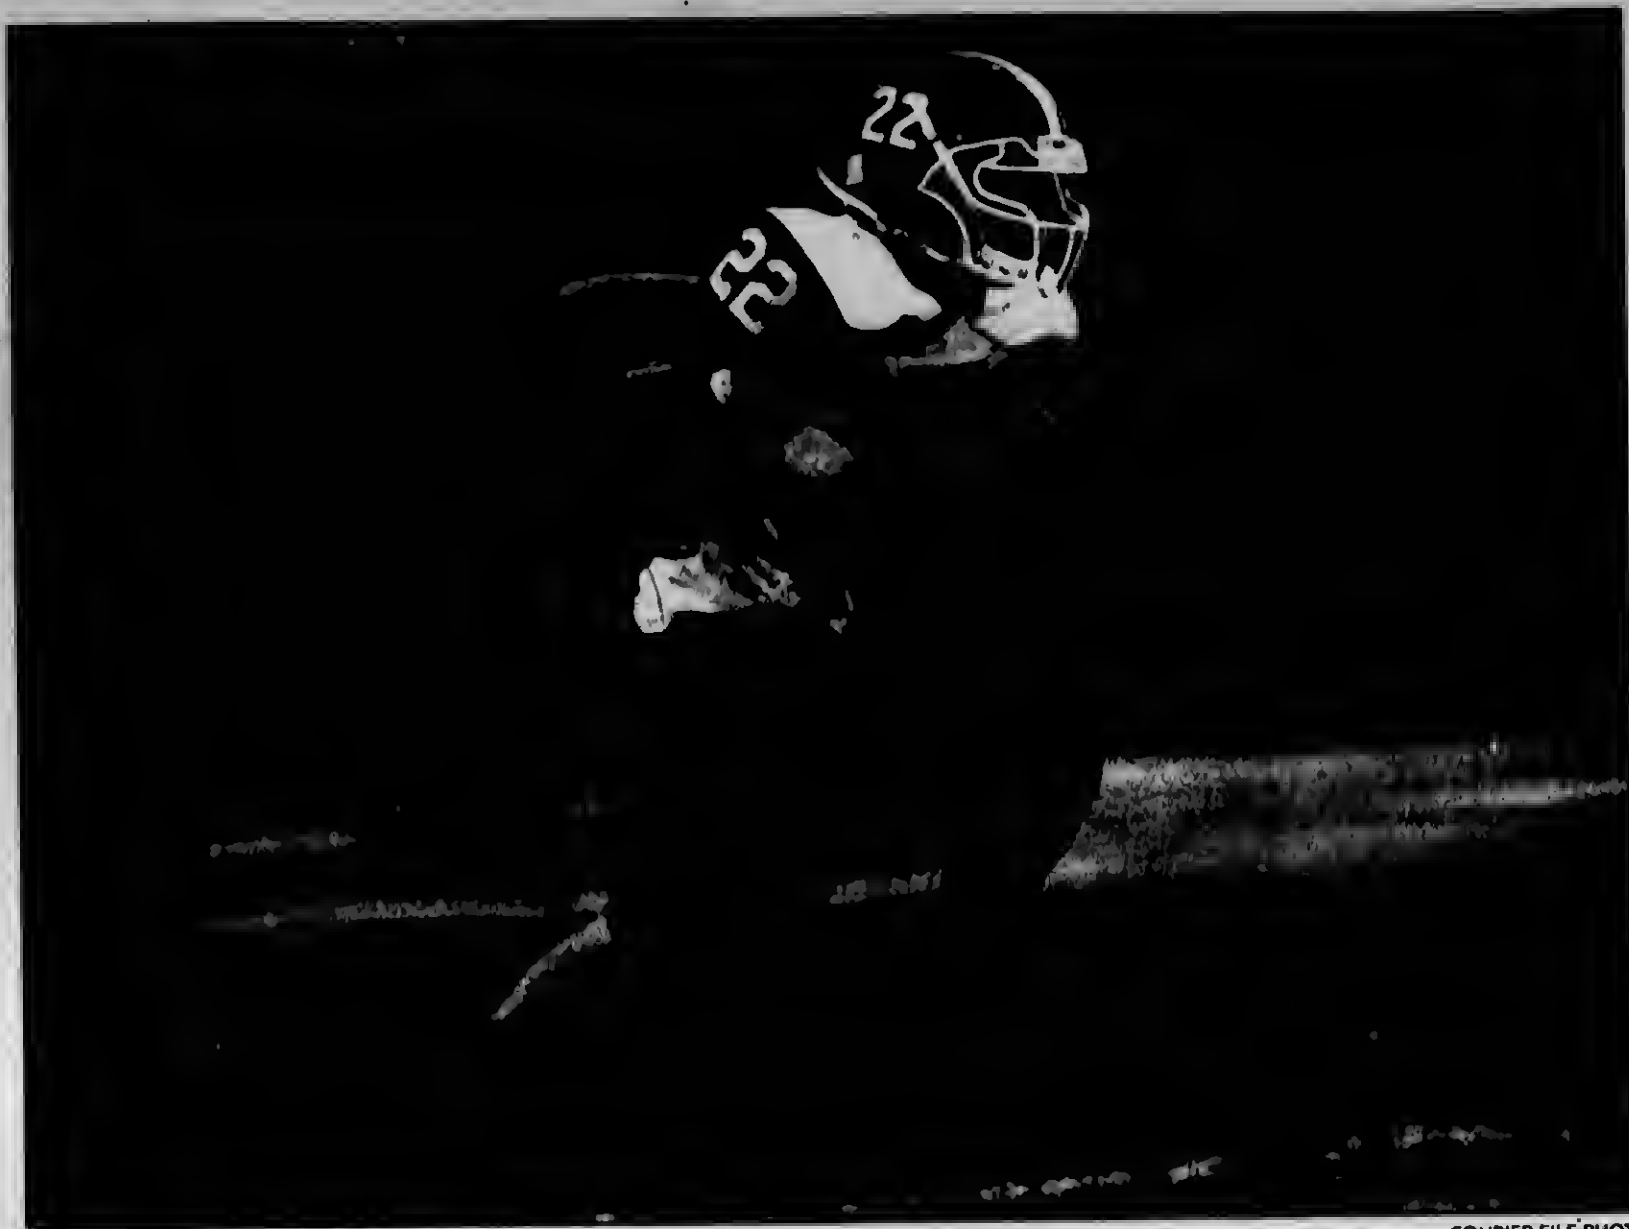

Charlevoix quarterback Forrest Nôiro finished 3 for 5 with 85 yards and two passing touchdowns, and added a 61-yard touchdown run on the ground as well.

One of those touchdown passes was to Brad Klinger, who finished with two catches for 20 yards, added six rushes for 44 yards and also spent time at quarterback, going 3 for 5 for 79 yards and a passing touchdown of his own.

Jordan Adkins led a Rayder defense that held Coleman to 185 total yards with two sacks, two

Charlevoix bounces back from loss with tourney win, victory over Elk Rapids

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 - jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — In a close soccer match, sometimes all it takes is a few moments of brilliance to make the difference between winning and losing.

That was the case for the Charlevoix boys soccer team in a crucial and physical home match clash with Elk Rapids on Tuesday, as two crucial plays gave the Rayders a decided edge in a 2-1 victory.

The first came eight minutes into the match, when Charlevoix defender Kevin Pearl got a free kick opportunity deep in the Rayders' own end after an Elk foul.

Pearl hit a high, arcing ball that traveled the length of the field and landed perfectly at the feet of Charlevoix midfielder Christian Matye, who had beaten an Elk Rapids defender into the box.

Matye finished the goal to the upper-left corner without giving the Elks goalkeeper a chance at a save to give the Rayders a 1-0 lead.

"It was just me playing the ball in there and seeing if someone up front could get a touch on it," Pearl said. "That's what a lot of our plays are (off of free kicks) and it's something we work on a lot."

An earlier miscue on a set-piece helped Matye find the timing to make a play on the ball, the junior said.

"(Pearl) hit a really good ball earlier than I just under-ran," Matye said. "(On the goal) I just tried to judge it better and make sure I finish it if I got the chance."

With a strong southern wind at their backs, the Rayders tried to press their advantage and got another big chance with 10 minutes to play in the first half when Josh Carlson drew a penalty in the box to set up a Charlevoix penalty kick.

Junior Nnah Carson stepped up and buried the penalty to give Charlevoix a 2-0 lead it wouldn't relinquish the rest of the way.

In the second half, Elk Rapids created several strong chances with the wind in their favor, including a Jake Sak goal off a Rayder miscommunication that cut the lead to 2-1 with 35 minutes to play.

Charlevoix's defense, however, refused to concede the equalizer and was able to keep the Elks from finding the net again in the second half.

The Elks played a physical style of game that made it difficult for Charlevoix to find an offensive rhythm, but in the end that may have worked against them, Charlevoix coach Anton Matye said.

"They're a very skilled, physical team, but that physicality created a lot of penalties that led to set pieces for us," Coach Matye said. "I felt like because of those set pieces, we were able to control the pace of the game and generate chances we might not have had otherwise."

"We were able to turn two of those chances into goals, and I think that really helped us in the end."

The victory is a crucial one for the Rayders, who split the conference title with the Elks last season.

After the shootout loss to Harbor Springs on Wednesday, Charlevoix needed a win to keep pace with the Rams in the conference standings.

Now, at 10-2 overall and 3-1 in the LMC, Charlevoix looks like it's bounced back well from that tough loss.

"We just want to come out every day and work harder than we did the day before, and to keep improving not just in terms of skill but also mentally," Matye said. "We're trying to get these guys ready for the rest of the season, because it's only going to get tougher from here, and they're responding well."

Charlevoix hosts Suttons Bay today, Friday, for its next match.

Rayders win
TC Christian Invite

TRAVERSE CITY — Penalty shootouts have been a thorn in the side of the Charlevoix soccer team this season, as the Rayders had lost both they'd been in heading into Saturday's Traverse City Christian Invite.

Despite their prior struggles, however, Charlevoix turned it around on Saturday, with a strong performance in the penalty shootout in the final against Marquette to lift the Rayders to their first tournament title of the season.

CHARLEVOIX — No one who competes in the annual Charlevoix Mud Run Invite sets their fastest time of the season. But that fact is beside the point, as the challenge of wading through pools of knee-deep, muddy water and jumping over obstacles like hay bales and logs on top of finishing the full 5K distance is a memorable challenge that keeps schools coming back to the unique and historic event year after year.

Of all the boys teams in the area, no one navigated those obstacles better than Harbor Springs, who turned in a top-notch performance to finish CHARLEVOIX — In high school golf, testing your team can be about more than playing top competition.

It also means playing tough courses and pushing your players to find a way to solve challenging layouts and tricky greens as a lesson for regional and state tournaments to come.

Charlevoix got just that kind of
